UN Council Extends Life of Force on Golan Heights

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The United Nations buffer force on the Golan Heights got a new lease on life today and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) was promised an appearance before UN Security Council as a result of an 11th-hour compromise.

By a vote the council adopted a resolution Sunday night renewing for six months the mandate of the 1,197-man UN Disengagement Observer Force which for 18 months has separated Syrians and Israeli troops on the golan heights.

The resolution said the council will meet again Jan. 12 for a debate on "the Middle East problem including the Palestinian question."

Jacob Malik of the Soviet Union, council president for November, then read out a compromise statement saying it was "the understanding of the majority" of the council that the PLO would be invited to participate in that debate.

The debate and the PLO participation were Syria's conditions for its agreement to extension of the mandate for the UN force. The mandate would have expired at midnight Sunday night.

Israeli Ambassador Chaim Herzog said he could not accept Malik's statement "as binding on Israel and Soviet dictates." He said the Israeli cabinet would meet today to discuss it.

Meanwhile, in the Middle East, Egypt was to regain control today of the rest of her oil production captured by Israel in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

The Israelis withdrew Sunday from the Abu Rudeis oil field on the southern coast of the Sinai peninsula, turning the 86 oil wells, the refinery and the pumping station over to UN troops and three Italian technicians. They were to hold the area for 24 hours.

Israel surrendered the smaller Ras Sudr oil field north of Abu Rudeis last month.

Israeli troops from Abu Rudeis pulled back about three miles to a mountain ridge overlooking the coastal oil settlements.

The technicians were from the Italian Agip Co., Egypt's partner in the operation of the Abu Rudeis wells in 1967.

The return of the oil fields was part of the second Israeli-Egyptian agreement negotiated by U.S. State Secretary henry Kissinger last August. Israel is returning a total of 1,800 square miles of Egyptian territory in the Sinai by February, while Egypt promised to refrain from threats of war and is allowing Israeli cargo on ships of other countries to pass through the Suez canal.

Since 1967, Israel has pumped more than 250 million barrels of oil—about 53 per cent of its needs—from the Sinai wells. Israel now is dependent on Iran, its supplier before 1967.

The U.S. promised Israel $350 million this year to compensate for lost oil revenues and also guaranteed that Israel would not be a victim of any future oil boycott.

An Israeli exploration unit is prospecting for oil around Yoram, south of Abu Rudeis in a part of the Sinai Israel still occupies.

Meanwhile, 1,500 Israelis marched into the occupied west bank territory seized from Jordan in the 1967 war and raised the Israeli flag over an abandoned railway station at Sabastiya, near Nablus.

The marchers are members of Gush Emunim, a right-wing movement that wants the government to establish settlements in the west bank and then annex the territory. Gush Emunim has made numerous attempts to settle squatters in the area, but the army always has evicted the demonstrators.

Busloads of troops were reported sent to Sabastiya, but there was no word of what action they might take. Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin told his cabinet there would be no change in the government's opposition to the establishment of Israeli settlements in the area.

Tentative Deal Reached

22,000 Posties Vote Tonight

OTTAWA (CP)—It could be the end of the week before the postal service is back in normal, but tonight could bring a marked change in the eventual make-up of the executive of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW).

The 22,000 union members vote tonight on whether to accept the tentative deal agreed to late Saturday in the 48th hour of Canada's longest postal tieup. The talks Saturday were the first since Nov. 6.

Although the union executive refuses to comment on the package agreed to with postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey Saturday, outside local executives have made it known that the national heads have asked the workers to reject the contract offer.

There already is a strong swell within the union to accept—an estimated 2,700 workers already are back at work—and rejection of the contract in turn down the proposed contract could directly affect who the members want on the national executive.

Asked directly if the national executive had any comment on reports it was asking for rejection, spokesman Paul Webster said late Sunday:

"There is no comment on the proposed package."

Union President Joe Davidson could not be reached Sunday.

In Toronto, Arnold Gould of the Ontario regional council said the national executive had sent a message to all locals asking that they not accept the contract.

Results of the vote won't be known until early Tuesday and if the workers go back, post office officials say it would take up to five days before the system is fully functional.

In the meantime, post office officials are advising the public to begin mailing letters in areas where postal boxes have been unsealed. Post office officials were expected to meet today to assess the situation.

One of the problems to be dealt with is mail destined for overseas. Christmas deadlines for overseas airmail range from Dec. 4 to Dec. 15. Virtually all surface mail deadlines for overseas, including Great Britain and Europe, have passed.

The deadline for Christmas cards going nationally and to the United States is Dec. 13. Local cards—mail to be mailed by Dec. 17.

Meanwhile, details of the tentative agreement to end the country's longest and most bitter postal strike, worked out during negotiations Saturday, remain unknown.

The union apparently backed away from its demands of a 31-per-cent wage increase over 27 months and a work week shortened to 35 hours and accepted the government offer.

Mr. Mackasey had maintained throughout the dispute that he would not improve on the government offer which was essentially the recommendation of a conciliation board report by Judge Jean Moisan of Quebec Superior Court before the strike began.

Secret Session Called

MADRID (AP) — The Council of the Realm, chief advisory body to King Juan Carlos, was called into secret session today to name a new president of the Cortes, the Spanish parliament. Newspapers speculated that the 18-man council might also consider replacing Premier Carlos Arias Navarro, but government sources discounted the reports.

Rowling Won't Resign

WELLINGTON (Reuter) — Former prime minister Wallace Rowling, whose Labor government was defeated in New Zealand's general election Saturday, said today he does not intend to resign the party leadership.

Cool Welcome for Ford

PEKING (AP) — President Ford got a restrained welcome to Peking today as he began a five-day visit he said is aimed at fostering mutual understanding between the Chinese and American peoples. First Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, high-ranking member of the government, was still active, led the welcoming party, and there was the usual playing of national anthems, military guard of honor and handshakes with diplomats and officials.

Try to Open Talks

TORONTO (CP) — The Metropolitan Toronto school board has sent a letter to negotiators for the city's 8,000 striking secondary school teachers in hopes of reaching a contract settlement, board chairman William Ross said Saturday. Mr. Ross said he was unable to divulge the contents of the letter until it had been answered by negotiators for the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation.

Opposition Group Forms

ROCKPORT, Ont. (CP) — The fear of expropriation has caused 700 residents and cottage owners on the St. Lawrence River to form an association in opposition of Mulleryown Landing National Park, a spokesman for the group said Thousand Islands Residents' Association, said the group was formed at a meeting Saturday. The federal government has plans to increase the Mulleryown park to 30 square miles from 1.6 square miles at a cost of $38 million.

Israelis Surrender Oil

ABU RUDEIS, Sinai Desert (AP) — Israel surrendered the last of its oil production Sunday morning, giving up the multi-billion-dollar Abu Rudeis oilfields for return to Egypt. The Israelis signed over the Gulf of Suez oil corridor — which they captured more than eight years ago — to Italian technicians and UN troops to hold for 24 hours.

National Executive Not Influencing Local Vote

By AL ZARAH
Staff Reporter

Canadian Union of Postal Workers local president Walter Yateman said today he has received no instructions from Ottawa to urge Belleville members to reject or accept a tentative contract offer worked out by the post office and the union national executive this weekend.

About 40 inside workers in the city will vote tonight on the offer at a meeting at the Wharf St. Bowladrome Club.

Mr. Yateman said he expects the complete details of the proposed contract sometime today when he receives a telegram from Ottawa.

Included in the Ottawa "bundle" Mr. Yateman, might be a national executive recommendation.

He said he will not know until he has read the tentative contract offer if he will personally ask his member to accept or reject it.

But members know how he feels, said Mr. Yateman. In the past, he has given full support to the national executive's criticism of the contract offered by the post office.

He lambasted both small businessmen and the national press in Canada for treating the CUPW unfairly.

"We went into contract negotiations and ended up taking on the whole world.

"We might have been thwarted by small businessmen and some newspaper editors who hit a little guy and looked good at the same," he said.

Some local member are likely to vote for contract acceptance, he said, but others are angry and upset.

The situation had looked forward to 10 years of peace in the post office once the contract was signed, Mr. Yateman said.

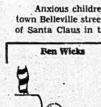
Then membership had been lifted, said Mr. Yateman, and a new militancy was developed.

It is unknown whether inside workers in Picton and Trenton, five of seven have returned to work will vote. Union officials could not be contacted for comment today.

In Trenton, local president Clarence Pickell said the union there has been notified by the national executive, and consequently cannot say whether to take a vote.

In Picton inside workers, who voted originally not to give the union executive the right to mediate, went back to work Nov. 10.

A spokesman for the national executive has still returning workers have been striken from union rolls.



"Henry? It's about your new list of undesirables for dismissal..."

Police Hold Terrorists

DUBLIN (AP) — Police were holding "the most wanted woman terrorist in Britain" and three other persons Sunday night in a town near the Northern Ireland border, officials said, following bomb explosions at Dublin airport that killed one and injured six others.

Dublin police said Margaret McKearney, 21, was detained Saturday night in the border town of Monaghan. Police there said they had detained two other women and two men under the Offences Against the State Act, which permits terrorists to be refused to release their names.

South African Forces Agree To Negotiate Black Demands

SALISBURY (AP) — Prime Minister Ian Smith and black nationalist leader Joshua Nkomo have signed a "declaration of intent" to negotiate a constitutional settlement of black demands for immediate majority rule in Rhodesia.

It provides for a government team and Nkomo's faction of the African National Council (ANC) to arrange a plenary meeting inside Rhodesia to begin detailed constitutional negotiations, but gives no date.

Smith told reporters after the signing ceremony today the plan is to hold another meeting next week to produce a final and official plan for the conference.

The declaration assures ANC negotiators of immunity from arrest or restriction and freedom to enter and leave Rhodesia, which unilaterally declared independence from Britain in 1965 to preserve dominance by 275,000 whites over 5.7 million blacks.

The agreement provides that when agreement has been reached on a constitutional settlement, a final constitutional conference will be held at a mutually agreed upon site outside Rhodesia to ratify the agreement.

A constitutional conference at Victoria Falls last Aug. 25 broke down over the immunity question and divisions between Nkomo and members of the ANC's militant faction, which believes Nkomo is not a strong enough advocate of immediate majority rule.

China, U.S. Pledge Better Relations

PEKING (AP) — Implicitly acknowledging their differences over detente with the Soviet Union, President Ford and Chinese Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping pledged today to continue working for better Chinese-American relations.

Canada's Coasts Being Raped Says MacDonald

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Canada's armed forces should be elevated in their former position to prevent the theft of resources from Canadian coastal waters by foreign powers, says Flora MacDonald, Kingston and the Islands MP.

Miss MacDonald, contender for the federal progressive Conservative leadership, visited Belleville Saturday for an informal discussion with Tory delegates and alternates who will represent their ridings at the leadership convention.

She said Canada currently has no substantial coastal surveillance. "Our coasts are being raped," she commented.

She explained Canada's coastal waters contain a future food supply for Canadians but that and other oceanic resources are being stolen by foreign countries who do not fear Canada due to the depletion of its armed forces.

Miss MacDonald said currently in the department of national defence, "the state of morale is so low, it's shocking."

She pointed out Canada once had a "crack force" in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) but now Canadian forces personnel have lost confidence due to lack of proper equipment.

Expert Says Fuel Firms Earn Windfall Profits

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian oil and natural gas industry has been handed a $10-billion windfall by the rising prices of the last three years, an oil and gas expert said Saturday at the founding convention of the Public Petroleum Association of Canada.

Bruce Willson, former president of Union Gas Co. and of Canada Resident Ltd., a prime construction contractor for the Syncrude plant being built to extract oil from the Alberta oil sands, said the money should go to build a sound future for Canada in oil and gas, rather than enriching the federal and Alberta governments and the oil companies.

He said the $10 billion comes from increases in well-head prices of oil on which the discovery costs basically had been paid at lower market costs. Oil that was found at a market price of $2.85 a barrel is worth $8 a barrel now and natural gas found when the price was .18 cents a thousand cubic feet now brings about 80 cents.

Clifford Jodrey, an economist who works for the Ontario ministry of treasury, economics and intergovernmental affairs, estimated the provinces, chiefly Alberta, have collected about $1 billion and Ottawa about $800 million in royalties.

Mr. Willson said increases to date are tiny compared with what the oil industry has asked for by the end of the century. If the industry gets what it wants, the annual cost of heating an average-size home in Ontario with natural gas would increase to $2,000 by 1985 from $300 in 1975, he said.

He said what little evidence is available to the public tends to discredit the case that higher well-head prices will spur exploration, adding that although prices have risen, exploration has slowed in the last three years.

John Helliwell, professor of economics at the University of British Columbia, said energy prices should be raised further and re-sources will be found to produce per unit than small users.

Mickey Rooney Visits Belleville During Weekend

Film star Mickey Rooney was in the Belleville area during the weekend visiting friends, investigating a possible land purchase and discussing business proposals.

He spent most of the weekend at the RR 1 Ameliasburg home of Wally Williamson, also known by his acting name of Julius Gallo.

Mr. Rooney took time out from his film shooting schedule in Toronto to visit Williamson, his wife Tammy and 2½ year old son Dorian.

He toured the bay area around Redoerschlle, said Mr. Williamson, with the hope of buying a piece of land.

"He loves the area," said Mr. Williamson who left the movie business about two years ago. He starred in a number of movies with Mr. Rooney and now works with a Montreal-based food chemical company.

On Sunday Mr. Rooney was at Belleville airport. It was planned that he would return to Toronto by plane but due to poor weather he had to go by car.

While at the airport he met for a short time with Jim Marker, Belleville airport manager and operator, and president of W. T. Hawkins Snack Foods of Belleville and Shirley Woodcock, company manager.

In Toronto today Mr. Rooney finishes filming of a comedy-kidnapping movie entitled Find That Girl. The Canadian-British co-production with a budget of $1 million also stars Keenan Wyn.

Discussing his busy schedule, Mr. Rooney said that, "there's a reasons for everything in life. We sleep because we are tired, we dance because we like to dance."

Later in the week he flies to Manitoba on business and for the next 12 weeks is to play performed in Chicago, Three Goats in a Blanket.

Mr. Williamson said he will be investigating land purchases for Mr. Rooney in his absence and that he will "soon" be returning to the area.

Youths Charged with Theft

Three Belleville area youths were to appear in provincial court here today for their first time on charges of break enter and theft.

Douglas Crosbie said today William Forbes, 17, of 42 Thorcliffe Dr. in Belleville and Gene Johnston, 18, of Corbyville are each charged with one count of break, enter and theft.

Chief Crosbie said David Hedger, 17, of 26 West College St. faces two charges of break, enter and theft.

He said police arrested three male youths at 2.30 a.m. Sunday at Holy Rosary Elemenary School on East College St., the scene of two break-ins and an attempted break-in last week.

Chief Crosbie said two tape recorders and a portable typewriter with a total value of $300 were recovered.

The two charges against Hedger include one laid in connection with a break-in at the school last Wednesday from which police have recovered $100 worth of tapes and earphones.

Belleville Visit

Film star Mickey Rooney was in Belleville Sunday afternoon visiting for the weekend with Wally Williamson, of RR 1 Ameliasburg. The two starred in a number of films together. Mr. Rooney returned to Toronto to finish shooting of a movie co-produced by Canadian and British companies.

Survey to Determine Need For Handicapped Home

TRENTON — A residential home care centre for the mentally handicapped may be a reality for Trenton by early spring if a local committee can establish a need for the unit to the satisfaction of the provincial government.

The Home Care Committee, formed under the auspices of the Trenton - Brighton and District Association for the Mentally Retarded, is conducting a detailed survey of the area to decide if a centre can be established. If it is approved, it will be either a residential home centre, with not more than 10 occupants, or an apartment care facility.

The group, under the direction of Marie Leveridge, project manager is funded by a LIP grant. Members will be visiting local families with handicapped members and area institutions to determine the need for such a facility.

Local doctors have also been contacted to solicit help in reaching handicapped people in need of a residence.

"This is a pilot project for the area, so we will also be surveying Picton, Napanee and Belleville because there are no residential homes between Cobourg and Kingston," said Mrs. Leveridge. "The ministry of community and social services is stressing "normalization" and we are trying to follow their lead and bring the handicapped back into the mainstream of society," she said.

Mrs. Leveredge said there are 200 known handicapped people in the area and possibly many others who might be in need of a residential home setting.

"There are people currently working at ARC Industries in Trenton, as well as many others in the community and from area institutions who need and would benefit from a home care arrangement," she said.

Mrs. Leveridge said the association is aware there is a need for such a centre but that before funding can be obtained such a facility has to be justified to the provincial government.

"Peterboro went ahead with such a centre on large scale but did not have all necessary residents signed up and consequently there is a low occupancy level," she said. "This has made the ministry careful and they are requiring surveys to show there is a need before they will allocate about 80 per cent of the cost for the unit," Mrs. Levridge said.

Ceremony Marks Renaming Of Wellington School

By TERRY SPRAGUE
Staff Reporter

WELLINGTON — A man who was a "guiding force," and a "gruesome educator" for 41 years at Wellington Consolidated School until his retirement in 1973, was honored Friday night here in ceremonies dedicating and naming the school, The C.M.L. Snider Elementary School.

The re-naming of the school came in response to queries to the Prince Edward County Board of Education for some commemoration of the late Mr. Snider's services. Among those making some of the earlier requests was Alec Tait, a student at the school in 1939 and now a teacher in Kitchener.

"I am always gripped with nostalgia whenever I see this whenever I see this building," commented Mr. Tait, in his reminiscence of his elementary school days when Mr. Snider was principal. Mr. Tait quipped, "It didn't take long for our little band of Grade One kids to learn who were the pants in the school. Those were the days of the five and ten—five in the principal's office and ten when you got home—when the three Rs were taught to the tune of the hickory stick without apology."

Mr. Snider, who was active in church affairs was remembered also by Rev. Alfred Poulter, a former pastor with the United Church in Wellington.

"Milton Snider gave the best years of his life to helping others," recalled Rev. Poulter. "He was a good Christian and a good churchman, he loved his work and was lavish in his use of his many talents."

The plaque commorating the naming of the school at the C.M.L. Snider Elementary School in honor of the 41 years of leadership and service of C.M.L. Snider, was unveiled by Mrs. Snider.

Also present for the ceremonies were K. Barnett, current principal of the C.M.L. Snider Elementary School; Robert Boyce, Reeve of Wellington, and Douglas Caley, chairmain of the Prince Edward Board of Education.

Musical interludes were performed by the school's senior band and senior choir under the direction of H. Trenner and Mrs. B. Minaker, respectively.

BRIGHTON — A single-vehicle accident on Highway 401 during a rainstorm Sunday afternoon sent three people to hospital and caused $2,500 damage.

Listed in satisfactory condition, today in Trenton Memorial Hospital is Mrs. Ruth Shishmanian, 56, of Toronto, a passenger in the automobile. Ashkhen Yartanin, 54, Scarboro, the driver of the car, and Evelyn Maltaryan, 30, Toronto, another passenger in the vehicle are both in satisfactory condition at Trenton Memorial Hospital. A fourth passenger was treated and released.

Police spokesman for the Brighton detachment of the OPP said the Yartanin vehicle was travelling eastbound on the 401 near Highway 30, when it failed to negotiate a curve. The vehicle, which was in the passing lane, slid off the road, onto the median and rolled several times before coming to rest on its roof, police said.

Four-car Mishap Sends Two to County Hospital

PICTON — Two people were injured early Saturday evening following a four-car accident on Main St. East here, near Division St.

Picton Police said a vehicle driven by 20-year-old Kim Willson of RR 8, Picton was eastbound on the street when it was collision with a parked car owned by Phyllis Byford of RR 4, Picton. The Willson vehicles then brushed another eastbound vehicle and rattled across the street colliding with a parked car on the westbound lane owned by Marjorie Greatrix of RR 2, Pictod.

Two passengers in the east bound vehicle, driven by 45-year-old David Andrew of Ottawa, Daisy Thomas, 65, and Irma Andrew, 43, were treated for minor injuries at Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital. Estimated damage in the mishap was $1,850.

Safety Council Endorses Defensive Driving Courses

Canada Safety Council (CSC) says prevention of traffic accidents is of paramount importance but mitigation and rehabilitation do require consideration. -

In proclaiming its sponsored Safe Driving Week from Dec. 1-7, CSC elaborates, "drivers are urged to consider before an accident, what could be done to avoid it, if it does happen how the effects could be mitigated and afterwards, what steps might yet be taken."

"All drivers can play a role in accident prevention in Canada by taking a defensive driving course in a convenient location and then applying the principles learned," CSC points out.

"They can keep their vehicles in sound mechanical condition and can also limit driving when below par-tired, upset or sick and especially by notdriving after drinking."

CSC advises, "if, after taking precautions and making allowances for the errors of others, an accident still happens, the effects can be reduced if the vehicle is equipped with known safety devices, doors are kept locked and available safety belts are used."

"Afterwards, assistance can still be rendered if first aid procedures are known and a first aid kit and emergency equipment such as flares kept available."

"These tips could make the difference between life and a gruesome death," CSC comments.

Marmora Arena Now Open

MARMORA — The Marmora Arena is in operation again following the completion of a $70,000 renovation program.

The plant is operating and everything looks good" Gordon Bennett, chairman of the Marmora Arena Committee, said recently.

"The committee has decided to go ahead with the installation of new lighting as soon as we can get the equipment" he added. Together with a new floor which will be put in next year, these two additional improvements will cost another $70,000 but this is offset by the recently announced Wintario grant of $41,300 on the arena project.

Don Logan has been picked to manage the arena this winter.

The arena committee has agreed the official re-opening of the arena should be held on Saturday, Dec. 20 in conjunction with a planned hockey game between the Ottawa and Marmora Oldtimers.

Members of parliament and local municipal officials will be invited to attend on the occasion.

Car Clips Hydro Pole

CONSECON — A 46-year-old Hillier man, Harvey Beaudrie, was treated for head injuries at Belleville General Hospital Saturday evening after the car he was driving left County Road 1, four miles east of here and hit a hydro pole. Picton OPP estimated total damage at $500.

He will arrive in time to take part in the Santa Claus parade that will get underway at 2 p.m.

The parade is being sponsored by the merchants of Marmora, with help from interested individuals, local unions and otherorganizations.

Driver Charged in Mishap

SHANNONVILLE — A 19-year-old Toronto man was charged with careless driving, three people were injured and a $2,000 damage estimate resulted from a one-car accident Sunday on County Rd. 7 (Shannonville Gravel Rd.) 1¼ miles north of Highway 401.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville said Sunday Danny Myers of 87 Fyster Ave. will appear in provincial court at Belleville Dec. 15.

Police said Myers suffered nose and back injuries and was treated and released from Belleville General Hospital (BGH). Two passengers were also injured.

Randy Woodcock, 17, of RR 1, Shannonville is listed in satisfactory condition at BGH with cerebral cut, left arm bruise and possible back injuries. He was thrown from the car, police said.

Ronald Larkin, 21, of 143 Wolfrey Ave. in Toronto was treated at BGH for a bruised left leg and chest and neck injuries. The injured were taken to BGH by Constable Tom Bergstrom, who investigating officer, in his cruiser.

Police said a 1973-model Chevrolet Nova was eastbound at 2 p.m. when it went out of control and careened into the west ditch. The mishap occurred during the light rain, police added.

A Realtor Shows How to Stay Afloat in the Game of Going It Alone

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

Even in this age of giant corporations, there is still room in business for the individual entrepreneur.

But you have to be a self-starter with plenty of confidence if you hope to make it on your own, says an Ottawa businessman who knows.

David R. M. Neish, a real-estate broker, offers this warning in an article published in the Canadian Real Estate Association Reporter:

"You will be working long hours, often alone, and there is no room in your mind for any doubts concerning either your ability or the economic future of your country.

"If you are the type of person who needs others around you to cuddle up to in time of crisis, then don't open a one-person real-estate office, as you are surely doomed to failure."

While Mr. Neish's experience is in real estate, the lessons he has learned could be applied to other businesses that can be operated by one person.

He feels strongly, for example, about the unproductivity of time spent on administrative chores.

His advice: Develop a hatred for paperwork. Save up what has to be done, and then take care of it on the last working morning of the month.

He keeps his operation lean and fast in other ways as well. No secretary. No more than one telephone line, supplemented with an answering service or recording device. Office supplies and equipment limited to typewriter, calculator, and good-quality engraved letterheads and business cards. No sophisticated equipment such as a photocopier.

Look for about 300 square feet of floor space in an office building of professionals, and don't rate it to reflect stability and permanence.

If a car is necessary (as in real estate), lease it or trade often to avoid costly repairs, and keep driving it to a minimum—especially rush hours.

If real estate is your choice for a one-person venture, Mr. Neish advises, learn to specialize in one field—and then communicate that specialty to the public as effectively as possible.

Since businesses pass through up-and-down cycles, he recommends diversification—but of a kind that enhances your chosen specialty.

As a specialist in residential real estate, he has diversified into the related fields of investment counselling and fee appraising—a service regularly used by lawyers who handle "estate" sales.

"Now, when the residential market slows down, I increase my activity in the other two roles to help stabilize my income," Mr. Neish says.

He recommends setting a realistic goal for net income from the main area of the business—residential sales in his case—then making a close estimate of operating expenses to determine the necessary gross income.

Taking into account the average commission he receives on each listing, and the success rate on the sale of listings, he has found that he must acquire one new listing every two weeks on average.

With that objective set, he finds it best to allot his working hours on a fixed schedule:

—Mornings, Monday to Friday, in the office working on listings and sales, keeping abreast of trade publications and studying for professional examinations. His clients thus know when and where to reach him.

—Afternoons, left open for showings, or taking a prized property or playing a weekly round of golf.

—Evenings and all day Saturday, out showing properties to prospective buyers.

—Sunday is reserved as a day of rest with the family.

Not everyone can go it alone in business. For those who have the knack, Mr. Neish feels, it is a satisfying career.

The Generation Gap

The problems of youth . . . and of parents.

It is impossible to separate the two, really, for the circumstances of our fast-paced world have served to accentuate the differences which are always present between the generations.

Interestingly enough though West Germany has a Youth Institute — a research centre for study of the problems of youth. It is headed by Walter Hornstein, who in turn is Professor of Youth at the University of Munich.

Prof. Hornstein discusses such problems in an article entitled "Withdrawal and Protest — Youth's Answers to the World," the article in the Jaycee magazine, PHP (Peace, Happiness, Prosperity).

He surveys the phenomenon of youth's revolt in our time and suggests a need to analyse the reasons for the estrangement between the generations and to search for ways of solving such conflicts.

Pictures tell some of the story of revolt, from the hippie movement in California in the sixties to the spectacle of British youngsters, aged perhaps 12 to 15, campaigning in London against compulsory uniforms, caning, detentions and "headmaster dictatorships."

Times are changing, indeed, when even the normally well-disciplined British kids become involved in activism.

Another straw in the wind, of social change in Britain was contained in a short item in this newspaper recently. From Wales, it referred to guard dogs used by school caretakers. Imagine that . . . are things really so bad in Britain?

The views of Toronto columnist Richard Needham on the subject of high schools and education here are quite well-known. In short, he thinks it is a bad scene, responsible for a variety of problems ranging from boredom, truancy and sloppiness to drug and alcohol abuse.

Mr. Needham tends to exaggerate such problems in the schools, although unquestionably it cannot be said either that they are non-existent. But consider also an observation by Toronto writer John Beaufoy on the subject of adult authority.

"Isn't it true that a child's perception of the outer limits of acceptable behavior," he writes, "is gained through the attitudes and examples set by the authorities — by the parents? And if this is true, then it brings up an interesting social question. Why isn't there some method of educating people to be better parents?"

Why not, indeed?

Comedy of Errors

A Corbyville reader writes with reference to our recent "Original Murder" editorial regarding the rejection of women who wear glasses as Olympic hostesses.

A paragraph in the editorial, expressing the hope unisex trends would not produce a surfeit of barrack room language, struck a humorous chord with our correspondent. However, in referring to what he calls "another language problem," he trips up — if in a manner which may have caught others too.

The obstacle was a placard a striking Metro teacher was pictured carrying. "We've got to have Hartt," the placard read, which is not a spelling error but a reference to provincial factfinder Stanley Hartt.

One up for the teachers, although understandably, the post-

Letter Writing and Mail Strike

By BARRY McCULLAGH
Staff Writer

Letter writing in our time is commonly portrayed as a lost art. Even more so today, given the difficulty many graduates seem to have expressing themselves.

Certainly a past that reflected more of romanticism than is found in our own utilitarian, and often banal, times, found expression in kind. Letter writing had such a place. Wasn't it Horace Herward Shaw for one who delivered himself of many a florid piece in writing to women friends Ellen Terry and Mrs. Patrick Campbell. There genius, who occupied themselves, by in addition to their professional writings.

They write the leaders in a literary style and in an era of good breeding and acquaintance with the arts that belonged to more cultivated times.

How many today have either the inclination, let alone the gift, to express themselves in this manner — in a romantic way as between men and women?

Would not even a spot feel more than a little embarrassed to write an effusive style? Besides, haven't the relatively few romantics that remain among us become somewhat unlicensed and increasingly equalized society — probably given up all hope of receiving such missives?

Is the menfolk receive anything of the kind from women, husbands from wives, boys from girls friends?

Or does anyone, of either sex, write letters filled with verses and prose penned by friends, perhaps with a dried leaf or petal attached to the page, or some such timeless gift of self from one to another, as tokens of friendship?

The mail strike of course has dealt a blow to whatever remains of this art of letter writing. Who knows what tidings, good or ill, concerning life or death, near or far, will be received once the mail starts to move again.

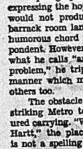
With Little Increase in Basic Vote, NDP May Have Peaked



By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

Ah, they are riding high. The NDP is so happy these days you want to get close to them as one of the bright lights.

And they are ever so pleasant and detached, in the foot-steps of their leader, Stephen Lewis is following a careful, cool course.

His immediate main objective is to knock down the cure of "socialism" which he knows will be thrown at him from every angle in the next election campaign.

And he is handling this admirably. He would get across to the people that "you have nothing to fear from us."

He laughingly confides to the press that his party is really only "pink" socialist. When there is discussion of a Davis meeting in New York with U.S. bankers he cheerfully asks "And what did they have to say about the NDP?" (The subject didn't come up).

Times are high indeed!

Underneath it all, of course, is a dream.

The NDP lighthouse finally is in sight.

Perhaps they really only trust to think the party in the dark security of their beds at night but NDP fighter will see themselves finally in power. And it is a luscious dream.

The problem is, on the realities but what are the prospects of it?

As a parlor said of kindhearted women of the night they are both good and bad.

Good in that the party now has a goal that it can suddenly look on as possible.

Over the years the NDP saver really has had no basic reason for power, perhaps not even in our time. It may have talked power, but it never had a belief in it. Its concrete goal has been to outdo the Liberals and become the official opposition.

But now it has had that sudden turn of fortune, a dramatic turn of the people to change the minds of men.

It has been there than hope it can actually see the beacon.

The means for this flame in the direction is clear and possible goal and a perhaps clear basis. And with this the Bellville direction can give a party—as well as a Conservative party—drive, optimism, the will to do and the will to win.

This is very-very important in the NDP. Its most important reward from the election.

Most important because on it could hinge the party's chances of actually forming a government after that election now some slip-of-the-lip, fancy-of-a-politician's mind-error.

On the statistics this possibility would not seem to be at hand.

The hard figures on the September vote on a cold look show the NDP as not unrealistic, fortunate to the point of being blessed by the gods.

It got a popular vote of 958,658. This was only 63,000 more than it got in 1971.

Yet it doubled its number of seats from 19 to 38.

You have to say that it got every seat possible to it, with a few that were impossible.

And it also probably got nearly every vote possible to the ballot.

It reached its success because the Conservative vote switched Liberal because the Liberals, highly concentrated in certain ridings, mainly in urban areas and the north, piled up votes down; meaning its vote packed unusual power.

On these logistics a hard assumption would be that the NDP has attained its horizon.

Its basic vote has not increased, and it is a party which has to make rely on its basic vote, it hasn't been able to look much to the swings. And it bears a stigma as a northern and city party (and only special areas of the cities, at that) with little support or room in the rest of the province.

It would seem to be playing a no-trump hand without aces.

But then is it perhaps really into a new deal?

Can it look out of the tight jacket of the cities and the north, out to the rest of Ont. to adding to its base vote but also how to grab some of the swings?

A new credibility will, or should, help it. There are some voters, probably many, even, who won't buy without a seal of approval.

But all-important could be the new direction.

The party's workers, its whole effort, should be imbued with a new drive. And it could be a drive that will take it to port, to that home in the east of power that only in rash moments it has even ventured to.

On this latter assignment it isn't probable. But it is possible.

BGH Nurses Are Praised

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

I recently spent a short time in Belleville General Hospital and I suppose this letter should be directed to the nurses and staff on 7th floor, However I assume all the nurses at BGH are of the same calibre. Having never really been confined to hospital, I was surprised at the duties these nurses have to perform and cope with.

Mr first day was spent with an 88-year-old very ill patient in a semi private room, who needed considerable attention. The nurses ranging in age from 19 up impressed me tremendously with their manner, proficiency, confidence and complete control of signs of panic in situations which most people would not be able to handle. Their calm efficient manner, especially with the elderly and poor reception, comfort and assurance of being looked after and watched, showed a great deal of character from young people who all seemed to possess an abundance of it.

In checking around I found out the in-training at Loyalist not only pay their tuition and buy their own books but also spend three days per week on job training without pay, and it was quite evident they possessed the same character traits as the graduates.

This certainly augurs well for the teaching at Loyalist and the further excellent education given by head nurses and classes at BGH.

I was also surprised at the number of nurses from outside the city such as Picton area, Brighton, Trenton, Stirling, Tweed and Roslin. These girls all seemed to have a rural or farm background, but unless asked they would compete in all ways with any woman from Toronto.

I am writing this letter not only in appreciation for the nurses on the 7th floor which I believe has the greatest concentration of ailments with the exception of maternity and intensive care.

Considering the only thing you hear about nurses is they are generally attractive and they go on strike for more money, you never hear of the Florence Nightingales who work shifts, disrupting their family and social life and the problems they face daily of all varieties.

My published opinion is that with the exception of most objectives, 90 per cent of men and women employed now would not accept the job of nurses in any order regardless of pay.

Many thanks again to BGH, especially the staff of the 7th floor and may the future be as bright for you as you make it for others.

Cars, Design, and Economy

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Reducing speed in an attempt to save lives is good, but I wish to address a number of questions and comments to the other side of the coin — saving energy.

If we really want to save energy why are all vehicles not designed with an overdrive gear in the transmission? At the same time why is all manual transmissions contain a fifth gear? Why are automatic transmissions have four gears instead of only two or three? By having four gears the ratio between gears can be closer and thus enabling a possible H.P. reduction.

Is it really necessary for a station wagon to weigh 4000 plus lbs. would 2500 lbs. be satisfactory?

Why are tires on most vehicles 15 inch in diameter or less? Would 16 or 17 inch tires look that bad or be that impractical? A larger tire would hamper jack rabbit starts but would be more economical in the long run.

Has it really been necessary for our government to follow behind the U.S. and demand that we have all pollution equipment — which has been created for the California area where they need decidedly different H.P. This is not to say that we may not need some of this equipment but let's wait till there is something to be as far as Ontario is concerned that bad?

In the past 5 - 6 years auto makers have been required to expend much time and research and development of pollution equipment and I suggest that this is too much money for clean air. Would these funds have been better spent on producing more aerodynamically — sound vehicles that will be developed to carry people and not just an engine with a few bodies around it for people. The production of a universal 6 cylinder V8 engine would also help.

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

I see that, in the subject of comment in Mr. Jack Ellis' monthly "Ring" from Ottawa. I am flattered!

Mr. Ellis quite rightly points out the tremendous growth with the opening of the Mirabel airport. He, however, fails to say that went on have little to do with the abilities of the present economic scene.

However, in Mr. Ellis suggesting that had his party been in power, they had the courage to build such an airport, would they have been given less estimations? Past experience with the "courageous" administrative party indicates they are not particularly known for it when it comes to dipping into the public till.

An excellent illustration is the dreadful deficit spending programs of the Davis administration. Every year they send bankrupt the province, and since "spending years" of the Diefenbaker government the Canadian public has shown a tendency to vote for the deficit in Tory hands. A perusal of that government's budgets does not make our sitting member blush. Still, all parties are agreed when it comes to living it up at public expenses; they raise their own salaries and tell us to tighten our belts.

With regard to our illustrious member's comments on former Mayor Jeffrey and the Lahr extravaganza, I must remember Mr. Ellis? You jumped in with both feet to help your Tory colleague, and he lost with the Tory fish.

Thousands Line Streets To Watch Santa Arrive

Thousands lined downtown Belleville streets Saturday to welcome Santa Claus.

Organizers of the annual Santa Claus parade said they were impressed at the number and all-town participation. The parade included about 140 entries.

Blanket-covered, teeth-chattering youngsters stood on crowded curbs holding mother's hands or sliding on dad's shoulders as floats, majorette groups and bands parade through downtown streets.

Belleville OPP won the Warpy O'Brien Trophy for most spectacular float. The Parade Marshal's Trophy for most deserving float went to Belleville Fish and Game Club Inc., float depicting an outdoor scene.

It took more than an hour for the parade with its entourage of bicycles, horses and clowns to pass any one point. Police worked steadily pushing crowds back to the sidewalks as spectators moved onto the street for a closer look.

Belleville OPP also won the award for the best public service float for their bush mission accenting community living showing how the police force fits in with community functions.

Murray Centennial Majorettes took the award for best majorette group while Kenta Public School with a Flintstones float took the award for best float by an elementary school.

Moira Secondary School won the post elementary school award with their Christmas in other Lands float.

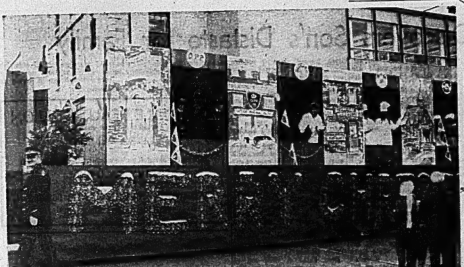
Stephens Adamson won the award for best industrial float with Mickey Mouse.

Best young people's group float award went to 608 Squadron Air Cadets with a glider.

The camel herders float by the Shriner's club won the award for best service club float.

Hastings county Milk Committee won the award for best out of town float and best equestrian group award went to Highlands of Hastings Pony Club. Ray Wilson won the award for best antique vehicle in the parade with his 1915 Ford Model T. touring car.

For those who missed the parade or slept in Saturday there's still another chance to see it. A Cablevue film crew was on hand to record the event. It will be shown today and tomorrow at 8 p.m. on Cablevue 4 and Dec. 17 and 18 at 7 p.m.



Thieves Foiled

BANCROFT — Ontario Provincial Police at Bancroft seek two men who twice attempted to rob a pensioner of his Canada Pension cheque early today six miles northwest of here.

Police said Thomas Arthur Rutlan, 66, of South Baptiste Rd. in Herschel Township was able to get his .22 calibre rifle on both occasions and put them off the property.

The men managed to get as far as inside Rutlan's front door both times at 4:15 a.m. and 8:40 a.m., before they were forced to retreat and escape by car, police outlined.

Tory Critical Of Civil Service

The federal civil service should be frozen and stripped of some powers because it is becoming too large, unwieldy and more powerful, says Flora MacDonald, Kingston and the Islands MP.

Miss MacDonald, contender for the federal Progressive Conservative leadership, visited Belleville Saturday for an informal discussion with Tory delegates and alternates who will represent Hastings riding at the leadership convention.

She said the civil service is responsible for funds flowing into Quebec and the capital budget of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation which do not go through the federal cabinet.

"I don't agree with these people making decisions," Miss MacDonald said of civil service administrators.

She suggested the problem could be alleviated by rotation of the 1972 station wagon and $1,000 damage to guard rail and a Cablevue line in the 7:25 p.m. mishap.

A hospital spokesman said today Bishop was treated for elbow and rib injuries while his wife, Iris Bishop, 42, was treated for forehead contusions.

Constable Dan Garlick estimated $2,000 damage to the 1972 station wagon and $1,000 damage to guard rail and a Cablevue line in the 7:25 p.m. mishap.

Long Float of the Law

The long arm of the law was portrayed in Belleville's Santa Claus parade Saturday with a long, award-winning float entered by Ontario Provincial Police. A familiar face to area school students on bottom left is Constable Don Kuzyk, community services officer for Belleville detachment. The float was most spectacular and best public service float prizes.

Flora MacDonald Says Capital Punishment Should Be Abolished

BY ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Flora MacDonald, Kingston and the Islands MP contender for the federal Progressive Conservative leadership, says some criminals "who are literally animals" should serve life sentences in prison without parole.

Miss MacDonald visited Belleville Saturday for an informal discussion with Tory delegates and alternates who will represent Hastings riding at the leadership convention.

She said capital punishment should be abolished — "I disagree with taking one life for another" — but added those convicted of premeditated murder or other murder should be incarcerated for the remainder of their lives.

Miss MacDonald charged parole boards are too eager to allow convicts out of prison and said there is little communication between the boards and prisons regarding rehabilitative progress of inmates.

"There are people, who I think, should never have been allowed out," the mother of past releases.

Miss MacDonald called for a reclassification of prison inmates. She explained it is currently detrimental to allow hardened criminals, such as murderers, to roam among the general prison population, free to influence those inmates incarcerated for less serious crimes.

Site said the answer to commutations of death sentences by the current federal government is to change the law once way or the other.

"I don't see where we're going to continue with this partial legislation," she commented.

Miss MacDonald predicted the federal government will introduce a total abolition bill but remarked if the bill does not pass the House of Commont, the current law should stand.

She pointed out Canada operates under the British system of justice and the "royal prerogative of mercy" must be maintained.

Miss MacDonald suggested criminals should be forced to work and repay society for their crimes. "Make them feel a sense of responsibility they don't feel now," she said.

She said she felt there should also be a tightening of discipline in penitentiaries.

Controls Confusing Many Says MacDonald

Long-term wage and price controls cannot be placed into effect without an initial, rigid, short freeze period in order to produce the mechanism for future controls, says Flora MacDonald, Kingston and the Islands MP.

Miss MacDonald, contender for the federal Progressive Conservative leadership, visited Belleville Saturday for an informal discussion with Tory delegates and alternates who will represent Hastings riding at the leadership convention.

Miss MacDonald suggested controls be rigidly applicable to all economic sectors for a short period to assuage people's fears that inflation is increasing.

She said Canadians are confused over current controls.

Ann Landers

Mother Discovers Son's Distaste for Family

Dear Ann Landers: I have been quiet around with a lump in my throat for two weeks. It's because of something I found in my son's room. No, I wasn't drugs, pornography or anything like that. It was a letter he had written for school. (He's a graduate student in psychology). I was dusting his desk and accidentally read enough so that I wanted to read more. I hate me sick. I went back later to copy the letter and that stunned me so I could send it to you.

This is what he wrote: "It stems largely from a feeling of distaste for the unique brand of arrogance and ignorance which I was subjected through out my childhood by various members of my mother and extended family and which is, perhaps, exemplified lucidly by the congregation members of the Christian faith who begin every other sentence with, 'I know.'"

His father would be amazed and heartbroken as I was if I showed this statement to him. I am speechless. We have not had as much education as our son, but we didn't realize we were "arrogant" or "ignorant." I can't believe he would write such a thing and sign his name to it.

Should I tell him I saw it and ask him to explain? Or should I try to forget and hope he didn't mean it? I'm in no condition to decide what is best and will take your advice.—Still Shocked

Dear S.S.S.: If you confront your son with what you saw it will put him on the defensive and nothing will be resolved—only more wounds inflicted.

Take my word for it, dear, when students write papers (especially psychology majors) they often dramatize, distort, and even fabricate, to illustrate a point.

Your son's extravagant and pretentious language leads me to believe that he wrote these words for effect and it didn't matter to him whether or not they reflected the real situation. Forget it.

Dear Ann Landers: After nearly 25 years of marriage I have learned from a reliable source that my wife had a child out of wedlock before she married me. It was a tremendous shock. She professed complete innocence, but frankly and candid ly I believe that the deliveryy procedure was extremely traumatic. When I think of her duplicity I become furious.

Please, Ann, tell me at once if I should confront her with what I know or is it none of my business? I have read often in your column that a woman need not tell her fiance "the names and numbers of all the players." You seem to think a man should judge a woman on the basis of the way she conducts herself during their relationship and that past indiscretions might not enter into the picture.

Please advise me. I'm— Deeply Distraught

Dear D.D.: A child out of wedlock is more than an "indiscretion." No woman should withhold information of this kind from the man she married.

By all means, tell your wife what you heard. There's a chance the story is not true. If it is true, 25 years of a deceptive solid marriage should outweigh an early mistake and your wife's foolishness in trying to defend herself.

If it is true, 25 years of a deceive you.

Retiring Parole Officer Supports Death Penalty

OTTAWA (CP) — Mary Lynch, who joined the National Parole Board at its birth in 1960, retired Thursday at 65 with a caution that this may not be the time to abolish the death penalty.

She said that in order to abolish hanging, the government might have to abolish other penalties for other prisoners. A "hot climate" of public opinion seemed to demand it.

"What I'm worried about is that in order to abolish one, though, they might require mandatory sentences of 20 or even 30 years," she said in an interview. "Some people say:

"Most of them go into prison in their early 20s. Fifty looks like the end of the road to them."

Miss Lynch suggested that, instead of trying to hang a couple of men now, reassure the public and leave some hope for killers who now must serve at least 10 years before they can get parole.

Miss Lynch, who has seen at close range killers in prison in the last 15 years, says she would have applied the death penalty to no more than three.

Omer Lavallee, political chemist Charles Lynch, she is a bright, hard-baking woman whose ancestral roots go back more than a century in Saint John, N.B., where her grandfather was a stipendiary.

She graduated from the University of New Brunswick in law in 1933. She later in a class of 17 in which she was the only woman.

Miss Lynch had practically no preparation for the parole job, but in 1947 she rewrote Lord Stansgate's act — which she hired to handle his North American affairs and now says she may write a book about the parole publisher.

Appointed to the original five-member parole board Oct. 1, 1960, by then prime minister John Diefenbaker, she first 10 years she worked and made decisions from files, rarely seeing prisoners.

That changed in 1970 when the board was enlarged to allow members to enter prisons to hear the case for parole from the prisoner himself.

Prisoners rejected by the board, which now has 19 members, are sometimes threatening. One left prison last March telling an employee that Miss Lynch, who had refused him parole, was no less death to her. She's worried. She says people who are going to commit murder don't talk about it.

Miss Lynch supports parole as a strength — not a crutch. She says 80 per cent of those who don't get parole return to prison while less than half of those who are given parole come back within five years.

Window Sheers Elegant, Inexpensive Decoration

TORONTO CP — Sheers can be effective in both traditional and contemporary settings, says Alan Campaigne, interior designer for Sanderson Canada.

"The budget-conscious, those who lack large sums of money to spend on 'heavier' draperies, can still have attractive windows, but at much less expense," he said.

"First, sheers are never lined and secondly, they come in a variety of, widths from 48 inches to 118 inches. The 118 inch fabric allows enough in the width for a good handling of sheers so the fabric is usually railroaded and width is used which always on, thus saving costs because there are no seams to sew."

He said sheers come in many high-fashion colors, are nearly all resistant to sun and moisture and many are easily washable and drip-dry.

Mr. Campaigne suggested that sheers can be used to cover a big picture window or a wall to hide masonry or terrace window, to cut out glare and soften the overall effect.

"Hung under a valance or cornice, sheers are often enough without draperies. And the decorative effect can also be achieved by using alternating panels of sheers in two or three colors such as olive, gold and white in a full wall-to-wall treatment.

Mr. Campaigne added that as "extremely fresh, contemporary effect," possibly for a bedroom, can be achieved by using simple white sheers swagged, or with tie backs, flung beside a colorful patterned wallpaper which is repeated on window shades set behind sheers.

Another drapery that is rapidly gaining popularity is casement draperies. These are open weave fabrics that can cover a window, giving a sheered look, yet allow light to filter through.

He said they are excellent for large expanses of windows, particularly in high-rises where you do not have to draw the drapes to shut out the view of a city below at night.

"Casements don't have to be hung just at windows either. They can be used very successfully as room dividers, either hung on brass rods from the ceiling or stretched over a wooden frame.

"They make a visual divider in a room but still let the light filter through."

Exclusive Camp Closes

DIGBY, N.S. (CP) — After 40 years as a summer camp for wealthy girls, Camp Arcadia at nearby Sandy Cove is closing down.

Helen J. Anthony, who has directed the camp since 1936, attributed the camp's demise to high operational costs and the expense and difficulty girls experience getting to the camp.

"Besides," she said, "I'm going to retire."

The eight-week camp once was host to a member of Britain's Royal Family.

Starting out with only one cabin, it has since include 18 smaller cabins a tennis court, riding stables, horses, a fleet of rowboats and canoes and basketball and volleyball courts.

Enrolment reached a peak of 105 in 1961 and then was gradually cut each year until only 35 attended last summer.

During the blitz on London in the Second World War, many English children who were friends of the Royal Family were sent to Arcadia for their own safety. Among them was Princess Margaret's niece, Davina Bowes-Lyon. A letter from the Queen expressing appreciation to Mrs. Anthony was sent for children now hangs on the wall of the main cabin.

Mrs. Anthony says she may operate the cabins next year, but eventually will sell them.

AROUND TOWN with DAVID SAUNDERS

(. . . an advertising feature designed to keep you better informed of what's new around town.)

An Old Fashioned Treat

There's something about the aroma of freshly ground coffee that really perks you up on a winter morning. Combine it with the good smell of frying bacon, and you've got yourself the start of a good day! Making good coffee nowadays is by no means a gourmet operation: there are many fine products on the market that can give you a perfect cup of coffee in a matter of minutes. . . Gibbs and Son, 27 Albion Street, Tel. 968-5284 have the complete line of Proctor Silex products in stock, including the well-known "Coffee Magic" coffee maker, that produces 10 cups of coffee in 8 minutes. It has an automatic warm feature — that means that you can have perfect coffee ready at any hour of the day or night, a boon in the holiday season. It features a non-drip and no-spill spout, and carries the firm, no-nonsense Proctor Silex 1 year over the counter replacement warranty . . . Gibbs and Son also carry toasters, irons, blenders, percolators, the whole Proctor Silex range, any item of which would make a wonderful and practical Christmas gift.

Christmas Lights Special

I mentioned last week that there was a really great deal going at Bulldog Electric, 291 Coleman Street, Tel. 968-5746 . . . a sale before Christmas of lights, strings, Santas, artificial trees, wreaths, just about anything you need to get into the holiday mood. What I didn't mention was that they are offering a substantial 25% off these Christmas lights, and this is an offer that you cannot refuse! And while you are talking to the people in Ruddy, have a look 'round the large store and see the marvellous lighting ideas they have to brighten these dull winter months, from sturdy Colonial lamps to elegant crystal chandeliers in the exclusive Schonbek line . . . this could be a really original gift idea that will be treasured and appreciated for years to come.

The Admiral Villeneuve Room

He was runner-up at Trafalgar, edged out by Horatio Nelson, who paid for his fly's dandruff, and was shipped home in a barrel of brine for the doubtful privilege of a state funeral from a grateful nation. The Admiral Villeneuve Room, a splendid new addition to the Inn on the Bay, Prince Edward Pl., Picton was opened several days ago . . . the cuisine of the old house have been turned into a cozy pub type room, replete with warm panelled brick, copper, brass and old photographs — they even have one of the local Council in 1932! They will be serving pub grub, sandwiches, pies, cheese and so on and the atmosphere is a pleasant change from so many of the fast drink outlets that abound nowadays. It's the perfect place to drop into after a pleasant, winter drive through Prince Edward County, and mine host, Bob Ingerfield, is to be congratulated for his continued and unmagine tive development of this lovely old house.

Why Is Hard Water Harmful?

The water in your tap contains many minerals dissolved from the earth, but the largest concentrates are calcium and magnesium. These particular minerals, which turn water 'hard' make it difficult to use water as a cleansing agent, because they combine to form a 'curd', lowering its effectiveness and forcing us to use more to achieve results. Anybody who has tried to shave in hard water will know what I mean! Moira Schuster Fuels, 17 Pinnacle St. South are agents for the extensive Aqualine Water Refiners, which have particular relevance to those of us who live in and around Belleville. Once you have experienced the advantages and benefits of soft water you won't want to go back! Why not call the people at Moira Schuster for full details? The telephone number is 962-4594.

Time's Winged Chariot

One thing each and every one of us does every day of the week, like it or not, is grow older. And as we grow older, we become more likely to be attached by such diseases of the eyes as glaucoma, cataracts, uveitis and others. We can protect the golden years of life by having regular eye examinations every two years, particularly after the age of 40. Failure to be certain about eye health can be tragic. About 100,000 Canadians over 40 today have glaucoma; fully one-half of them are unaware of their condition, and it seems that many will not find out until it is too late. Play safe! Good advice brought to you each week by Quinte Optical, 34 Bridge Street East. Quinte Optical will be glad to make arrangements for your eye examination — the phone number is 962-2511.

It Comes But Once A Year

When you read this we shall be into December and Christmas will be only just three weeks away. I know that Christmas has been over commercialized of late, but there is something timeless and ethereal about this time of the year and in the joy of giving and receiving gifts from people you love. Dress Studios, in the Belleville Plaza is a wonderful place to get gift ideas, and if somebody has distinct tastes, remember you can always give them a gift certificate from Dress Studios and let them do their own shopping! Right now they are featuring floor and scatter cushions, plus an enormous jumbo cushion measuring approximately 5'x5' which I haven't seen the like of ever before. It's extremely practical, and quite a conversation maker! Be sure to drop into the Decor Studios before the big day; you, and whoever the lucky recipient is, will be glad you did.

Don't Leave It to the Last Minute

Winter always seem to catch us by surprise, and perhaps it will this year even more than usual. People always seem to leave some things to the last minute . . . like winter tune-ups and filling snow tires. That's why at Vader's Car Sales, 21 College St. W., would like to remind you that all that cold weather stuff is literally just around the corner, and their factory-trained mechanics would like to see that your car is in good shape to face the rough stuff ahead. Vader's also have an extensive line in gift ideas in their accessories department . . . roof racks, steering wheels for sporty types, seat covers and just about anything that can help to make driving more pleasurable. Call them at 966-5302 for further details.

Sell Your Shovel

What do you associate with the following words? Snow, ice, shovel, scrape, slip, slide, stuck, what comes to mind is sore muscles, injuries, late for work, lost wages. ServiceMaster, 218 Pinnacle St. (at rear), 962-1627 says that it need not happen. They have in stock a marvelous product called X-73 ice remover. Easy, fast effective way to melt snow and thaw ice. This fantastic product makes rock salt obsolete. As an example a 100 lb drum of X-73 equals the melting power of 3,000 lbs of rock salt at 0 F. degrees. X-73 even works at 50 F. degrees below zero and that's one claim that I am not anxious to prove. It's the perfect thing for driveways, porches, in fact anywhere you care to use it. Carry some in the trunk of your car in case you get stuck. It's non-toxic, harmless to humans, animals and vegetation. Get in touch with ServiceMaster and get a free demonstration and instead of shoveling snow, make it disappear.

Quinte Cuisine

Mary Flunder learned to love this Russian dish in university when her roommate's mother sent samples by plane from Western Canada each Christmas. She's prepared it ever since and it always reminds her of the holiday season. Mary and husband Gene have three children: Ted, Maury and Yvette.

Perohi

¼ cup oil
one cup milk
three tsp baking powder
one tsp salt
one egg
three cups flour
½ lb. dry cottage cheese
one egg
salt and pepper
one cup mashed boiled beans one tbsp melted butter
salt and pepper

Beat one egg with one cup of milk and oil. Beat well. Sift baking powder, first amount of salt and one cup of the flour into mix. Add remaining flour. Form the dough into balls and roll out to form circles or ovals about three inches in diameter. In the centre of each, place one tbsp of one of the two fillings (see below). Fold in two sides and then the ends. Bake on cookie sheet in 450 degree oven until brown. Serve hot with sour cream on top. They can also be served with melted butter and fried onions.

Cheese filling: combine one beaten egg with cottage cheese and salt and pepper.

Bean filling: Mix one cup mashed boiled white beans with butter and salt and pepper.

Junior volunteer Laura Collyer and her mother, Beth, are greeted by Charlotte Holfelder, chairman of volunteers.

Women's History in Ceramic Hats

A preview of the ceramic hats created by Audrey Davies as an International Women's Year project was held Sunday at the Davies' William Street home.

The hats will be shown at the Pottery Guild in Toronto beginning today and continuing until December 17.

Funded by the Ontario Arts Council, the five period hats which cover the era from 1785 to 1900, are the first phase of Audrey Davies' Women's Year project which will include hats from 1900 to the present and a "hat of the future."

"The idea of the whole project is to show the movement of women through the years. I think the trend is very frightening."

Mrs. Davies explains that the current distaste with which hats are viewed indicates to her a denial by women of their femininity.

"This is the first time in history that hats aren't selling," she said. "The more I researched and studied the more I came to realize how important hats are to women."

Pointing out that she doesn't believe that femininity and equality are mutually exclusive, Mrs. Davies adds, "Even with all of the things available to women, we don't have to lose our identity as women."

The Directoire, the earliest hat in the collection, is a 1795 French Marvelleuse bonnet known as the jockey hat. It was worn after the French Revolution by a group of women who had long ragged hair and outlandish extravagant clothes.

The Empire Era is typified by an 1806 French poke bonnet, known in Denmark as the "kiss - me - if - you - can" bonnet.

A plumed and ribboned bonnet with a high crown is a reminder of the Romantic era of 1820 to 1840 while the French Bavolet is representative of the era from 1840 to 1874 known as the second rococo. The Victorian era, 1870 to 1900, is typified by hats which replaced bonnets tied under the chin.

"When women began making demands, the first thing they did was throw away the ribbon under their chin," Mrs. Davies says.

"The environment around us affects what we put on." "To me, hats are a very feminine thing and we're throwing that out the door. I just want a woman to remain a woman."

Lancers Burst Cats' Bubble

Loyalist College Lancers have finally snapped Algonquin's streak. Not only did they break the Ottawa College's five game undefeated mark this season, but by nipping the Cats 66-65 Saturday, the Lancers overcame the jinx that has hovered over the men's basketball squad since Loyalist opened.

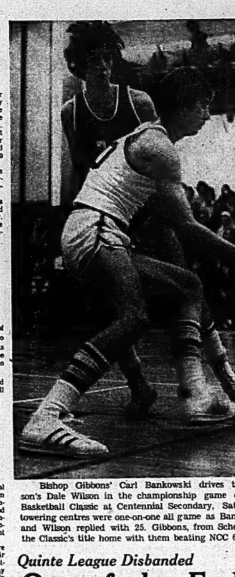
The victory was the first ever by the Lancers over the powerhouse from the nation's capital. They 20-28 at the half, but then outhustled it out just as closely in the final two quarters, but it was Loyalist who held the one point edge in the final tally.

Dave Cullmer, Loyalist's starting centre, made up for a dismal first half display by pumping in 20 points in the second half. Altogether he totalled 30 points in the win. Rookie Mike Lynch was next with 14 points and first year players Ken Fairbank and Roy Tucker checked in with 10 each.

Larry Lanthier had 22 points for Algonquin and Brent Martin, who fouled out in the second half, scored 16.

The victory evens Loyalist's record on the year at 3-3 and was their second win in a row.

Saturday, the Lancers are in Cornwall for a 2 p.m. encounter.



Bishop Gibbons' Carl Bankowski drives the base against Nicholson's Dale Wilson in the championship game of McDonald's Belleville Basketball Classic at Centennial Secondary, Saturday night. The six foot towering centres were one-on-one all game as Bankowski popped 26 points and Wilson replied with 25. Gibbons, from Schenectady, New York, took the Classic's title home with them beating NCC 60-53 in this game.

Frankford League Short on Entries

Frankford Industrial Hockey League has a problem. It doesn't have enough teams to complete a league. The two present teams could play back-to-back games all season, but that would neither make sense nor occupy the ice-time booked by the loop at Frankford arena.

Bill Chesher, president of the league, is looking for two more teams to fill the spots in the schedule. The league has ice-time from 9-6 p.m. on Sundays at a $20 rate.

If any teams are interested in filling the vacancies call Chesher at 398-6583.

Frape Leads Team To Squash Title

Lewis Frape's team of Bill Juby, Judy Pultz, Tom Fleming and Lawrence Allair captured this year's intra-club tournament at the Belleville Squash Club held Friday and Saturday. The tournament was described by organizer Frape as, — a very successful event" and attracted a total of 99 club members in all.

The event was a double elimination affair and for the victory Frape's team was forced to play the runners-up, led by Syed Haider, twice before capturing the trophy. The winners were decided on a two game total score with each player having played a total of six matches consisting of two games each for a total of 12 games over the course of the two days.

The first game of the final match saw Haider's team come out on top but the winners fought back in the second game of the series and downed their opponents and finished on top with a three point spread over the runners up.

Local squash players are now beginning to make their mark in squash courts outside the area, on Thursday Dawn Haider of the Belleville Squash Club captured the consolation championship in Kingston at the Cataraqui Squash Rackets Association open tournament.

The level "C" tournament attracted players from centres across Ontario such as Toronto and Thunder Bay.

Wellington Sweeps Weekend Action

WELLINGTON (Special) — A 5-3 win over Little Britain here, Sunday gave Wellington Dukes a sweep of their weekend Ontario Hockey Association Junior D doubleheader. Friday night at Wellington the Dukes stormed to a 9-1 victory.

In the Sunday win, Dukes got two goals each from Parks and singles by John Woodward, Larry McQuaid and Bob Green.

Supplying the Little Britain goals were Dale Jewel and Don Oliver.

Greer was the big shooter for Dukes in the Friday match with Bobcaygeon. He found the mark for four goals. Randy Ellis was a two-goal man while Harry MacDonald, Bruce Fraser and Blaine Way notched the other Wellington markers.

Game scorers for Bobcaygeon was Kevin VanAlstyne.

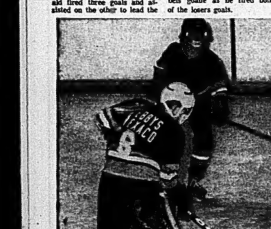
Dukes make their next start Sunday when they are at home to Bobcaygeon in a 4:30 p.m. match.

Falcons and Rebels Drub Opposition

Goal scoring was the order of the day in Northern Electric Hockey League action on Sunday. Both the Rebels and the Falcons totalled 10 goals in their respective victories.

Bill McQuaid and Randy Hutchison each earned a hat trick as the Falcons clobbered the Bearcats 10-4. Rick Rossbath netted a pair of goals and added five assists. Joe Scanlan and Ron McFarlane scored singles to round out the winners attack. Tom MacDonald fired three goals and assisted on the other to lead the scoring for the Bearcats. Gord Sine fired the other marker.

Rebels had easy by Lou Bastien, Kevin Allen and Frank Cummings was enough to clinch a 10-1 victory for the Rebels over the Yankees. Bruce Pascoe, Mike Semark, Manuel Moniz and Doug McCrory each fired a single for the wingers to finish up their scoring. Bob Totten was the only Yankee to beat the Rebels goalie as he fired both of the losers goals.



Carol McFarlane was foiled on this attempt by Napanee goalie Linda Rae during action at Dick Ellis Rink between Belleville Combines and Napanee in Quinte Ladies' Hockey League action, Sunday. Belleville's Judy, Rappel watches the proceedings in hopes of a rebound. The local ladies dropped the contest by a slim 3-2 margin.

Quinte League Disbanded

Out of the End Comes New Life for Fastball

By TOM GAVEY
Sports Staff

The Quinte Fastball League is dead. It was laid to rest Sunday at an afternoon meeting at the Recreation Centre. But out of the ashes rose another, more than adequate, replacement. This phoenix is known as the Eastern Ontario Fastball League.

Constructed on the nucleus of the pre-deceased, the EOFL plans to stand in opposition to the Ontario Fastball League. Already eight of a tentative 12 teams have paid their entry fee.

The eight which will participate for certain are: Erighton, Peterborough, Cold Springs, Asger's Mens Wear of Trenton, Devolin Motors, Bandos Supplies of Picton, Dobson and Howard and Robert Printing. Others who are considering entry are: Wellington, Madoc, Napanee, the Ellis Juniors, Campbellford and a second club from Trenton.

The legitamacy of the league was proven by the number of experienced faces involved in its birth; including Lyle Thompson, Jim White, Cliff Belch and John Linfield. Also present was George Rutledge past president of OFL who helped given a position on the executive, but promised assistance with scheduling and other matters. Also present were Harold Rawden and Phil Luft, two other QFL veterans.

The executive consists of Doug Clark from Belleville as president, vice president is Brian McFadden of Peterborough, secretary Bill Huffman of Trenton and treasurer Huck Matthews of Cobourg. That gives the executive a good variation, with four of the league cities represented.

It was decided that the league would affiliate itself with the Ontario Amateur Softball Association using its constitution and rules. A $100 entry fee was assessed each of the eight entries making the league even more stable.

Since the EOFL plans to run with 12 teams, four teams have until December 15th to make a decision. The first four paying the entry fee will round out the loop.

Teams, as of the last meeting, will play twice a week, once at home and once on the road.

The league plans to use its own umpires and statistician, much like the OFL. Also, the 25 people at the meeting agreed that only OASA sanctioned umps should handle games.

Optimism was the key word at the meeting, with the executive adding some new faces to the fastball scene city.

"I've been an interested fan for a number of years and now I'd like to do something for fastball," said president Clark. Both Huffman and Matthews have executive experience in the OASA and will be able to interpret rules and problems as they come along.

All in all, it looks like the city of Belleville will experience some changes on the fastball scene this summer. The new league will increase the amount of fine fastball being played in the city and the area.

The next meeting is December 14th at the Recreation Centre.

Ladies Hockey Roundup

Combines Fall From First Place

Belleville Combines missed a chance to grab a share of first place in the Quinte Ladies' Hockey League when they dropped a 3-2 decision to Napanee, Sunday, at Dick Ellis Rink.

Combines two points back of front running Stirling are a solid second with 10 points.

New York Squad Edges Nicks in Classic Final

BY MIKE BRADSHAW
Staff Sportswriter

Electricity filled the forum. With every field goal, every interception, every Centennial Secondary School cracked with excitement. Bishop Gibbons would open a points spread and Nicholson would narrow it.

A six point difference, then back to two. An eight point difference, then back to three and the game continued in this finely balanced vein right to the championship of the McDonald's Belleville Basketball Classic.

Then, with less than two minutes to go, the New York squad opened its final points spread. The Nicks came back, but as hack would have it, their efforts were futile. Gibbons popped in a pair of unanswered field goals in the dying seconds of the game and secured a 60-53 victory.

"That's one of the best teams we've played," exclaimed Nicholson head coach Joe Todisco, "they're a fine all around club."

Todisco's warranted comments came after his charges' prodigies also Nicholson Catholic College had outclassed the New York basketball games ever played in the city. Over 500 fans turned out to witness the championship game between Belleville or New York, went away satisfied.

"It was a real thrill," said NCC's coach, Gary Duggan, "I knew that he was getting 100 per cent and you can't expect more than that." Duggan's comments served to reflect the satisfaction felt by all.

Bill Schuh was down throughout the contest. Once by 18 times by eight and several times by four and six. Still, they never quit and each time they got behind they worked a little harder and cut the Bishop Gibbons lead down to two or three points until the last minute when Gibbons pulled away for good.

"I'm highly impressed," added Todisco, "I'm sure if Nicholson were to compete or play in our league they would be one of the better teams in it." Nicholson will be participates in the Diocesan Classic Basketball Classic as the best on the Eastern Seaboard.

Both clubs played a conservative game, always aware of the power of the other, no one was willing to take chances or make mistakes. Still, the contest was one of the high points of the weekend.

The difference in the final tally could very well have been the foul lines. The Nicks were assessed 15 personal fouls compared to 10 to Gibbons. The New York entry in the eight team Classic went on to finish first in the pool while the NNicks counted four points in the seven attempts.

Neither squad broke from conventional lineup and both lineups demonstrated the versatility of power. Bishop Gibbons' six-foot-six centre Carl Bankowski scored 26 points, third was just one mor ethan his Nicholson counterpart, six-foot-seven, Dale Boyle and Gibbons' outside man Scott Czarnecki contined the man-for-man balance as he scored 14 and 16 points, respectively.

Nicholson's Dave Holland had six points and Brues Collins and Danny Krajewski had four apiece. Bishop Gibbon got 10 from Joe Izabella and six and four, respectively, from Mark Chyliniski and Jim Moeller.

The Nicks were outscored 13-12, 15-17, 16-12 and 15-12 by quarters.

CONSOLATION FINAL —
STAMFORD 91, QUINTE 47

There was one doubt from the start of this final. Though the Saints were only down 13-11 after the first quarter, they seemed only to be going through the motions of the game. Stamford, from Niagara Falls, created a completely different picture. They were there to play.

Mike Kulik and Bob Gardner pumped in 18 points apiece and John Lieli scored 17. John Nicol checked in with 12.

Quinte's coach Joe McCracken managed 14 while Brian Bateman had 10.

SEMI-FINALS
BISHOP GIBBONS 71, BCI 43

Quinte wasn't the only local entry that had a miserable game. BCI lacked their general finesse and quality shots Friday night in their semi-final game. Carl Bankowski hit for 27 points, while three of his other teammates reached double figures, all 10 of them shared in the scoring.

Mike Fox led BCI with 14.

A.N. MYER 47

The Nicks surprised everyone, including themselves, when they knocked off Myer Rated among the tops in senior basketball in the province. Over 500 fans packed the squad showed little defensive prowess and the Nicks' runners, particularly Jeff Boyle, ripped them apart. Boyle collected 16 points for Nicholson on a dozen 20-25 foot shots. Gordon Dale Wilson coaxed 20 and guard Bruce Collins who frustrated every A.N. Myer defender burdened with the task of covering him, scored 16 points.

Jay Triano, a highly touted forward at the national level, scored 18 points for Myer, but one of their most productive players, Terry Rigg, was limited to just six points by Nicholson's defence.

QUINTE 86, STRATHROY 74

Quinte came from behind 43-38 at the half to eliminate Strathroy from the tournament. Style Coach McCracken found his range and pumped 22 points to lead the Saints. Al Rutherford, forced to sit out Friday night's loss to NCC, made his presence felt with 20 points and Sterling Wilson added 12.

STAMFORD 61
ST. PIUS X 46

It was a close, but hot quite weekend for Ottawa's St. Pius. After dropping Friday night's game to Stamford they were knocked out of the tournament with their second loss to Niagara Falls. John Kulik scored 24 points and Tom and John Lieli and John Nicol struck for 13, 12 and 11 points, respectively for the winners.

Resch Guessed Wrong In Picking Mahovlich

By SCOTT ABBOTT
The Canadian Press

Glenn Resch of Moose Jaw, Sask., and New York Islanders could surely have picked a better spot to make his National Hockey League goaltending debut in Canada.

The 21-year-old Westerner who backstopped the Islanders to their near-miss Cinderella showing in last year's Stanley Cup playoffs played his first professional game in his native country at the Forum in Montreal Sunday night, and the Canadiens took advantage for a 3-2 victory.

As if the Canadiens aren't tough enough at home, they played and won there Saturday night, 6-4 over Vancouver Canucks in the first half of an unusual weekend schedule.

"I wanted a victim in trying to out-stickhandle Pete Mahovlich," Resch said after making an initial save on Mahovlich on an around-the-net move early to have Steve Shutt poke home a loose puck for his second goal of the game, the winner at 14:59 of the final period.

"If I'd been 5-11 instead of 5-8, I would have reached it," Resch said of Mahovlich's swoop, belying his official height of five-foot-one. Mahovlich towers six-foot-five, making a duel of heights with most other players a mismatch.

In other Sunday games, Boston Bruins downed Pittsburgh Penguins 4-2, Philadelphia Flyers edged Vancouver 4-3 and New York Rangers clipped St. Louis Blues 5-3, Atlanta Flames burned California Seals 4-1 and Kansas City Scouts grabbed a 1-1 tie with Chicago Black Hawks.

In Saturday's other action, Pittsburgh dropped the Rangers 8-3, the Islanders whipped St. Louis 8-2, Philadelphia and Toronto Maple Leafs tied 1-1, Detroit Red Wings defeated Kansas City 5-2, Boston tied Chicago 4-4, Minnesota North Stars downed Washington Capitals 5-3 and Los Angeles Kings subdued Buffalo Sabres 8-3.

Shutt and Serge Savard scored for the Canadiens in the first period against Resch, with Eddie Westfall replying with his 11th of the season for the Islanders. Jacques Lemaire tied it for New York at 5:14 of the third period after a scoreless middle session.

Wayne Cashman batted the puck through goal-mouth scramble at 13:20 of the third period to give the Bruins their victory over Pittsburgh, who have not won in Boston since 1957-58, their first year in the league. They have lost there in 30 games since.

Gregg Sheppard, Johnny Bucyk and Brad Park also scored for the Bruins, who bombarded Penguins goalie Michel Plasse with 40 shots.

Don Saleski's goal on a third-period rebound at Philadelphia broke a 3-3 tie and lifted the Flyers to a 4-3 victory over Vancouver. Bobby Clarke also scored for Philadelphia.

Dennis Ververgaert clinched the game with a goal with 17 seconds left. Vancouver had taken a 2-0 first-period lead on goals by Dennis Kearns and Glen Richardson, but the Flyers rebounded for a second-period score by Andre Dupont, Rick MacLeish and Bill Flett. Goalie before Ab DeMarco tied it for the Canucks early in the third.

Phil Esposito's 10th and 11th goals of the year and Jean Ratelle reversed the Rangers to their first victory in five outings. The Rangers are lagging last in the Patrick Division with a 9-14-2 record, one point behind Atlanta.

Steve Vickers, Carol Vadnais, who accompanied Esposito to New York from Boston, and rookie Dave Maloney also scored for the other Rangers marksmen, while Floyd Thomson and Claude Larose beat Rangers goalie John Davidson.

Tom Lysiak paced the Flames at Oakland with two goals and Pat Stapleton and Claude St. Sauveur supplied the other Atlanta firepower. Seals defenceman and captain Jim Neilson helped in a first-period fight for x-rays after being checked by Hilliard Graves.

Wilf Paiement's five-foot flip shot beat Hawks goalie Tony Esposito at 15:40 of the first period at Chicago and gave the second-place Scouts their win in a 6-13-6 record in the Smythe Division.

Bobby Orr

On the Shelf For 2 Months

BOSTON (AP) — Bobby Orr, Boston Bruins' superstar defenceman and one of hockey's all-time greats, was reported to be "coming along very well" Sunday following surgery on his left knee for the fifth time in seven years.

A nurse at Massachusetts General Hospital said Dr. Carter Rowe, the orthopedic surgeon who performed the last three operations on Orr, examined him Sunday morning and said he was "very pleased with his condition."

The last operation was performed Saturday, and Dr. Rowe said that "this is the first time that he has suffered any condition on the outside of his left knee. All the other conditions have been on the inside."

The medical problem means that Orr, who missed the first 12 games of the National Hockey League season following surgery on the same knee, may be lost to the Bruins for two months.

Twins Take First In Senior A Loop

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Thunder Bay Twins moved into first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League by blanking Cambridge Hornets 9-0 Sunday before 2,341 spectators.

The win completed a two-game weekend sweep for Thunder Bay, which downed Cambridge 4-3 Saturday because the Twins play an abbreviated schedule, each game is worth four points to the team.

In the only other weekend action, Whitby Warriors edged Napanee Comets 4-3 Sunday in overtime.

At Thunder Bay the Twins led 2-0 after the first period and Sunday and 5-0 after the second. John Cameron made 21 saves in recording the shutout as Thunder Bay had 47 shots on the Cambridge net.

Terry Healey led the Twins with two goals. Other Thunder Bay scorers were Brian Bihoti, Dave Ketner, Dave Vaillant, Tom Deacon, Ken Campbell and Barry Horgan.

Cambridge received 18 of the 18 minor penalties plus a 10-minute misconduct to John Rutherford.

League play resumes tonight with Barrie at Lindsay.

Warriors 4 Comets 3

At Napanee, Paul Raymer's second goal at 2:47 of the overtime period gave Whitby the win.

The Warriors trailed 2-1 after the first period but led 3-2 at the end of the second.

Rick Gerow forced the game into overtime when he scored for the Comets early in the final period. Mike Flanagan and Brian Coughlin got the other Napanee goals.

Besides Raymer, Whitby scorers were Peter Vipond and Dave Nicholson.

The Warriors outshot Napanee 36-28 before 1,200 spectators.

Twins 4 Hornets 2

On Saturday, the Twins led 2-1 after the first period and 4-2 after the second. The Hornets scored their second goal with sixteen seconds left in the game before 2,200 spectators.

Al Arbour and Doug Schoen, field replied for the Hornets who were outshot 43-37.

The Twins took five of nine minor penalties, and the Hornets received a misconduct.

Crackdown Has Flyers Wondering What's Up

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario McMurtry shouldn't expect a Christmas card from coach Fred Shero of Philadelphia Flyers.

McMurtry, who announced late in October that he plans to get tough with Violence in hockey, was the talk of the Flyers' dressing room after the club played to a 1-1 tie with Toronto Maple Leafs, in a National Hockey League game Saturday night.

Shero said fans who attended the game at Maple Leaf Gardens suffered the ultimate reply by paying to watch the Flyers play abnormally. He said the Flyers are the best draw in hockey and to stymie the rough act onl, served to insult the 16,485 fans.

"If Leafs make the playoffs, McMurtry should get the all-star vote for helping them along," he said. "His foolish ruling gets every guy in a frame of mind where he doesn't know whether to check. Is this what you are paying to see? I don't think so.

"My guys have been reading the papers. They are not dumb. They start wondering how far they can go and as a result it throws them off their game."

Shero said it got so bad "I had to bench" Dave Schultz, the Flyers' leader in penalty minutes the last few years. "He was totally ineffective" out there."

Bobby Clarke, captain of the Flyers, wishes McMurtry would create guidelines. "I think I understand what McMurtry is trying to do," he said, "but I wish he would tell us specifically what we can't do.

"All I want to know is: What's violence?—a hard body check, a fist fight, or a slam over the boards with a stick? I only wish he'd define this for us."

Trappers Create 3-way Tie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

North Bay Trappers won both their games during the weekend to move into a three-way tie for first place.

Visiting North' Bay defeated the Tigers 5-3 at Hawkesbury and Wednesday Raiders 8-4 at Toronto in the only game Saturday.

In other Sunday action, Richmond Hill Rams defeated Dixie Beehives 6-5 in Toronto, North York Rangers defeated Weston Dodgers 3-1 in Toronto and Knob Hill Farms defeated High York Royals 9-5 at Ajax.

North Bay, Richmond Hill and North York now share the top spot.

At Hyland arena, Claude D'Amour led North Bay against Wexford with a two-goal effort. Jon Soetzinger scored twice for the Raiders.

Mexico Knocks Canadians Out

MEXICO CITY (Reuter) — Marcelo Lara defeated Rejean Genois, 22, of Quebec City 4-6, 6-3, 14, 6-1, 7-5 in the final singles match that lasted two hours and 47 minutes, Monday, which eliminated Canada for the second year in succession, meets the United States in the next round here starting Dec. 12-15.

In the first round of the 1975 competition, Canada took a 5-0 victory over Colombia in a best-of-five series at Montreal.

Canada started the third and final day against Mexico trailing 3-1 after the Mexicans took both singles matches Friday. Tony Bardsley, 29, of Vancouver and Genois narrowed the deficit to 3-2 after the first 11 minutes but was the match when Archie Gemmill scored a disputed goal nine minutes from the end.

David Webb gave the Rangers a victory over Queen's Park Rangers in Division 1 action Saturday before rallying for 3-2 home victories in English League First Division soccer.

Derby visited Middlesbrough on Saturday after the first 13 minutes but was the match when Archie Gemmill scored a disputed goal nine minutes from the end.

David Webb gave the Rangers a victory over Queen's City when he scored the winning goal with the last kick of the game.

Derby leads the division with 27 points after 19 games on 11 wins, five ties and three losses. The Rangers and West Ham United are second with 26 points apiece, followed by Queen's Park has a superior goal average, and Manchester United has 25 points.

Other First Division scores were: Aston Villa 1 Leicester 1; Coventry 1 Birmingham 0; Ipswich 1 Sheffield United 1; Leeds 5 Everton 2; Norwich 3 over Liverpool 1; Manchester United 1, Newcastle 0; Tottenham 2 Burnley 1; West Ham 1 Arsenal 0; and Manchester City 4 Wolverhampton 0.

Celtic took the lead in the Scottish Premier League on goal difference with a 3-1 away win, over Dundee United. Celtic is tied at 18 points with Hibernian, 4-3 winners away to St. Johnstone, and Motherwell, which drew 2-2 away to Hearts.

Celtic and Hibernian have a game in hand. They meet Dec. 23 in a match abandoned last month by fog.

Dale Power, 26, from Toronto, captured his game Sunday to best Joaquin Loyo Mayo 3-6, 7-6 6-3, 6-4 to complete the series.

Genois started slowly in the final singles match and was under pressure to win his early service games against Lara who served well back and placed his shots neatly around the court.

The Canadian was also unable to match the power of the opponent's service, which included some useful aces. In their 10th game, the Mexican suddenly found some excellent returns close to the net and gave Genois his big chance to break service and win the set.

Lara recovered just quickly halfway through the second, and easily broke the Canadian's serve in the third and fifth games.

But Genois came back strongly in the third and took Lara's service games from Lara.

With the series depending on the last set, neither player was able to break through at first.

Derby County, Queen's Park Rally to Win

LONDON (Reuter) — Derby County and Queen's Park Rangers gave their fans a scare Saturday before rallying for 3-2 home victories in English League First Division soccer.

Derby visited Middlesbrough 3-0 after the first 13 minutes but was the match when Archie Gemmill scored a disputed goal nine minutes from the end.

David Webb gave the Rangers a victory over Queen's City when he scored the winning goal with the last kick of the game.

Derby leads the division with 27 points after 19 games on 11 wins, five ties and three losses. The Rangers and West Ham United are second with 26 points apiece, followed by Queen's Park has a superior goal average, and Manchester United has 25 points.

Other First Division scores were: Aston Villa 1 Leicester 1; Coventry 1 Birmingham 0; Ipswich 1 Sheffield United 1; Leeds 5 Everton 2; Norwich 3 over Liverpool 1; Manchester United 1, Newcastle 0; Tottenham 2 Burnley 1; West Ham 1 Arsenal 0; and Manchester City 4 Wolverhampton 0.

Celtic took the lead in the Scottish Premier League on goal difference with a 3-1 away win, over Dundee United. Celtic is tied at 18 points with Hibernian, 4-3 winners away to St. Johnstone, and Motherwell, which drew 2-2 away to Hearts.

Celtic and Hibernian have a game in hand. They meet Dec. 23 in a match abandoned last month by fog.

Stuart Beam and John Craggs scored Middlesbrough in the second Derby.

Francis Lee and Henry Newfield the score before Gemmill's disputed goal. The Scottish international's shot hit the underside of the bar and bounced down and referee Jack Reynolds ruled the ball had crossed the line.

Rangers began well against Stoke. Don Masson rang them a halfthime lead, before Ian Mowbray and Alan Bloor put Stoke ahead. Dave Clement levened the score for Rangers.

Norwich justified the attacking policy of manager John Bond by hanling Liverpool its first home defeat of the season. Ted Macdougall and Kevin Peters put Norwich ahead 2-0 before Steve Heighway replied for Liverpool. Ted Macdougall got the third Norwich goal.

Leeds United strengthened its championship challenge with five win over Everton. Peter Lorimer and Allen Clarke scored two goals each for Leeds, with 26 points.

It was an unhappy day for 19-year-old Everton goalkeeper Drew Broad who was making his league debut.

Manchester City stretched its unbeaten streak to 14 games with its win over Wolverhampton, while Sheffield United gained its first away point of the season in tying Ipswich 1-1. Sunderland leads the Second Division with 29 points and Orient and Palace in first in the Third Division with the same number.

GRAHAM HILL

Two Questions Puzzle Investigators

Graham Hill Killed in Air Crash

LONDON (AP) — Investigators probing the air crash which killed Graham Hill, former world motor racing champion, and five of his team were trying to find answers today to two questions as they examined the wreckage of the light airplane he had been piloting.

The first question was why Hill, an experienced pilot, chose to fly on an airport with only minimal navigational aids instead of diverting to another nearby airport with full radar landing facilities.

The other question was whether ice forming on the wings of his red and white, twin-engined, six-seat Piper Aztec plane weighed it down and was responsible for sending it crashing into trees near a golf course 16 miles north of London on Saturday night.

The plane crashed on to the course three miles from Elstree Airport for which it was heading after leaving Marseilles in France and burst into flames. Hill and his team had been returning a new car on a French Riviera racing circuit.

The bodies of Hill, 46, and his five passengers, who included his protege driver Tony Brise, a 25-year-old Briton, were badly burnt.

Hill was the only man to have won racing's Big Three—the world championship, which he captured twice, the Indianapolis 500 and the Le Mans 24-hour endurance test. The Englishman retired from Grand Prix racing last July to concentrate on building and sponsoring Formula 1 cars.

Airport authorities at Marseilles listed the other persons aboard the plane as engineer Ray Brimble, who designed Hill's latest racing car, and mechanics Andy Smallman, Terry Richards and Tony Halcock. Brimble, Smallman and Richards were all British, Halcock was Australian.

Britain's official aeronautical information service said Elstree Airport has the minimal of navigational aids.

The airport has no instrument landing system, no radar and no direction-finding beacons. But it was Hill's home airport. His plush home set in 30 acres of countryside was only a few minutes drive away from it and he knew the landing procedure there well.

Twenty miles away London Airport has full radar landing facilities.

Hill's wife Bette, counseling its death with their three children, said: "Graham has always managed to get into difficult three before. I didn't realize that it was as bad as it must have been."

Air traffic controller said, "Hill must have been determined to get in here at Luton."

Luton Airport could have "talked him down" the plane and used radar if necessary, he added.

Vikings Stumble to Their First Loss

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

All good things have to come to an end some time. For Minnesota Vikings, it was the end of a perfect season. For American Conference West, it was the end of a race that never really was.

Last Thursday, the Vikings enjoyed not only Thanksgiving dinner but also Los Angeles Rams' 20-0 National Football League win over Detroit Lions. That not only gave the Rams the title in the National Conference West but also enabled Minnesota to back into the NFC's Central championship.

But Sunday, with the pressure of a clinched race off, the Vikings stumbled and fell 31-30 to Washington Redskins on Billy Kilmer's third touchdown pass of the game, a 13-yarder to Frank Grant with 40 seconds to play.

Oakland Raiders, meanwhile, squeezed into its eighth divisional title in nine years by beating Atlanta Falcons 27-24. Put getting the AFC Western crown wasn't easy. First, George Blanda kicked an 18-yard field goal with 1:50 seconds left in regulation play to send the game into overtime. Then, on the last play of the extra quarter, he booted a 36-yarder.

The Raiders needed some help to lock up their title—and they got it from Baltimore. The Colts knocked off the Western runner-up, Kansas City Chiefs, by a 20-14 score.

By doing so, Baltimore lightened its own race. The Colts pulled back into a second-place tie with Buffalo Bills in the AFC East, half a game back of Miami Dolphins, who play host to New England Patriots tonight. The Bills played the other Thursday game, whipping Detroit 35-17.

In the rest of Sunday's action, Pittsburgh Steelers whipped New York Jets, 30-7, Cincinnati Bengals edged Houston in the 23-19, Dallas Cowboys beat New York Giants 14-3, Cleveland Browns shaded New Orleans Saints 17-16, Philadelphia Eagles defeated San Francisco 49ers 27-17, Green Bay Packers dumped Chicago Bears 23-7 and Denver Broncos topped San Diego Chargers 17-14 in overtime.

Kilmer's game-winning drive was keyed by short, over-the-middle passes to Charley Taylor, Mike Thomas and Grant. It wasn't really over, though, until Ken McDole charged past the Minnesota line and blocked Fred Cox' 41-yard field goal try with five seconds to go.

For the second successive week it was Blanda, Oakland's 48-year-old place-kicker, to the rescue. Last Sunday he beat Washington with a sudden-death field goal.

Lydell Mitchell ran 78 yards on a handoff for one touchdown and Jackie Wallace ran 43 yards with an interception for another to spearhead Baltimore's victory against Kansas City.

Terry Bradshaw threw touchdown passes and Pittsburgh intercepted four Joe Namath passes to beat the Jets and give one game ahead of Cincinnati in the AFC's Central Division.

John Reaver, making his first start since 1972 in place of injured Cincinnati quarterback Ken Anderson, threw second-quarter touchdown passes of 24 and 18 yards to Chip Myers to beat the Oilers.

Dallas rode a pair of Roger Staubach bombs to defeat the Giants, moving into a first-place tie with the Redskins in the NFC East. Staubach hit Jean Fugett on a 54-yard TD pass play and clicked on a 63-yarder to Golden Richards that set up Dallas' decisive field goal.

Lions' quarterback rushed for 111 yards and three touchdowns in the Packers' win over the Lions.

Jim Turner, whose 23-yard field goal allcmpt with four seconds left in regulation time was blocked, made up for it with a 31-yarder in overtime as the Denver past San Diego and keep the Chargers winless.

Lakers Are Tough On Home Court

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There's no place like home for Los Angeles Lakers, especially when Portland Trail Blazers are in town.

The Lakers beat the Trail Blazers 116-108 Sunday night for their 11th consecutive National Basketball Association victory without a loss this season before the home folks. It was the Blazers sixth loss in 11 road games.

The Lakers had to win it down the stretch without star centre Kareem Abdul-Jabbar who fouled out with 6:47 remaining. It was the third time this season Jabbar has fouled out compared with the last two campaigns when he fouled out only twice in each of them.

Elsewhere in the NBA on Sunday, Kansas City Kings downed New York Knicks 119-98 and Philadelphia 76ers trimmed New Orleans Jazz 113-98. Saturday's scores were: Detroit 115, New York 101; Cleveland 124, Seattle 103; Houston 99 Philadelphia 98; Milwaukee 88 Chicago 85; Golden State 112 Phoenix 106; and Portland 138 Buffalo 115.

In American Basketball Association games Sunday, New York Nets bombed Kentucky Colonels 115-86 and San Antonio Spurs topped the Spirits of St. Louis 127-115. On Saturday, it was Utah 128, St. Louis 120; Indiana 114 Virginia 106; Denver 120 Antonio 113.

Abdul-Jabbar and Gail Goodrich led the Lakers with 24 points apiece for the Lakers against the Blazers.

Walt Frazier scored 28 points for the Knicks but it was enough to offset a balanced Kansas City attack led by Nate Archibald, 24 points, Jimmy Walker, 22, add Bill Robinzine, 20.

Dour Collins scored 30 points as Fred Carter added 26 as Philadelphia increased its lead over second-place Boston to 1½ games in the Atlantic Division.

Ilie Nastase

Nastase, Ashe

Disqualified From Match

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Wimbledon champion Arthur Ashe of the United States is the latest tennis star to be involved in a row with Ilie Nastase.

Nastase's antics ended in one of the Mayan dynasty of all on Sunday night in the Masters tournament. Ile and Ashe, playing against each other, both were disqualified.

Nastase, who has been disqualified in five times this year, was warned twice about his behavior, and Ashe walked off the court. As usual, Nastase argued about line calls.

But Ashe, the quiet professional usually stays out of controversy. A spokesman of the Association of Tennis Professionals, of which Ashe is president, said he had never seen the Wimbledon champion so angry.

"He was really livid in the dressing room," the spokesman said.

Although both Ashe and Nastase were disqualified from the match, they remain eligible for the remainder of the tournament. Ashe was scheduled to play again today against Adriano Panatta of Italy.

When the game ended, Ashe was leading 4-1 in the final set.

Referee Hurst Klosterkemper of West Germany had to persuade the players to resume the match this morning. But in the end he announced both were disqualified.

"They both broke the rules. Nastase by refusing to play on when ordered to do so, and Ashe by not staying on the court," Klosterkemper said.

Manuel Orantes of Spain took a clear lead in the white group of the tournament, defeating Panatta 6-4, 7-6, Ashe and Nastase are also in that group, so Orantes was the only man to score a point.

In the blue group, defending champion Guillermo Vilas of Argentina defeated Harold Solomon of the U.S. 6-2, 6-4 and Sweden's Bjorn Borg downed Raul Ramirez of Mexico 6-3, 6-4. Vilas plays Ramirez today.

The two top players in each group go into the semi-finals next weekend.

Canadians Earn Tie with Wolves

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Vern Stenlund and Rick Doyle each scored two goals to lead London Knights to a 5-1 victory over Windsor Spitfires on Saturday. London's 12th win in 14 home games in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior action.

In other games Sunday, Kingston Canadians battled to a 4-4 tie with the Walkerton Sudbury, Oshawa Generals edged visiting Hamilton Fincups 4-3, Kitchener Rangers defeated the Black Hawks 5-3 at St. Catharines and Ottawa 67s played to a 3-3 draw with the Marlboros in Toronto.

In Sunday's only scheduled game, Peterborough Petes overwhelmed 9-5 at Sault Ste. Marie.

Before 2,500 spectators in London, the Knights zoomed to shots at Windsor goaltender Larry McGuire scored three goals in the second period and four in the third. Windsor had 37 shots on the London net.

Other Knight goals were from Dave Hillman, Jim MacRae, Steve Stockman, Tom Rowe and Rick McIntyre.

Rolly Hedges's goal on a first-period power play put the Battalions ahead 1-0 but London led the rest of the way.

There were two fights between London's Brad Marsh and Windsor's Daniel Mallette. Marsh cut Miller's face in both bouts and drew 12 penalty minutes as a result of the fighting, passing the 100-minute mark for the season.

League play resumes Tuesday with Kitchener at Hamilton, Peterborough at Oshawa, Toronto at London and St. Catharines at Windsor.

Canadiens 4 Wolves 4

Mike Gamble participated in all Sudbury scoring, getting one goal and three assists. He scored the tying goal at 19.25 of the third period after Kingston had gone ahead 4-3 with three goals earlier in the period.

Russ Jarvis scored twice for Sudbury and Rod Schutt had one goal, his 30th of the season.

Ken Linseman, Brad Halonen, Ron Davidson and Mike Gillis scored for the Canadiens who were oshkot 67-42.

Sudbury led 3-1 after the first period and 3-1 after the second before a crowd of 2,258.

Oshawa withstood a third-period Hamilton rally in the game played before 2,279 spectators.

The Generals took a 3-0 first period lead and were in front 4-1 entering the final 20 minutes. Hamilton tried to come back with two goals in the third period.

Bob Gladney, Glenn Knight, Glenn Kirkham and Paul Gardner scored for the Generals. Ted Long, Danny Scherer and Joe Coval replied for the Fincups.

Rangers 6 Hawks 3

The Rangers registered their second victory over St. Catharines in 48 hours. On Friday they downed the Hawks by an 11-3 score in Kitchener.

Dan Djakalovic and Kevin Sivret led the Rangers Sunday with two goals each. Les Campbell, Joe Grant, Dwight Foster and Mark Holbrook were the other Kitchener scorers.

Barry Callaghan, Ken Campbell, Kevin Kemeny, Greg Craig and Marc Thiel scored for the Hawks.

The Rangers, outshot 39-25, were helped by the work of goaltender Warren Skinner, brought up from Wexford Junior B raiders for the game.

67s 3 Marlboros 3

Ottawa scored two unanswered goals in the third period to gain the tie before a crowd of 3,888.

Lynn Jorgenson scored twice and Gary Dillon once to bring the Marlboros to a 3-1 lead at the end of the first period. Peter Lee scored for Ottawa with seven seconds left in the period.

After a scoreless second period, Ottawa's Larry Skinner and Steve Marengere tied the game.

Toronto outshot Ottawa 35-28. Each team received four minor penalties.

It's Good Night For Home Teams

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Home was the place to be Sunday in the Central Junior Hockey League.

With the whole six-team league in action, the home teams won all three games—Pembroke Lumber Kings 4-3 over Smiths Falls Bears and Rockland Nationals 6-3 over Brockville Warriors.

It wasn't quite the same Saturday when the Nationals won 8-3 in Nepean.

But that game and the Sunday victory remain in marginal doubt since a protest filed this week will be asked to rule on the eligibility of Jean Thibodeau, picked up Saturday by Rockland from Shawinigan in the Quebec Major Junior League. Both Nepean and Brockville are understood to be protesting his status and the outcome of the game.

Also likely to come up for discussion at the league meeting will be arena security after Tom Sinclair of Smiths Falls beaten by a fan during a penalty bout Sunday.

The fan was removed from the arena after the third-period assault, but no report of the incident had been made to Leicester police an hour after the game.

Otherwise the game was a showcase for Louis Lortie, who scored three Pembroke goals while Don Cyr and Steve Dawes scored the others. Jim Vasiu scored both Smiths Falls goals as the Bears trailed 1-0 and 4-3 in the period breaks although outshooting the Rangers 35-31.

Rockland's power play team effort with Terry Feindel scoring twice, Randy Burnett, Norm Brisbois, Mario Gelo and Harvey Milne once each. Mark Dalton, Norman Steve Barton and Tim Bell gave Nepean 1-0 and 3-1 period leads, but the Raiders were unable to make it stick as Tony Donnelly scored in the second period and Rick Minnie, Ian Campbell and Peter Lee in the third period for Pembroke.

Ellecott Fires Five for Platers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A five-goal performance by Brian Ellecott in Guelph Platers' 7-3 win over Welland Saints gives Ellecott the highest individual goal scoring during a game this season in the Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League.

In the other game Sunday, Owen Sound Greys dumped Mount Hamilton A's 9-2. On Saturday Chatham Maroons trounced Owen Sound 11-2 and league-leading Guelph downed last-place Niagara Falls Flyers 8-5.

Play resumes tonight with Welland at Hamilton.

In Welland, the five goals gave Ellecott 14 to date. He also drew an assist on a goal by Dan McCallum.

Mike Yousuck got the other Guelph goal, his 28th of the season and tops in the league.

Mark Toppazzini, Buffy Dupuis and Frank Buonocore replied for the Sabres, outshot 44-32.

Fourth-place Welland led after the first period, but trailed 3-2 entering the third.

Greys 3 A's 1

Before a home crowd of 500, Bill Brown scored two goals to pace the Greys to the win and to within one point of fourth place.

Owen Sound led 1-0 at the end of the first period and 2-1 going into the third.

Mike Hanna, Rob Thomas and Dave Landes got the other goals for Owen Sound.

Dennis Hoole scored for Mount Hamilton, which remains in third spot.

The A's received 19 of the 34 penalties, including two game misconducts.

Maroons 11 Greys 2

Playing at home before 850 spectators, the Maroons led after period leads of 4-1 and 6-2 and increased their second-place lead to 11 points.

Guy Lachapelle, Joe Campagnola and Scott McKenzie each scored two goals.

Other Chatham goals came from Doug Mason, Wayne Sander, Rick Nelson, Glen O'Neil and Doug Quinlan.

Bill Brown and Tom White replied for Owen Sound.

Barry Heaud had 40 saves in the Owen Sound net and Scott Mahoney had 28 for the Maroons.

PLAYER KILLED

BOSTON (AP) — James Dragone Jr., 18, of Watertown, Mass., has died after falling on a skate and apparently cutting a neck artery during a practice hockey game. Dragone was injured Friday while playing as a defenceman for the New Providence School of Cambridge.

HORSEMAN HONORED

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Trotting Association announced Sunday that stable owner Yves Desjardins of Montreal has won the Horseman of the Year award. Desjardins' horse, Sky's The Limit, was declared Two-Year-Old Pacing Filly of the Year. The association also awarded the Horse of the Year and Two-Year-Old Pacing Colt of the Year titles to Armbro Ranger, owned by J. E. Armstrong of Brampton, Ont. The biggest money-maker to receive an award was Alberta Star, of Selling Stables, Ont. The horse won $298,455 in 1975.

DECLARED WINNER

LIVIGNO, Italy (AP) — Swedish ace Ingmar Stenmark was declared winner of a 21-country special slalom ski race Sunday after judges reversed their earlier decision and disqualified Christian Neureuther of West Germany. Stenmark was announced the original winner with the judges disqualifying Neureuther for sliding the last gate of the third heat. The German squad lodged a protest and had Neureuther reinstated and declared the winner—but briefly. The judges ruled that the written German protest to be handed in within 15 minutes after the end of the heat, came too late.

WINS SPRINT

WEST BERLIN (CP-Reuter) — U.S. skater Peter Mueller outclassed the Soviet Union's speed skating elite at the first major World Cup meet which ended Sunday. Mueller won the men's combined sprint with a total points score of 152.855. Sylvia Burka of Winnipeg landed fifth in the competition with 177.275 points after placing eighth in the 500 metres (44.66 seconds) and fifth in the 1000 metres (1:29.53). Winnipeger Cathy Vogt placed 18th in 500 metres (46.19) and 11th at 1,000 metres to finish 19th overall with a points total of 186.165.

The Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League held its annual elections on Sunday at the Recreation Centre. Retiring as president is Bill Fyke, while the leagues' new vice president is Pam Smith. Standing are, secretary Donna Lacasfieth and treasurer Bernice Ryan. The league will probably include Belleville Yardmen, Benefit Fund, Modor Perfmetrics, Lakeside Oxygen, Mobil Chemicals, Belleville Broadcasters and a new team from Kingston.

Belleville Macs Plan Return to OFL

The Belleville McDonalds will return to Ontario Football League action in 1976 as an official member of the ten team league. This was decided at the recent annual Ontario Football Conference meeting. Although the Macs playing record was dismal, all of the clubs in the team recognized the potential of the local entry.

"They respect us and they know that with another hitter we'll be in the fight for a playoff spot," said general manager Doug Adams, who attended the meeting.

As far as the OFL is concerned it has turned down an immediate offer to play with the Western Major Football League in favour of an agreement with the OAAA. The agreement will mean that OFL teams will participate in the Ontario Amateur Softball Association tournament, which sends teams to the Canadian Championships.

A new wrinkle in the OFL constitution states that a team can use a player on a five game "trial period" and then the player must decide if he wants to stick with the club, or go back to his old team.

Something which will add a new dimension to the game will be tried in exhibition games during the season. Instead of four balls constituting a walk, only three balls will be allowed to pitchers. There should add some offence to the OFL games, in preseason play.

A new league executive has been formed with Wilf Garrett of St. Catherines the Chairman of the Board, President is Pat O'Brey, while Art Smoke of Toronto is secretary. Laurie Dunbar of Hamilton is once again league treasurer and Peter Moore of Burlington returns as Umpire in Chief.

As for the Belleville entry, Bob Saxby of McDonalds will once again back the OFL club. At this time the club executive is being set up, with a senior football tournament in Belleville one of the things planned.

On the playing end of it, what Doug Adams is looking for is one more pitcher to go with his present staff of Ted Waite, Jim Chase and Scott Reid. Some of the pitchers available are Ted Boy of Cardinal, Wayne Caley and Barry Timbers of Oshawa and Ted Hodgson of Brockville.

"Our pitchers worked too hard last year, we need one more major leaguer to help us out," said Adams.

As for hitting, well, Gary Coyer has indicated he will be with Belleville for the entire season next year and that should make a difference. Also, Wayne McTaggart is having surgery on his knee and if that comes out well, the Macs will have a steady hitting third baseman.

Training for the Macs begins in March, with the season starting early in May.

Owners Doug Adams, Bob Turcotte and Dale Duval are looking toward a new divisional alignment, which would place Bavington, Newmarket, Toronto, Oshawa and Belleville in the East. In the west would be London, Woodstock, St. Catharines, Hamilton and Kitchener. That will be decided in January of next year.

This time around the All Star game will be held in Woodstock, although Belleville did bid for it, they were outvoted by the Western cities in attendance.

Jim's Pizza Juveniles Are Tops at Kingston

KINGSTON (Special) — Belleville Jim's Pizzeria turned solid goaltending and strong over-all production into a championship in the Kingston Township Juvenile Hockey Tournament here, Sunday.

The Belleville club gave up only four goals in the three games it took to capture the A division crown. Bowmanville was the consolation champion.

Jim's advanced to the final with wins over Trenton Kinsmen and Kingston City. And in the showdown with Whitby-Brooklin, the Belleville team skated to a 3-2 victory.

Mark Foster's goal with a little more than five minutes to play snapped a 2-2 tie and gave the Belleville squad the seed in the championship final. Belleville opened up a 2-1 lead in the first period and the teams played through a scoreless middle frame before Whitby-Brooklin got an equal terms in the third period's first minute.

Ross MacLeod and Marty Lavery supplied the other Belleville goals. Counting for the losers were Dan Golegoy and Tom Foster.

In the A semi-final, Jim's goalie Allan Pratt closed the door on Kingston City in his team's 6-0 win. The Belleville team broke up a close match by breaking loose for four goals in the third period.

Foster fired two Jim's goals with singles for Gord Male, Tom Belch, Paul Hayman and Kelvin Pope.

In their first start, the Belleville skaters turned back Trenton 4-3.

Pope was a two-goal shooter for Jim's. His second goal proved to be the winner. Male supplied the insurance marker with only five seconds to play. The other Belleville goal went to Roger Chapman.

Trenton got one each from Mike Martin and Dale Macklinish. Maril Meehan was in goal for Jim's in the wins over Trenton and Whitby-Brooklin.

Soviet Navy Would Oppose U.S. in Lebanon

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), said Sunday if the United States Navy tried to intervene in Lebanon's civil war, it would be opposed by the Soviet Navy in the Mediterranean.

"Progressive Arab peoples will not allow the United States to turn Lebanon into a second Vietnam," Arafat said in a Belgrade interview broadcast on Hungarian television.

Arafat warned Lebanese leaders who oppose the leftist progressive Lebanese forces and the Palestinians fighting with them", against trying to call in the U.S. Sixth Fleet, which landed marines on Beirut's beaches during a 1958 Lebanese crisis.

If this happened, the U.S. would find that its fleet "is no longer the single actor here . . . but faced by a friendly Soviet fleet," Arafat said.

Moslem armies have been warring against Christian armies in Lebanon since April, demanding a change in the country's laws which give the 40-per-cent Christian minority control.

Anti-inflation Bill Gets Third Reading This Week

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's embattled anti-inflation bill is expected to get final approval early this week, completing a rocky ride through the Commons.

The legislation, which comes up for third reading today, is expected to pass easily on the strength of the Liberal House majority.

But it will not have the support of the Progressive Conservatives who voted for the selective wage and price controls program on second reading.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield withdrew his support after the government refused to shorten the program to 18 months. It is scheduled to run until the end of 1978—3½ years.

A Conservative amendment calling for an 18-month limit was defeated last week by the government.

The New Democratic Party has opposed the program from the outset, saying it discriminates against wage earners and leaves loopholes for big business and those on higher salaries.

Stanley Knowles, NDP House leader, said the party will maintain its opposition to the end. But it will not attempt to force a long delay at third reading.

"I would think it will likely go through by Tuesday, maybe Monday night."

He said there have been no negotiations among House leaders to limit debate at final reading.

GREEN FACES ?

Sure . . . some color televisions give you green faces, but to mention green arms and hands! But the difference you buy at Angelo's will never do that. No sir. If you have the good fortune (not to mention discriminating taste) to buy a color television at Angelo's, the only green faces you will be your friends and neighbors. Green with envy, that is.)
Come on into Angelo's and see what your money can buy. We're at the Belleville Plaza.

Dixie Democrat Combines Conservatism, Liberalism

AMERICUS, Ga. (CP) — Bill Harrowitz took a long and obviously gratifying swig of homemade whisky, swore fiercely at his smarting eye, however, and then fleeing with a kick in the shin and got ready to talk politics.

A small-time peanut farmer in southwest Georgia, he calls himself a Dixie Democrat, a peculiar blend of southern voter resentment, conservatism, traces of racism and a profound dislike for "welfare layabouts" and politicians.

And as with numerous others like him interviewed across Georgia, Alabama and Louisiana, Bill Harrowitz is deeply worried by what he sees — he thinks he sees — happening to the Democratic Party as it prepares for the 1976 presidential election.

Like many others also, he is likely to surprise you with his choice of the man he thinks can save the party: Jimmy Carter, 51-year-old former Georgia governor and an announced but little-known candidate for the Democratic nomination.

"Not many people have been of him," says Harrowitz. "But they're going to. He's our only hope."

"The people in the South," says Harrowitz, "are sick to death with having the liberals run our party. They can't win elections and even if they could then they couldn't run the country. George Wallace is our kind of candidate. But then he can't win either, Carter is our man."

Wallace, Alabama governor crippled from the waist down after being shot by a would-be assassin during his 1972 bid for the presidency, recently announced he will run again for the Democratic nomination.

As an evil-smelling bayou near Breaux Bridges in southern Louisiana hurry fishermen Mike Le Breton echoed the Harrowitz theme.

"What's happening," he says, "is what's happened last two or three elections: We get some one like Wallace and he tells us if you don't want the Communists vote for me. Then somebody else stands up and says Wallace is a Nazi and after that we don't know where the hell we stand. So the party splits. Most people vote for some big swing maniac and we end up losing another election. Carter could save us."

Joel Harland, a hardware store operator near Montgomery, Ala., and an executive of the local Democratic party organization, says he first loyalty will always be to Wallace.

"Had George has had a lot of good chances and he hasn't made it. True, he's probably kept the party from going too far left but that doesn't help if your man isn't in the White House.

"In Carter we'd have someone whose views aren't too different from those of most southerners and for once we'd have one of our own who had something else — respect from people all over this country."

None of this, of course, implies that Carter has moved into the front ranks of the 10 announced Democratic contenders. But it does seem to indicate that two years of quasi-unofficial campaigning have given him a substantial base among grass-roots party members in the Deep South at least.

Prolific Writer Plans 30 More

NEW YORK (AP) — He already has 43 books to his credit, but Louis L'Amour has no intention of putting the fastest typewriter in the West out to pasture. In fact, he plans to write at least 30 more.

"I'm always working on a book," said L'Amour, who writes about three a year and prefers to call them "novels of the frontier" rather than Western. "I never stop. Sometimes I work on several books at the same time. One in the morning, one in the afternoon — and if an idea for another book comes to me while I'm working, I stop and start out on it."

L'Amour, a rugged man who stands six feet one and weighs 220 pounds, "is more than I should", is quick to add, however, that although he writes quickly, "a lifetime goes into each book; all my knowledge goes into them."

Most of L'Amour's books have been published in paperback, although some have appeared in hard cover. "I started out in hard cover," he recalled with a smile, "but I soon found I could get a better deal in paper, and I like that big audience that paper has."

He estimated that close to 55 million copies of his books have been sold in the United States and abroad, where they have been translated into 17 languages.

"I'm not too interested in the critics," he said. "I'm interested in the books. I read history all the time; I may have a huge audience, but it's a very aware audience. They know a lot of what you are writing about, and if you make a mistake you are in trouble with them.

"So, if I say a tree or a certain plant grows in some part of the country, it grows there. I write about areas that I've been to, explored and become familiar with."

L'Amour, who declines to give his age, currently is engrossed in a saga that began about three years ago.

"I'd written a number of books that seemed to fit in with plans to tell the story of the opening of the frontier through the eyes of three families, the Sacketts (originally from Wales and England), the Talons (France) and the Chantrys (Ireland). By the time I explored these families their beginnings in Europe and their movement to America and their actions there I figure I'll need at least 30 books."

His latest hardbound novel, Over on the Dry Side, deals with Owen Chantry. His latest paperback, The Man from the Broken Hills, deals with Mike Talon, who is half Talon, half Sackett.

L'Amour, a talkative, easygoing man, said he gets much of his information by reading history books — he has a library of 7,000 volumes — and as from such secondary sources as pamphlets and books. It's "I travel the back alleys of history, looking for the things no one seems to remember or know about" — and by traveling.

He has been traveling much of his life, leaving his North Dakota home at 15 to begin a journey that took him to such jobs as lumberjack, cowpuncher, sailor, elephant handler, boxer and construction worker.

THE UNEXPLAINED
by Allen Spraggett

The Transfixed Mirror

Strange things happen when death lurks nearby.

On 29 January 20, 1936, in the War Memorial Hospital, Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., a man named Jefferey Dernelier lay dying.

He was in a ward, probably for indigents, with four other men. The others saw Dernelier pick up a hand mirror from the enamel bed table beside his bed and stare long and hard into it. He seemed . . . mesmerized.

"Ee-ee-ee-ee-ee!"

A piercing shriek rent the air and Dernelier flung the mirror to the floor, face down, surprising by not smashing it.

"I'm dying!" he screamed. "I've seen the face of D-E-E-A-T-H!"

This last word was a long drawn-out wail that sent shivers through all who heard it.

Then, in a voice suddenly low and calm, Dernelier murmured, as though to no one in particular: "You won't be able to pick it up that mirror."

Five minutes later Jefferey Dernelier was dead.

Then the macabre fun started. For 24 hours nurses, orderlies and even doctors tried to pick up the mirror the dying man had flung from himself. It was uncanny. The mirror stuck to the floor as though fixed with super glue. Trying, pushing, pulling or scraping with knife or scalpel would budge it.

It lay for sees where it had fallen.

Finally, a surgical nurse named Adeline Koop, trying to pry up the mirror with a scalpel, succeeded in it when it came into the air and momentarily held. It landed on the floor, face up and unbroken.

The mirror was meticulously examined but no visible reason for its inexplicable adhesive qualities was found.

Many Causes To Kidney Stones

By GEORGE C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Recently I had severe pains across the kidney area and in the bladder area. After urine tests and X-rays I was told I had a small kidney stone in the upper part of the bladder. After two weeks and severe pains it dissolved.

I just wanted to know what to do in the future. I still have soreness. I'd like to avoid another attack.—Mrs. J. W.

If the stone showed in the bladder by X-ray you must likely passed it rather than have leg it dissolve of itself. Kidney stone pains is one of the most severe a person can suffer and easily sympathize with your wish to avoid another similar attack.

I'll try to offer some hints.

Causes of stones are many. An infection in the urinary tract is one. When tissue becomes damaged that it cannot assist in removal of wastes, calculi (stones) can form. Checking the source of any infection would be the only preventive against this.

Excessive ingestion of calcium itself can promote some types of stone formation. If gout is present and if the stone contains urates, then other foods (purine-containing) is suspected.

A functional obstruction of the urinary flow can be a factor, allowing the calculi material to crystallize and form stones. Overactivity of the parathyroid gland (which governs calcium metabolism) is another possibility to be considered.

So the chemical make-on of the stone is important in proper diagnosis. Since you don't know this, the important thing is to pursue the matter with your doctor.

In any event, ample fluid intake is important. By this is meant about three quarts a day. It's a variation of the old "grass doesn't grow in a busy street" idea. Usually, stones will not "grow" in an adequately functioning urinary system.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there any harm in the unborn child if the mother flies in an airplane during her pregnancy?—Mrs. C.

It is a matter of practical judgment. You wouldn't want to travel in such an area/ed airconverted fat in a plane travelling a long distance a mile or more above the ground. If delivery is imminent.

However, I am not aware of any immediate damage to the fetus or revealing from jet travel. Women subject to miscarriage should exercise prudence about any undue activities, including travel.

As for individual cases, the woman should ask her physician. His answer would be based on the state and stage of the pregnancy and her previous pregnancy experience.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 32 years old, and I suffer with gall bladder attacks. I know they are working on something to dissolve them. How long do you feel it will be before they have this type of cure? I'd like to avoid the surgery.—J. B.

It's still experimental. It may be some time before such treatment is available for general use, if it ever is. At your age, you would have to consider surgical removal to forestall problems.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Will you explain once and for all to my sister that vinegar will not make you lose weight? She is 22 years old, is 5 feet, and weighs 118 pounds.—Miss R. A.

Here is a question for your sister, who evidently thinks it does: How?

CASTING COMPLETE

Lesley Warren will portray Rudolph Valentino's first wife in the television movie "Valentino," in which Italian actor Tiasco Nero will play the famed lover of the silent screen. Milton Berle will play film pioneer Jesse Lasky.

Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

Tuesday, Dec. 2

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can easily win co-operation today if your approach is frank and open. Lay your cards on the table.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep your material goals in mind today. They'll inspire you to put forth the effort for success in your endeavors.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You'll be meeting someone especially where you'll have an instant affinity for. An old friend will make the introduction.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): This is a good time to begin a creative project, especially if it's something to do with beautifying your surroundings.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The way you'll handle yourself today will make a lasting impression upon those you meet for the first time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Today, don't leave an important matter half-finished. It's to your advantage to clean it up now, not all possible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Weigh your alternatives carefully today before making an important decision. You have more advantages than you may realize.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22): Your material prospects are extremely bright today. Concentrate on situations that can offer you personal gain.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21): What you hope for is not out of reach today if you gamble on your ingenuity and resourcefulness, rather than someone else's.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your best returns today come by letting others think your ideas are their own. Results, not credit, are what to look for.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19): Don't be a loner today—get out, mix with friends. If you don't have anything on the agenda, stir something up.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20): Speed as much time as possible today on a goal of paramount importance. Good things will happen if you'll work at it.

Welshman Develops New Sheep Breed

ST. PAUL'S, N.S. (CP) — An Australian sheep breeder who raises sheep near this Picton County village has a new breed of sheep on his farm, the third time in nine years he has introduced a new breed to Nova Scotia.

Tony Turner is a knowledgeable sheepherd who arrived from New Wales in 1966, bringing with him his sheep-raising skills.

Five years ago he brought in the Clun Forest breed and three years ago the Dorset Horns and Suffolk Horns. Both have survived on his farm and have spread and now they've been joined by the Welsh Mountain breed.

The sheep are a key part of Mr. Turner's mixed-farm operation, which also includes a chicken hatchery and Welsh Blacks beef cattle, which he crosses with Gurnsey bulls.

The new arrivals include five ewes and a ram which he estimates they will cost him $800 a head by the time they get out of quarantine. From this stock he plans to develop a small flock that is to be bred with Hampshire and Cheviot rams on an experimental basis.

Mr. Turner plans to produce a breeding stock for sheep farmers in Canada and the United States.

He says U.S. interests would be particularly interested in the Jacobs breed, particularly weavers who want to get that is naturally self-colored wool.

The breed is believed to be hardy because of those sheep raised by the biblical Jacob and from which he had made the coat of many colors.

Mr. Turner is hoping this latest experiment will be as successful as the two previous ventures.

The stories of his work with the Clun Forest and Wiltshire breeds are stories of success.

He brought 20 Clun ewes and a ram to Canada and their old "astonishingly well" and produced a crossbred from quantities two years ago he has more than 200 of them for sale.

The breed dropped in market potential after the Second World War when sheep were large and "woolies." In reality, they shed their wool.

"This lack of wool reduced the price," he says Mr. Turner, and with current wool prices is "large scale sheep" demand for carcasses meaned good prices and "I consider there's a future for this breed."

Since their release from quarantine early in the year, breeding stock has been sold to interests in Louisiana, Vermont and Maine.

"Every American seem particularly interested in this breed because of their ability to shed in their wool, thus obviating the necessity for shearing."

Rent in the City, Buy in the Country

TORONTO (CP) — The Pull-ings live in this city from Monday to Friday. But their home is 70 miles to the north and has a mountain view.

"Rent in the city, but buy where your heart is," said Tony Pullen, 30, who works for a Toronto brokerage.

The same is by followed by Wendy Enfield and Brian and Joanne Bailey, fellow Torontonians who live for the weekend.

For these couples the way of life they are following is a rejection of traditional city living and an acceptance of leisure and sporting activities as their key considerations when buying real estate.

Tony Pullen recalled a time when they contemplated making a city home their major investment, but he heard of a development being built in Col-lingwood and that changed their minds.

Chalet is the designation of the two-storey home they helped design, but it has all the modern conveniences of a luxurious city home that now would be well beyond their price range.

The chalet contains four bedrooms and two bathrooms, one of which includes a whirlpool tub.

Skiing is the prime attraction for the residents of this sub-division in which the low-bars to the slopes are within walking distance.

The chalet, however, is a year-round magnet.

"We spent one weekend in the city recently," Mr. Pullen said, "I felt cooped up and if I had to remain in Toronto every weekend, I think I would go crazy."

Total cost of their investment, including furniture, is estimated at $40,000.

The Averysfields rent an apartment in the city and bought their Collingwood chalet as a home four years ago.

"It started with skiing," said Mrs. Averysfield. "Some friends invited us up for a weekend and we knew this was where we wanted to be every weekend."

Mr. Averysfield, an accountant, and his wife also stress the outdoor attractions of chalet life. He plays tennis and they have a golf club.

Seeks Way to Use Old Motor Oil Again

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal officials say a use has been found for the millions of gallons of used motor oil that flows annually from Canadian crankcases.

Burning the oil, dumping it into sewers or spreading it on dirt roads to keep down the dust all close environmental hazards, the government says.

Tests at the St. Lawrence Cement Co. plant in Mississauga, Ont., by the federal and Ontario governments showed the waste oil can be used as a supplementary fuel in cement kilns.

Officials estimate that old lubricating oil could supply up to 15 per cent of the annual fuel requirements of the country's cement plants — largely dependent on fuel oil and natural gas.

Use of waste oil in domestic and commercial furnaces, however, poses formidable difficulties and unacceptable hazards.

Burners for those furnaces are designed to accept a narrow range of fuel. The waste oil, contaminated by water, dirt, grease and gasoline, would cause excessive wear, clogging and poor combustion control, which results in soot, smoke, pollution and the danger of explosions, the government experts said.

Oil burners at the cement plants, however, were designed to cope with fluctuating fuel quality or would burn the used oil.

The study was made by the federal energy and environment department and the Ontario environment department.

Quinlan Case Not Likely to Happen Here

OTTAWA (CP) — A Karen Ann Quinlan lookalike is in Canada, says the past president of the Canadian Medical Association.

Cardiologist Wallace Tregle said in an interview that the Canadian legal system and "some flexibility in medical ethics" here make the difference.

The legal battle in the Quinlan case—whether a New Jersey woman suffering irreversible brain damage should be kept alive—brings up two issues:

1. Does such massive brain damage constitute death?

2. Does stopping a respirator keeping such a person alive constitute murder?

The Tregle said it is medically and legally accepted in Canada that a person pronounced irreparably dead is dead.

"This is something we can with every day and in my mind maintain that a someone who is 'dead' is really bad medicine."

A person's brain is considered dead, he explained, if there is a need for assisted ventilation of the lungs, the body temperature is extremely low and there are no reflex responses in the brain stem or deep tendons. Also, there will be no brain beats.

Ottawa neurologist Edward Alack said a patient in this situation would be dead.

"If there is no electrical activity and the other criteria are met, the patient is cerebrally dead," he said.

Dr. Alack said in these cases life support systems are disconnected for this is not mercy-killing.

"Mercy-killing refers to terminally-ill individuals who can be helped to die," he said. "A neurologically dead individual cannot survive in this."

Dr. Alack said pulling the plug on a neurologically dead patient brings painless death within a few minutes. The heart stops functioning because of lack of oxygen.

The decision to do this is discussed with the patient's relatives, he said.

"It is not a tough decision to pull the plug, because usually it is obvious," said Dr. Alack. "You are not left with a human being in a case of neurological death, only with a pair of lungs."

Tenant Group Asks To Stop Evictions

TORONTO (CP) — The Federation of Limited Dividend Tenants Saturday asked Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson to stop members' evictions, a sharp rise in rents and poor maintenance.

The federation says it represents tenants in about 3,500 units in the Metropolitan Toronto area covered under the federal limited dividend program.

Jack DeClerk, a spokesman for the 40 federation members who met with the minister, said Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC) has approved rent increases averaging almost 30 per cent.

The limited dividends program, funded through CMHC, offers reduced interest rates to developers in order to provide housing for low-and middle-income groups. Loans are provided on the condition owners restrict their profits to five to eight per cent. CMHC allows rent increases only to cover increased operating costs.

Forces Not Seeking Andrews in King Case

TORONTO (CP) — The Star quotes spokesman for the RCMP and the FBI liaison office at the United States embassy in Ottawa as saying no request has been received from Washington to locate Clifford Andrews for questioning in the killing of Martin Luther King.

Mr. Andrews is one of two men that U.S. black leaders say might be able to provide new evidence on the death of the civil rights leader. The leaders say the other man is serving a life sentence in a federal prison in Ashland, Ky.

Mr. Andrews, 48, born in Toronto, was released from Kilmer Correctional Centre here in September.

Thomas Burns, acting superintendent at Mimico, scoffed at the idea that Mr. Andrews might be involved in the April, 1968, slaying of Rev. King in Memphis, Tenn.

"I got to know him quite well, and got to bear through the grapevine here that he had spoken of the involvement in the past to kill King," Mr. Burns said.

Tax Incentives Needed To Curb TV Violence

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario government should offer tax incentives to advertisers to help curb violence depicted in television programs, says a brief presented Friday to the royal commission on violence in the communications industry by the East Parry Sound board of education.

Trustee Eric Ulrick suggested that the commission recommend the establishment of a tax rebate of about 10 per cent of the television rate to advertisers sponsoring family entertainment programs shown between 5 p.m. and 9 p.m.

Tie Vote Leaves Strike in Doubt

THE CANADIAN PRESS

A virtual tie appears to be the result of balloting Monday by striking inside postal workers on the tentative agreement reached during the weekend by union and post office negotiators.

"It could be as close as 50-50. We're going to double-check everything" said an obviously jubilant Jean-Claude Parrot, chief negotiator for the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW), in Ottawa early today.

Mr. Parrot's comments followed nearly 10 hours of vote tabulation from locals across the country which produced unexpected support for union negotiators and left the fate of the strike—now beginning its seventh week—hanging in the balance.

"Whatever the final outcome is, Mr. MacKasey (Postmaster-General Bryce MacKasey) had better take a long hard look at this vote. With 50 per cent voting against the proposal it will be hard to keep industrial peace in the post office," he said.

The neck-and-neck race went right down to the wire before CUPW headquarters in Ottawa decided to withhold any official announcements on the final outcome until later today.

There were conflicting reports from the Toronto local on the count there. Mr. Parrot said, one report said 52 per cent had voted acceptance of the offer, but the union discounted that figure, saying it was too high.

Mr. Parrot said the union would be looking for a new mandate from the postmaster-general should the final tally produce a rejection of the post office offer.

But he said the union would abide by the final outcome of the vote, even if the majority was 50.1 per cent.

The union executive urged the rank and file to reject the proposal, which did not alter significantly terms originally put forward by Postmaster-General Bryce MacKasey when the strike began six weeks ago.

The executive also ordered the reported 2,700 CUPW members who crossed picket lines and returned to their jobs during the strike not be allowed to vote on the proposed agreement.

However, among individual reports available were a 71 per cent rejection by the militant Montreal local, and 56 per cent acceptance by British Columbia, although Vancouver turned down the agreement by a 54-per-cent margin.

The tentative agreement calls for an increase of $1.70 an hour in four stages during a 39-month contract which expires July, 1977, and a 40-hour work week.

A cost-of-living clause would permit a maximum increase of 10 cents an hour every three months, the same as the settlement received by the 18,000 letter carriers last spring.

Mail handlers would receive an additional 20 cents an hour during the life of the contract, bringing their hourly wages to $6.26 cents less than mail carriers.

There would be proportionate adjustments for part-time employees.

Top hourly rate for the inside workers under the old contract, earned by about 10,000 of the 22,000 members, was $4.59.

Weekend shift premiums would be 60 cents an hour for Saturdays and 75 cents an hour for Sundays with a 40-cents-an-hour premium from 5 p.m. to 8 a.m.

Mr. MacKasey confirmed Monday that union negotiators had rejected an offer for a three-year 27½-hour work week in favor of a tentative agreement "based on increased productivity as measured by a formula suitable to both management and labor."

The union's last wage demand was for a $2.72 hourly boost over 27 months, a work week reduced to 35 hours and a more generous cost-of-living clause.

The release contained a statement by Mr. MacKasey issued Monday outside the Commons he was pushed why the union would accept the tentative settlement Saturday and reject it today after then recommend rejection to the membership.

But the "memorandum of settlement" document received by post office does not indicate the union agreed, to do anything but submit the proposal to the membership.

Belleville Votes Return to Work

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

Canadian Union of Postal Workers local president Walter Yateman refused today to release the results of Monday's vote on a tentative agreement with the post office, but sources say the majority of the 38 CUPW members here voted to return to work.

In Trenton and Brighton, where postal workers returned work in Mid-November, no vote was held.

"Obviously they were willing to accept anything (in returning to work)," said Mr. Yateman. "So there wasn't any point in it.

The 12 workers in Trenton and six in Brighton had been previously suspended by the national executive, said the local president. That means they cannot "partake in any union activity" — including a vote.

Five inside workers who crossed union picket lines to return to work in Belleville, did not attend Monday's union meeting here. "But they wouldn't have got a ballot anyway," said Mr. Yateman.

He refused to release local vote results until results of the national vote were known and instructions were received from the national executive.

In Trenton where the union local has been saddled with the Belleville local by the national executive, former president Clarence Pickell refused comment today.

"I will not make any comment less it's pertaining to post office business," he said. Reached at the post office, he said "I am here to work, not to discuss union business.

Mr. Pickell said Monday the union had received nothing from the national executive, and consequently couldn't decide whether to vote.

Dog-gone Canine Fees Could Cause Growls

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

There's a bit of a financial bite in the books for dog owners in Belleville.

And, once bitten an owner may think twice about the number of dogs almost the house.

City council Monday night approved the draft of a new ordinance that will increase the cost of keeping canines.

This means a new dog licensing and registration bylaw will be up for approval by council in two weeks.

Biggest single increase proposed in the bylaw draft involves owners of pure-bred dog kennels.

The fee would jump fewer $10 — $25 — a stipulation laid down by a provincial legislature, although Ald. Jean Smith said she thought kennel owners should pay even more.

Other fee increases, with current cost in brackets: Male $5 (5A); each additional dog $4 (4); female $8 (8B); each additional female $12 (8B).

The owner of an impounded dog still has 72 hours to reclaim it — and must pay its maintenance plus $10. Unreclaimed, dogs may be killed or sold.

Mr. Purcell reported to council that noise caused by kennels in residential neighborhoods is a source of frequent complaint.

But there is no animal legislation limiting the number of kennels — 13 of which were licensed this year in residential Belleville.

The only control would be to define a kennel as a land use under the Planning Act — thus regulating them to certain areas of the city.

Meantime, the Municipal Act gives local government the right to restrict the number of dogs.

But the restriction is by individual — not by household. Therefore, it's not practical to impose such a limit in the bylaw reported Mr. Purcell.

"However, the licence fee for additional dogs may be a means to force people to think seriously before keeping more than one dog," he said. "The fees in the new bylaw have been increased — with this in mind."

Mr. Purcell said he had deliberately introduced the issue in a form of a council report instead of a bylaw for immediate approval.

This would permit time for any public input before the draft proposal appears as an ordinance — no council's agenda is in weeks.

GM Orders 28 Women Employees Be Sterilized

TORONTO (CP) — Mike Breaugh (NDP—Oshawa) said Monday that 28 women employed at the General Motors at Canada Ltd. battery plant in Oshawa, Ont., have been told they must be sterilized or provide medical proof they cannot conceive a child if they want to retain their jobs.

In the legislature he asked Labor Minister Dr. Bette Stephenson if she was aware of the requirements. She said she was not.

Outside the house, Mr. Breaugh said the employees had received written notice from the company regarding the sterilization requirements.

Some of the workers, he said, have been told they would lose all lower salaries if another part of the plant closed.

Mr. Breaugh said the company's action was prompted by fears of law suits resulting from pregnant women developing acute poisoning.

"The whole thing is ridiculous," he said. "I never thought a company would demand sterilization, or even suggest it."

Mr. Breaugh said the workers in question have appealed to the Ontario Human Rights Commission.

Health Minister Frank Miller said outside the house he was unaware of the sterilization requirement.

"I'm astounded by it all," Mr. Miller said. "I've just got to see it to believe it."

Nick Hall, a spokesman for General Motors, said the work will be transferred out of the battery plant.

"There is no definite proof that there would be problems for a fetus caused by the lead oxide," he said. "But there is a chance, and we can't take that chance."

Jury Finds Turner Not Guilty

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

A 12-member jury deliberated for less than 20 minutes Monday to find Donald Turner, 16, of Prospect Hill in Trenton not guilty of a charge of assault causing bodily harm in Hastings County Court at the courthouse here.

The Crown had alleged Turner committed assault causing bodily harm to Robert Hurst, 16, of Pine St., in Belleville during a brawl following a juvenile dance party at Little's Rink here June 8.

The verdict ended a two-day trial before Judge Russell C. Honey.

Mackasey Discounts Close Union Vote

OTTAWA (CP)—Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey discounted today union claims that the close vote of "an extremely close" vote Monday by striking inside postal workers on a tentative agreement reached during the weekend by union and post office negotiators.

Mr. Mackasey termed the vote "a comedy of errors," while charging that "about 3,000 of the union's members were disenfranchised by the referendum."

"There's only about 22,000 members in the union," he said. "So when 50 per cent aren't allowed to cast their ballots, I can't get too excited about the results."

Mr. Mackasey said he was certain the majority of the membership would be back on the job Monday.

"Any vote purported to be so close is a phoney. It's a clear indication that the membership rejects its executive. Frankly, I don't care what the vote is."

Mr. Mackasey predicted the terms of the post office offer would not change should results of the balloting produce a rejection of the offer.

Mr. Mackasey re-affirmed his intention not to negotiate an end to the strike, should Monday's voting fail to produce a settlement.

Details of New Bridge Site Expected in 2 Weeks: O'Neil

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

A proposal to replace the Bay Bridge link between Belleville and Prince Edward County may be pondered.

Details will be known in two weeks.

Local government politicians in the area will be the first to hear latest developments of almost a year's study and evaluation by provincial government experts.

Hugh O'Neil, MPP Quinte, Monday night said a meeting has been called for all elected representatives in the study area Dec. 11 in Belleville.

The indication a proposed project to replace the causeway-swingbridge route of Highway 14 across the Bay of Quinte comes in the announcement from Mr. O'Neil's Queen's Park office.

It said the Belleville meeting will hear the experts review progress of their study to date "and details of the recommended scheme."

The meeting comes 16 months after official latest to replace the bridge was first announced by then Transport and Communications Minister John Rhodes.

Since that time studies and discussions — with both local politicians and the public — have been held by a ministry project team on both Bay shores in a 15-mile study area reaching from Point Anne in CFB Trenton.

In July traffic data was collected at strategic highway access points around Prince Edward County.

The study process to date — involving local discussions with the experts — has seen a number of alternatives suggested on site and structure.

Replacement suggestions have included a high-level bridge, a drawbridge or a tunnel.

Locations suggested — other than the present Belleville-Rodhouse site — have included linking the Amelianburgh Township shore with the mainland at Layalist — Wallbridge Road or Sidney St. in west Belleville.

City hall has fought to retain the crossing at its present site. Early this year a brief to a senate of Ontario cabinet ministers in Belleville said local official plans pointed to the bridge's use 14 fait remaining where it is.

The ministry's study team was told in March — the last time it met with local elected spokesman — that the city's program for new traffic routes is predicated on a crossing at the present site.

The project team broke its route planning phase for the new Highway 14 crossing into four stages.

The first phase gathered public input last spring. The second stage was to develop alternative solutions which in turn would be carried to an evaluation stage — the results of which would go to the minister for approval.

The Belleville meeting is set for the main court room of Hastings County Administration building at 7:30 p.m.

QFL Faces Problems

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL), the province's largest labor organization, faces serious financial problems and has an operating deficit of $185,000, it was announced Monday. In a report to be presented today at the 14th general meeting of the 37,000-member union, QFL general secretary Fernand Daoust said "minor miracles" are worked every day to maintain payments to union employees and the organization's creditors.

Sources described the positions taken as extreme, with British Prime Minister Harold Wilson indicating that Britain might join the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

Olympic Protection Costly

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister James Richardson said Monday night it will cost about $25.5 million to provide armed forces personnel for the Olympic Games. He said if meeting of the Commons defence committee that sum is above the pay and allowance of the about 18,200 persons the armed forces will provide for the Montreal Games next summer.

Israelis Hit Camps

BEIRUT (AP) — Thirty Israeli jets roared in from the sea today to attack Palestinian refugee camps in northern and southern Lebanon with bombs and rockets. The Palestine news agency said first reports showed 28 persons killed or wounded. There was no immediate explanation from Israel for the attacks.

Carlos Gains Victory

MADRID (CP) — Government sources say Premier Arias Carlos has won his first confrontation with Spain's powerful right-wing with the Council of the Realm today nominating the king's choice, former vice-premier Torcuato Fernandez Miranda, to be president of the Cortes Spanish parliament.

Extends Price Freeze

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett Monday extended the price freeze in British Columbia for six months, opening the second stage of his New Democratic Party government's moves to supplement federal anti-inflation programs. The premier told a news conference it became obvious after last week's federal-provincial meeting in Ottawa that B. C. could not rely exclusively on the federal anti-inflation board.

Bonds Fail to Sell Out

MONTREAL (CP) — Two of the largest Canadian bond issues ever floated on the United States market have failed to sell out and are trading at discounts, dealers have reported. Of the $500 million in Hydro-Quebec and the Province of Ontario debentures placed on the New York market, dealers estimate at least $78 million worth of the bonds remain unsold. The debentures went on sale in November.

Committee Continues Study of Lockup

PICTON — A special committee of town council members appointed to investigate Picton's lock-up facilities at the old county court house here will continue its study of alternatives to the existing cells.

Councillor John Kinney, a member of the four-man committee appointed in November, told town council Monday "five or six possibilities" will be explored.

His committee has met with Judge Wilfried Lane and Jesse Hicks, members of the Picton Police Commission and Picton police chief Charles Fletcher for discussion and a tour of the cells.

It was noted that Judge Lane raised the question of responsibility should there be a suicide in the lock-up and indicated that it would rest clearly with the town.

He said that a new facility is "an absolute must."

Chief Fletcher familiarized the committee with various inadequacies of the lock-up facilities and police office facilities.

After reviewing a report of the special committee's initial meeting with police commission members, town councillors debated the need for a new lock-up.

Councillor Harry Abram suggested that there is no responsibility on the town's part for any suicide that might occur in the lock-up.

Town solicitor Jack Ward observed that it would be doubtful that the municipality would be faced with the entire responsibility for such an incident.

Councillor Norman Marsh said the cell doors mentioned as potential hazards in suicide attempts do not seem different from any others he has seen pictured in news rooms or buildings.

"There are two things confronting us, "asserted councillor Charles Hyndman.

He emphasized that the town with its population of fewer than 5,000 persons must decide what it can afford and what is feasible here.

Frankford Doubts Ability to Supply Water to 9 Homes

By AL ZAAS
Staff Reporter

FRANKFORD — Frankford Reeve Carman Mikel and Ontario environment ministry officials did not outright refuse pleas by nine Hastings County tid. 5 homeowners for water from the village Monday, but made it plain such a possibility is, at best, remote.

The homeowners, clustered around Pitcher's Sidestad, have been living with undrinkable well water for three months.

Led by spokeswoman Rose Cisansky, they again demanded Sidney Township council act to alleviate the problem, caused, the homeowners say, by seepage into their wells from a nearby farmer's silo.

Present at Monday's meeting, Frankford Reeve Mikel said he held little hope for an immediate supply of water to the township residents, about three quarters of a mile from Frankford's western limit.

"I'm sure that there is no way at this time that Frankford can supply water out there," he said.

Reevo Mikel said the village is facing a water shortage — necessitating this summer the imposition of water use restrictions — and the environment ministry is slating a second municipal well to ward off future shortages.

John Bishop, a ministry utility operations officer responsible for the provincially-owned water treatment plant in Frankford, confirmed the reeve's fears of a water short-age.

"At present," Mr. Bishop said, "We feel there is not enough water to adequately service Frankford. That's why the second well is going in."

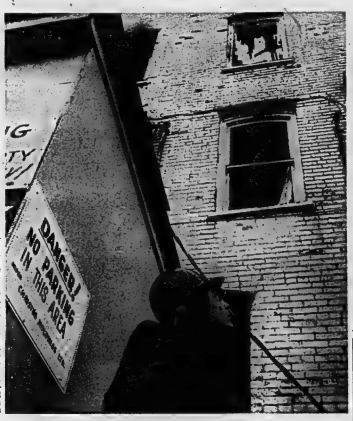
The ministry is slating a well west of Frankford and downstream about 600 feet from the most easterly house whose well water is contaminated.

As a short-term solution, Mr. Bishop suggested homeowners install cisterns and have water trucked in from Frankford if the village's council agreed.

Other suggestions also emerged from the meeting:

— 200 - gallon tank be installed in each basement Water would again be brought in by truck.

— Sidney Reeve Cecil Wilman said it might be possible to drill a well north of the nine homes where water veins are still unpolluted. It would then act as a communal well.



Structure Unsafe?

Tony Lassing a Trenton consulting engineers, stands beside one of the walls of the fire-gutted Gilbert Hotel be, town building inspector Norm, Mallory and the fire inspector have said is a potential hazard. The municipality has no provision for enforcement of a current bylaw that would make the owners rectify the situation.

Former Hotel Structure Hazard Says Engineer

TRENTON — Owners of the fire-gutted Gilbert Hotel have been notified twice that the structure is a potential hazard by the town but have not rectified the situation, said Norm Mallory, municipal building inspector.

On two separate occasions, once immediately after the fire and once in early November, the owners were informed of the dangerous conditions but no action was taken by the town because the bylaw covering the existing problem has no enforcement officer and could not be enacted, said the building inspector Norm Mallory and Arie Hoornweg, commissioner of public works.

A spokesman for the owners said they are not concerned about the problem because an engineer has told them there is no danger the walls will collapse.

"We had an engineer examine the building after we received the first letter from the town and he told us there was no problem with the structure and we are following his advice," said Gerald Weaver, a spokesman for Quinte Realty Co., part-owner of the building.

The day after the fire last March, Mr. Mallory and the fire inspector toured the building and then sent a letter to the owners, informing them there was a danger the upper portion of the walls would collapse.

The town cordoned off the area with snow fencing as a protective measure but this was later removed because it was too expensive to maintain, said the commissioner of public works.

On Nov. 4, acting on the complaint of a private citizen, who is also a consulting engineer, the municipality once again filed a letter with the owners about the potentially dangerous situation but have received no reply as yet, said Mr. Mallory.

Tony Lassing, the consulting engineer, said it is a critical situation that is intensified by high winds and the impending cold weather.

"Not only is there a danger of the wall being blown over in high winds but because there is no roof, to provide lateral support, the problem is multiplied," said the engineer.

Picton Council Wants Limit on Study Area

By MARG HAYLOCK

PICTON — Picton town council has re-affirmed its support of a Picton-Hallowell urban area study with the provision that study boundaries remain as defined in Prince Edward County's proposed draft official plan.

At a meeting Monday night councillors voted to indicate disapproval of the Prince Edward County planning board's decision to extend the study boundaries to include about 36 acres of land at Waringe' Corners, west of Picton and approximately 181 acres of property off John Street here.

Councillor Charles Hepburn a member of the planning and development committee, told council it was agreed that to solidify its position the town board decide where to expand. Committee members said they saw no advantages in extending boundaries to include Waringe' Corners property.

Council's decision to reaffirm its support of continuation of the Picton-Hallowell urban area study was prompted by a letter from the county planning board that referred to "hostility" shown during a public meeting held this fall to discuss the secondary plan.

The letter requested a formal motion from Picton councillors reaffirming support of the urban area study in progress.

Picton reeve Larry Richardson observed the planning board's proposal to include the Waringe Corners property in the study area is in direct opposition to the draft official plan.

The property was proposed as the location for a large subdivision several months ago but the plan was rejected as it contravened land usage in the draft official plan.

"Now the planning board is paying Hp service to it," said reeve Richardson, referring to the apparent about-face in including the Waringe' Corners land in the study area.

A Narrow World View of PLO Militates Against Its More Positive Aspects

By JOHN D. HABRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

He had already tried out the model, (in another study paper), on a similar region in East Africa. His views were global, expansive and innovative. He was both a pragmatist and a scholar.

His theories spoke of a man who knew and appreciated the wide open spaces of this world and ways in which they could be utilized properly for the development and the population explosion.

What an irony that all was to me, since he was a Palestinian, one of the four million who have no home and who when they do, will have no home of living in any of the Middle East's free open spaces.

I don't know if he is still in Waterloo. Put in the reserved and uncalled-for hassle about representation of the Palestinian Liberation Organization at the Habitat Conference of the United Nations in Vancouver, he knows and is respected the Middle Eastern diaspora of what is still call the postwar world.

The first was the Jews, the survivors of the death camps and even of Nazi Germany, determined to find their national home in the land and with an historic commitment from the British in 1917 to do so.

They have found it, made it bloomen like the rose of the scriptures, defended it and loved it, this state of Israel.

The second postwar diaspora (the exiles) are the Palestinian. They too are scattered around the world. Their intelligentsia are teaching, working and living in most countries of the world, waiting for their own homeland.

My Palestinian professorial contact of 1970 would be a natural delegate for the Habitat Conference. For a people who have been forced by fellow Arabs and Jews to raise two generations in the dismal tents of the Gaza Strip and elsewhere, a conference on world housing problems is special poignancy.

I think more of him than I do of those who clamor against a Palestinian representation, in spite of my shared opposition against the past excesses of the PLO in the world.

Habitat under the direction of the brilliant Colombian urban economist Enrique Penalosa is about world housing, not about narrow politics. And it is just as stupid to censor the idea of such a UN conference in Canada, as to go about with representatives to it we may not like.

There is much going on in Third World nations relative to the workable and indigenous housing needs of most of living mankind. In this context, I am aware that a devoted Egyptian architect open, would be both nation of bricks and mortar housing, he designed and is building villages full of durable homes made only out of Nile River mud.

At the same time, the comfortable bureaucrats of Cairo trained in the West and ashamed of such simple, indigenous concepts, are greeting trade missions from places like Ontario which are building expensive and totally unsuitable building materials to countries like Egypt.

Metal sidings from Canada which could destroy the health of Egypt and windows that don't open, would-be believers are hustled by the foreign salesmen of the industrialized world. One of these recently in Egypt used to be a tent plait.

A Strike Moratorium?

The recent six-power economic conference in France produced more in the way of fine words than concrete results. Nevertheless the general spirit of concord that emerged was taken as an encouraging sign in the fight against difficult economic circumstances.

Some observations of French president Valery Giscard d'Estaing are worth recalling, for they could mean much to our own domestic situation — if only everyone pulled his weight and put the overall economic and social good of the country first.

"What has emerged," he said, "is what I would call the spirit of Rambouillet (the conference location), a spirit of cooperation and international responsibility to ensure that the world economy will recover the lasting stability and growth that is necessary for the wellbeing of all peoples of the world."

Applied to the situation here, we are sure that if a moratorium on strikes were declared, say for a year, at least, it would be possible for negotiations to be resumed in a variety of fields, and in an atmosphere of cordiality that is now lacking.

Value of Moderation

We recall an interminable meal in an Indonesian restaurant in Amsterdam — something like 14 courses.

Topping this however was the $4,000 meal for two, featuring 31 dishes, described in the women's section in recent days.

It was one of the prizes — a meal for two anywhere in the world skimming from a funfilled auction, and in a restaurant (in Paris as it turned out) that took a certain credit card.

The meal was donned by Craig Claiborne, resident gourmet of the New York Times, and a companion.

Later, in writing of the bash, he wrote that the "food was generally exampiary, although there were regrettable lapses there, too." in a place that was critical in a number of ways.

Makes some of the womenfolk out there feel better. Perhaps, when even a top Parisian restaurant can fall on its face a little, even down to what Claiborne describes as a "mundane" presentation of the dishes.

Reminds us also of an observation by Toronto columnist Richard Needham, to the effect that the real social killers may be not so much alcohol and tobacco, but "lunch and dinner."

Something to think about in these — inflation notwithstanding — well-fed days.

All-weather Biking

Now and again we see manifestations of the continuing interest in cycling, both as to the encouragement of fitness and the saving of fuel.

There are the families who take to their bikes at weekends, for outings; the businessmen who push their way slowly but steadily to and from work, strengthening legs and hearts and trimming waistlines on such not indignificant slopes as Bridge Street out there by the Armories. Housewives too have taken to this form of exercise and locomotion. There is even a rural dweller or two who bike into work from the great outdoors.

Now, it must be said that some we had noticed on a fairly regular basis, biking in and out, seem to have fallen by the wayside. Could it be it's too inconvenient, not to say slow and even dangerous given the vagaries of drivers — not to mention the onset of cooler weather.

Still, if some of the regulars are disappearing from the downtown scene, let's switch for a moment to Trenton and hats off to a clergyman there whom we saw going about his rounds by bike. This too in a community where local bloods in their cars, according to the local newspaper, can make life less than secure at times.

Legislature Still a Roughouse Which Needs to Learn Decorum

By DON O'HEARN

TORONTO — The conduct of members in this new house is turning it into a shambles at times.

A lot of the time.

In recent years our Ontario legislature has been marred by a lot of bedlam.

But this new house has been setting a modern record for boorishness and lack of control.

This is a situation which obviously should be corrected.

Not that anyone should want to see a completely dead house. Some life is essential if there is to be a healthy parliament.

But along with this the example of responsibility should be given by our legislators.

And in this obligation they have been failing down-badly.

Above all if a house is to work well it must have respect for its Speaker.

And this is where the Ontario house has been losing out.

It has shown little knowledge of the importance of this respect, and where it must emphasize.

It is a largely artificial thing. The Speaker has little real authority in himself or the rules of the house.

He can run the house well only as long as the house is willing to be run well.

And the respect must almost entirely be based on knowledge and understanding of the long tradition of his office and the need for it.

The present Mr. Speaker, Hon. Russell Rowe is a relatively new one and this had led to some criticism from the very same members who most disturb the house.

The real criticism should be directed at the house itself.

Don't spend time thinking about the bad things in your life. Ask the Lord to forgive you and then replace them with good and seek for God in the belief of man. You will be pleased with the harvest though in some cases you may not see it till you get to Heaven. "Sow bountifully — reap bountifully."

Grits Make a Show of Being Busy But Lack Direction

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Of The Intelligencer

A chicken without a head running around the barnyard.

Watching Ontario's Liberals in the provincial house this new session, this is a picture that comes to mind.

The party's 36 members are active; probably more active than they were in the last house when they were the official opposition.

But they don't have direction. They aren't aiming at goals. They are the antithesis of being active for the sake of being active.

In this they could represent the crystallization of 40 years of history of Ontario provincial Liberalism.

Of a party without goals, other than to try and win office, and without a leader at the top to pull them together.

At the present time the Liberals on the bare facts should be riding high.

On these facts they in most regards came out of the September election in the best shape of the three parties.

They increased by their number of votes and the percentage of the total vote substantially. While the Conservatives dropped sharply in both and the NDP increased marginally.

And the party increased its holding in the house from 23 to 36 ridings.

But, as happens the wheels of fate weren't kind to it.

The NDP with a much smaller vote (464,804 to 1,134,681) outgained it in seats, jumping from 39 to 54 and winning the slot as official opposition.

This, in itself, shouldn't be enough to knock a party on its back.

But the party also didn't come close to its potential.

In advance of the election public polls had been forecasting for it before the 30 per cent of the vote and it was running ahead of the Conservatives.

So that while mechanically it did make gains it actually it didn't live up to its expectations or possibilities.

And in realistic terms its election theorie's, resulted in a drastic slap in the face.

And this has been showing. The party has been busy. But it has been the busyness of a fighter who is ineffectively landing back hand jabs with his his marbles a bit scrambled from a hard blow.

So where does the party now

I said that it was like a chicken without a head. And its future rests with its getting a good one, soon.

In this is the story of the Liberals in Ontario over the past 22 years and more.

Since Mitch Hepburn abdicated it has seldom had effective leadership.

There was one reasonably bright period. From 1958 to 1963 John Wintermeyer led the party. And he stood out from the herd.

But Wintermeyer was a political flaw. He wasn't hard enough to be a political leader. He had the imagination and intelligence and decisiveness that is needed. He even had some force. But he didn't have that hard, even ruthlessness that a leader must have, particularly in politics.

And the other leaders the party has had lacked even some of the qualities that Wintermeyer had. Mitch on his second time around, Farquhar Oliver, Walter Thomson, Oliver again, Andy Thompson, Bob Nixon. For assorted reasons none of them was a good head for the Liberal bird.

Bob Nixon now is getting out as leader and in late January the party will be electing someone to replace him.

The question of whither rests largely with this convention.

It could be the last failure of the past three decades.

If it somehow or other comes up with a leader under it could find a bright future.

The election showed that the base is there. There is the ground to grow.

But to cultivate it a really exceptional man (and, to bow to today's civilities, or woman) is needed.

The Liberals today don't know what they are, and they have not known for over 25 years. Their leader should have very firm ideas of what the party should be.

The party hasn't known what it has wanted in a leader. For more than 20 years it has been looking for a new Mitch. It has sought in Hepburn one who could mesmerize the electorate. This has been a dream. Hitches are as rare as messages from heaven. And a Mitch might not register with today's voters. (Though he probably would, if one could ever be found.)

The party has been a loose and disorganized affair. It has not had objectives. Its caucus has a long history of disunity. This can only be corrected by a leader.

These are parts from which, if the party is to have success, a new leader must be constructed.

Considered, each of them calls for one great quality.

Hardness is demanded. A hard coolness. A hardness in decision. A hardness in imagination. A hardness in personality. A hardness in all relationships.

One must not take the Liberal party and reform it and embalm it.

It is a job that really can only be done by the one man. By a leader. And he must be, hard. He must be able to make the hard decisions and to do the hard thinking that the solution of the party calls for.

If by chance the party can come up with a leader who can, its future could be bright.

If it can't, and the chances are very long, it could be gray. For at present it is silent in the house — a position to which it has fallen only twice before in modern Ontario political history, in 1963-65 and 1948-51.

And both these times its main opponent, the CCF fell apart. There is little likelihood that this time the successor NDP will do that.

Business Investment Scene Shows Both Sides of Coin

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

The most promising way to create new jobs is through new business investment in plant and equipment.

So, at first glance, it's good news that a federal survey has shown that 300 large Canadian companies intend to increase their capital spending in 1976 by more than 28 per cent over 1975 — even if inflation factor is attributable to inflation.

As capital investment of this kind not only makes more jobs available but helps to relieve inflationary pressures by increasing the supply of goods on the market.

At second glance, however, the outlook is not quite so promising.

The Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce conducted its preliminary survey of spending intentions in October — as always.

It was half-way through that month that the government announced its anti-inflation program.

Among other things, the program put a freeze on corporate profit margins. Business profitability this year is at or near a cyclical low, and there's not much incentive to invest capital that has a risk of returning an adequate yield.

Some of the 300 companies gave their 1976 spending intentions before anti-inflation program was announced, some after.

A more realistic indicator of next year's capital-investment trend will come only after the industry department does its usual follow-up survey during the first quarter of the new year.

It could be, as the department says, that the anti-inflation guidelines — to the extent that they stabilize or reduce costs — will have a positive influence on capital-spending decisions.

But it's equally conceivable that business may scale down its expansion plans.

After all, capital doesn't grow on trees. When owners of capital can receive 11 or 12 per cent interest by investing it elsewhere at minimum risk, they won't be rushing to make their capital available to enterprises that are legally restrained from improving an inadequate profit performance.

Nor will investors, Canadian or foreign, be keen to have their capital tied up in an economy where inflation is allowed to run out of control — which could happen here if the government grows tired and eaves in before those who demand ever greater inflation.

The level of capital investment indicated by the 1976 preliminary survey would, if achieved, be an economic shot in the arm.

The 28.4-per-cent growth rate that has been projected would be about the same as this year's surprisingly strong 30 per cent.

But that kind of expansion seems unlikely to materialize unless Ottawa takes some positive action to demonstrate two essential points — that it is still as serious about curbing inflation as it professed to be in mid-October, and that it will give corporate earnings rise to a level which will permit a realistic amount of profit re-investment.

If on the other hand the government does nothing, for fear of the bombastic reaction of the anti-business forces (who demand big income increases for themselves), then the Canadian economy faces the threat of stagflation — high unemployment, and renewed recession or depression.

An Enlightened Age?

The Christian Science Monitor Cynics might wonder if the international declarations on usually hidden practices of torture. But, certainly a supposedly enlightened age can do less than seek universal agreement to ban such inhumanity — and thus at least contribute to a climate for reversing the current increase in its use. So even a sadly diluted move by the United Nations congress on crime in Geneva has to be welcomed, as it was by the human-rights organization Amnesty International.

What underscores this draft denunciation of torture — to be presented to the General Assembly for action — is an amendment sponsored by Saudi Arabia which appears to provide a loophole for inhuman acts if authorized by courts. And courts in some countries have been known to hand down sentences contrary to the UN declaration of human rights.

Work Rather Than Picket

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

In view of the subtle pressures put on union members by their "brotherly and sisterly" (in union term) whenever there is a strike, I feel that I have more courage for those postal workers to return to work than it does to wave a sign on the picket line.

I think the general public owe those few brave people a real debt and we hopefully are the "scabs" (a union term) will help heal a running sore in our Canadian economy.

High Winds Close Seaway

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — The St. Lawrence seaway, closed for 17 hours because of high winds, reopened Monday night as winds dropped, a traffic superintendent for the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority said.

Winds which had been as high as 50 miles an hour descended to about 25 miles an hour and continued to drop, the superintendent said.

Allan Lacey, director of operations for the seaway authority, said 97 ocean vessels are making their way out of the seaway system. At this time last year, 91 were still in the system.

The navigation season ends Dec. 18, the latest closing date in the seaway's history, he said.

The seaway closed Dec. 17 last year and Dec. 16 in 1972.

Garthsore Elected

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — James Garthsore, 47, was elected mayor in a byelection Monday that drew the votes of 34 per cent of this town's 18,800 eligible voters.

Dr. Kenneth Hobbs, 47, a general practitioner, and Robert Carnes, 34, an undertaker, were elected councillors.

Approve Contract

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — Oxford County board of education elementary school teachers approved an average 22.15-per-cent increase for the 1975-76 contract at a general meeting Monday.

Sixty-nine per cent of the 413 teachers present approved the offer.

The offer ratified by the teachers will give a 29.6-per-cent increase in salaries and the remainder in part of a fringe-benefits package, said Barry Hunt, the board's chief negotiator.

Tops Goal

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — United Way officials of the Chatham and district 1975 campaign said Monday that $196,325.00 has been collected to date. The sum surpasses the campaign objective of $194,465.

Train Hijacked

ASSEN, Holland (Reuter)— Police said group of heavily-armed men hijacked a train near this northern Dutch town today.

They described the hijackers as South Moluccans. Extremist South Moluccans demand the independence of the islands from Indonesia.

Blacks May Run

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — The National Black Political Assembly will try to field a black team for the 1976 U.S. presidential and vice-presidential, the assembly president Ron Daniels of Youngstown says. He said possible nominees include comedian and civil rights activist Dick Gregory; Georgia legislator Julian Bond, and Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind.

Brezhnev to Speak

MOSCOW (AP) — Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev will give the main report at the party's 25th congress, dispelling speculation he might step down before it opens Feb. 24. Brezhnev, who will be 69 on Dec. 19, has been reported on the way out as the country's leader because of poor health or political pressure.

Proposal Planned

ROME (AFP) — French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing will propose that Canada be co-chairman at an economic conference in Paris two weeks from now, authoritative French sources said Monday.

The sources said Giscard d'Estaing will make his proposal at the European council, the informal summit of the European Economic Community which opened Monday. The second co-chairman will be a Third-World country.

Bomb PLO

BEIRUT (AP) — Squadrons of Israeli jets bombed Palestinian refugee camps in northern and southern Lebanon today.

The Israeli planes hit the Nabaa al-Barid and Sadawi camps near the northern port of Tripoli and two areas around the southern town of Nabatiya, the government said.

There was no immediate explanation from Israel for the attacks.

Refused to Fight

MATHESON, Ont. (CP) — Richard Belanger, 18, of Iroquois and William Milmine, 19, of Brantford were fined $50 each in provincial court on Monday for refusing to fight a forest fire. The men were charged under the Forest Fire Prevention Act after they refused to fight a forest fire last June in Holloway Township, 30 miles east of here. Matheson is 40 miles east of Timmins.

Drapeau Appeals for No More Strikes at Olympics

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau called Monday night for a "holy alliance" of capital and labor to finish construction for the 1976 Summer Olympics because "productivity must increase or there will be no Games."

"The eyes of the whole world are upon us," Mr. Drapeau said in a taped hour-long television program. He said there must be no more strikes if deadlines are to be met.

While conceding for the first time the possibility of failure, the 59-year-old mayor emphasized:

"Everything can be ready in time through a holy alliance of capital and labor."

And he reaffirmed his belief that Olympic costs can be covered by self-financing plans, although the Quebec government predicts a deficit of $600 million on total expenditures of more than $1 billion.

It was Mr. Drapeau's first public statement since the government of Premier Bourassa put the Games picture two weeks ago and assumed responsibility for construction of the main Olympic facilities by means of legislation passed in the national assembly last Thursday.

He said he is pleased with the provincial government's creation of a seven-man Olympic installations board, which followed the "substance" though not the "form" of a recommendation put forward by his own administration. He had favored separate boards for financing and construction.

The Quebec government's action was in line with the tradition of the Games, because the Olympics had always been a "matter for governments" rather than municipalities, Adequate funds now were assured.

Mr. Drapeau said he did not feel excluded from the project although he was not appointed to the board.

Victor Goldbloom, Quebec municipal affairs minister, said in Quebec City earlier the provincial takeover resulted from Montreal's "extreme reluctance" to trim construction plans to ensure meeting deadlines.

Mr. Drapeau made no reference to reports of a Mexican plan to take over the Games if Montreal is unable to complete preparations in time.

An official of the Montreal organizing committee said earlier Monday, however, the Games will be held here on schedule.

Mr. Goldbloom also expressed optimism in a weekend radio program.

"I am an unrepentant optimist," Mr. Drapeau said, "but I am more realistic than most people believe. The last laugh will be for those who have continued to believe that a man cannot have a baby."

Critics had mocked a Drapeau pledge that the Olympics could no more have a deficit than a man could have a baby.

Mr. Drapeau recalled that federal government experts predicted Montreal could raise no more than $180 millions with such self-financing Olympic projects as lotteries and sales of stamps and coins. Montreal had estimated revenue at $310 million. Now revenue forecasts were $425 million.

"Why stop there?" Mr. Drapeau demanded.

Mao Tse-tung Receives Ford

PEKING (AP) — Chairman Mao Tse-tung received President Ford and nine members of his party today, then sat down for a talk with the president and four of his aides.

The White House said Ford was accompanied by his wife Betty; their 18-year-old daughter Susan; State Secretary Henry Kissinger; Lt.-Gen. Brent Scowcroft, national security adviser to the president; George Bush, U.S. liaison officer here; State Undersecretary Joseph Sisco; Assistant State Secretary Philip Habib; Winston Lord, director of the state department policy planning staff; and Richard Solomon, a member of the National Security Council.

Kissinger, Bush, Scowcroft and Lord remained with Ford for the talk with Mao, 81.

The meeting has been expected when Susan Ford was called back from a trip to the Ming Tombs 12 miles from here.

The president earlier met for two hours with China's acting premier, Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, and the White House said later that the two leaders exchanged "constructive" views on a wide range of international topics.

"Both sides found the discussion were beneficial," said the brief communique issued by United States representatives after the two-hour meeting between Ford and Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, who is running the Chinese government because of Premier Chou En-lai's illness.

The announcement said Kissinger and Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua would continue the discussion this afternoon.

Chinese Press Secretary Ron Nessen said before the meeting between Ford and Teng that he thought U.S.-Soviet detente would be one of the subjects discussed.

"I think he (Ford) will explain the American position forcefully and fully and frankly," Nessen said.

Teng, in a toast at a state banquet Monday night following Ford's arrival, voiced once again his government's fear that because of the detente policy, the Soviet Union no longer considers the U.S. a deterrent to its territorial ambitions.

The Chinese leader referred to the Soviet Union as "the country which most zealously preaches peace but is the most dangerous source of war."

Nessen said Teng's words were milder than what appears daily in Chinese newspapers.

Ford, in his reply to Teng's toast, said the U.S. and China have "mutual interest in seeing that the world is not dominated by military force or pressure."

But he said that "each of us will of course determine our policies and methods according to our differing positions in the world and our perceptions of our respective national interests."

Anti-inflation Program Comes Under Attack

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's anti-inflation program came under bitter attack on two fronts Monday as the enabling legislation approaches approval by the Commons.

The bill, introduced in the Commons six weeks ago, may receive final approval today before going to the Senate.

John Diefenbaker, former Progressive Conservative prime minister, opened third-reading debate saying the bill will destroy Parliament because of the wide powers given the cabinet to set the terms of the selective wage and price controls.

The economy would be strangled by bureaucratic control until the next election, he said.

The general election is set for Oct. 14, is to run 3½ years to Dec. 31, 1978. The Conservatives, who supported the legislation in principle, have announced they will vote against it in third reading because the government refused to restore the program to 18 months.

However, George Hees (PC, Broadview-Greenwood) said he will vote for the bill because it is the only method now available to curb inflation.

Almost 500 striking Toronto high school teachers, meanwhile, demonstrated on Parliament Hill against the first specific ruling of the anti-inflation board. The board ruled last week that even the 30.2-per-cent wage increase over two years offered by the Metropolitan Toronto school board—and rejected by the teachers—exceeded the program guides.

The 8,600 teachers have been on strike for three weeks seeking a 43.8-per-cent increase which would give them basic salaries ranging from $13,256 to $25,224 a year. The board offer would have given them a range of $11,575 to $24,820. Salaries now range from $7,800 to $18,000.

Jim Forster, president of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation, said the fact that the anti-inflation board's ruling preceded the signing of an agreement means "the death of the collective bargaining process."

DEREK

Derek will soon have a birthday — his ninth. There isn't time to find him the best of all birthday gifts — a family to belong to — but if his dreams come true he will be the cherished son of some mother and father when the next birthday comes along.

Derek is a handsome lad, with beautiful dark eyes and brown wavy hair. His background is Indian and white.

Because of unsettled years during which he suffered deprivation — physical, social and emotional — Derek is now in a treatment centre for emotionally distressed children. He has changed greatly and the staff members feel he is ready to become part of a family. But it must be a special family where the mother and father have a great deal of time to give him. Derek has missed warm, loving parental interest for most of his life and has a lot of empty places to fill.

Derek is in special education but is taking some subjects in the regular classes. It is expected he will need to finish this year in the special class where every pupil gets much individual attention. He is eager to be moved entirely into the regular stream.

Derek is considered to be low average. He tries hard and is capable of doing better when he feels settled, wanted and loved.

A healthy youngster, Derek enjoys outdoor activities especially camping and the things associated with it — swimming, hiking, fishing. He likes sports though he is not particularly good at them. Adept at doing things with his hands, Derek is fond of crafts.

Derek's friendly, winning manner appeals to adults the minute they meet him. His relations with children aren't so happy because he recess having to share attention with them.

He will be a rewarding son for parents who will give him their understanding and their time along with their love. Derek should be the youngest in his adopting family but it will be good if he can have an older brother to take an interest in him.

To learn more about adopting Derek, please write to Today's Child, Ministry of Community and Social Services, Box 88, Station K, Toronto M4P 2H1. In your letter tell something of your present family and your way of life.

Government Memo Asks for Equality

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury Board President Jean Chretien said Friday a memo has been sent to all government departments and agencies asking for increased efforts to promote equal opportunities for women.

"It is our objective that, within a reasonable time, the representation of male and female employees in the public service will approximate the available proportion of interested and qualified persons of both sexes," he said in a news release.

"Such representation is to be reflected in all departments within all occupational groups and levels."

However, he did not indicate what he meant by "reasonable time."

Mr. Chretien said personnel policies, practices and directives have been reviewed over the last few years and amended in cases where they "could in any way be construed as discriminatory to women."

"Moreover, these are subject to on-going re-examination."

Woman's Virginity Should Be Her Own Secret, Says Ann

Dear Ann Landers: Recently a young woman wrote that she was about to marry the man of her dreams and she needed to know something. During her freshman year in college she fell madly in love with a football player and thought their romance would surely end in marriage. She gave herself to him and then he dropped her.

Now, it seems she's about to marry Prince Charming, him self, and wants to know if it is possible for a man to find out for sure whether his bride is a virgin. You told her "no."

If the answer is "no," why pray tell, is a Japanese doctor in California making a small fortune sewing in phony hymens made of sheep tissue for deflowered girls who want to present themselves as 100 per cent pure? Sign me—No Dreamy Here

Dear Dum: What Japanese doctor? Never heard of him. That doesn't mean, of course, that he doesn't exist. There are enough wiggly advisors around so that any scheme can flourish how bizarre, would surely have some takers.

I said "no" because her question contained the words "for sure."

Sometimes a man can tell, but not always. I'd guess that a hundred women get away with the act than have one poor, innocent girl unjustly branded by a tyrant who would throw it up to her for the rest of her life.

Dear Ann Landers: I am married to a wonderful man and wouldn't hurt him for the world. I get along reasonably well with his mother and make every effort not to rock the boat.

My mother-in-law feels very much at home in our place, which I don't mind. When she wants something, however, she never bothers to ask. She proceeds to search in the kitchen cabinets, refrigerator, etc. Although I don't like it, I keep quiet and look the other way.

Yesterday she was going through my desk looking for a paper clip. Naturally, I keep private correspondence and bills in the desk. Maybe it was my imagination but she appeared to be snooping.

My mother-in-law has offered to baby sit several times but I've never taken her up on it, even though it would be very handy. I'm reluctant to leave her in our house alone because I have visions of her rummaging through my closets, drawers and correspondence.

My husband says we have nothing to hide, which is true. Yet I feel uncomfortable. What would you do?—Guardarted In Baltimore

Dear G in B: I'd clean out the closets and straighten the drawers and cabinets so they could bear examination by anyone. I would then gather all bills and private correspondence and put them under lock and key when ever the Inspector General came over. End of problem.

Dear Ann Landers: Some thing is bothering me. It seems that whenever I go to a football game someone next to me has a radio going. The idiot is listening to the game we are watching. Do you, too?—Rights Trampled On

Dear Rights: I agree—but the game and putting his own your only defence is to move.

Dear Ann Landers: Please settle a bet for us. Is it proper interpretation on every play. Also, I loathe the commercials.

Next these lunatics will be bringing portable TV sets to watch instant replays. I think the radio nuts who want to listen to the game on the radio should bring earphones. What do you, say?—Rights Trampled On Noreen Davis gives son Adam a hug, as she discusses his therapy program.

Handicapped Children Must Travel To Kingston for Therapy Treatment

By ISABEL HUGGAN

As Noreen Davis talks about her three-year-old son Adam, he is busy sipping her tea and eating her oatmeal muffin. He is a lively, bright-eyed little boy, happily unaware of the problem his mother is discussing.

For Adam has cerebral palsy, a permanent condition due to early brain damage. Lack of muscular control means that he cannot walk unaided, nor is he yet able to talk — skills he may eventually master through therapy.

The Davis family — Noreen, her husband Bill, and their three other sons, Andrew 9, Matthew 6, and Aaron, 4 — have adjusted to the fact that Adam will always be handicapped. "When the boys play with Adam, they treat him as an equal," says Mrs. Davis.

But they have not adjusted to the fact that inadequate facilities in Belleville mean that they must travel to Kingston once a month so that Adam can receive his all-important therapy.

Handicapped children like Adam need the services of many types of therapists, who can teach them exercises that strengthen and develop their young bodies. Without this training, children may well be held back by their handicaps. But with expert guidance they have a good chance of overcoming their disabilities sufficiently to lead more ordinary, active lives.

Like 25 or 30 other children from the Belleville area, Adam visits the Regional Centre for Handicapped Children in Kingston, where both he and his parents are involved in the therapy procedures.

The centre uses a team approach (orthopedic surgeon, pediatrician, occupational therapist, physiotherapist and social worker) that includes parents as part of the team.

It is this kind of many-faceted treatment that Mrs. Davis would like to see in Belleville.

As president of the Parents' Association for Handicapped Children, an organization that was formed last year, she is an active campaigner for increased involvement — and is anxious that provision be made so that parents and their children could work together with doctors and therapists right in their own community.

"The team idea is so worthwhile," she says. "There are so many areas where you have questions when you're a parent of a handicapped child. Being part of a treatment team allows you to feel free to call for assistance.

"But when I have a question about Adam, I have to phone Kingston. It would be so much easier if the same kind of program existed here. Adam's visits could be more frequent, and we could have more contact with the other team members."

Mrs. Davis explains that although there are excellent doctors and therapists in Belleville, there is no child-centred program. Children who need physiotherapy treatment, for example, would have to be part of a group program.

"Young handicapped children have different needs than adults," she says. "Besides, their shorter attention span would disrupt treatment geared to adults or teen-agers. They need their own area, there's no point in putting them in with adults. It just wouldn't be satisfactory."

Her experience at the centre in Kingston has shown Mrs. Davis that the most essential part of the program is getting the right people to work together with the parents.

At present the Parents' Association is trying to find a rental accommodation that would be suitable for a clinic facility, she says.

"Just one or two small rooms, some child-sized furniture and a full-length mirror would be sufficient to start out. I think that such a clinic should be part of the hospital so that recuperating children could have it as well as local handicapped children.

"We don't need money for a new building. We just need money to hire a co-ordinator to get everyone organized, and perhaps also to hire more staff.

"There are a lot of things we need for handicapped children in Belleville, such as better rec-reational facilities and easier access to swimming pools for therapy sessions. But the most important thing is to get local doctors and therapists and social workers involved together," she says.

It is this kind of co-ordination that Mrs. Davis and the Parents' Association for Handicapped Children, an organization that was formed last year, she is an active campaigner for increased involvement — and is anxious that provision be made so that parents and their children could work together with doctors and therapists right in their own community.

Possibility of Children's Clinic Currently Under Examination

Why doesn't Belleville have its own therapy facility for handicapped children?

The immediate answer to that question is insufficient funds. But the reasons behind that explanation are complex.

Grant Turnbull, district nurse for the Ontario Society for Crippled Children, gives some of the background to the problem from his point of view.

"For years, the accepted concept in the care of handicapped children was to take them to large, central institutions. Then, as it became more acceptable to take care of these kids at home, treatment centres such as the one in Toronto were built. Their purpose was to integrate rehabilitative treatment between the large centres and the home areas of the children.

"In 1969, the Society for Cripple Children designated 23 areas in the province in which smaller centres should be built, so that handicapped children wouldn't have as far to travel for treatment. Funding was provided by the society, the ministry of health, and the community involved.

"Of those 23, 18 are now completed and four are underway. Kingston's Regional Centre for Handicapped Children is one of them, serving the area that includes Belleville.

"There simply aren't enough kids here to merit a centre," he adds. Although there are 280 registered cases of handicapped children from birth to 20 years) in the three counties covered by the Belleville branch of the society, not all would use a centre's facilities. For example, of these 280 cases, 40 or 50 are children with cleft palates who have no need for the physiotherapy that would be the heart of such a centre.

"What we do need is a central co-ordinating body to put together all the present services," says Mr. Young. "But the money for this would have to come from the ministry of health, since the society only involves itself in capital expenditure, not in long term arrangements such a salaries.

"The people are here who can do the job," he says. "But for some reason Belleville is a difficult area to get people to work together."

During Rehabilitation Week held in mid-November at Belleville General Hospital, the idea of hiring a co-ordinator of services was put forth by Dr. Gisela Clegraz, executive director of the Rehabilitation Institute of Montreal. Since then, his suggestion has been adopted by all parties involved as the most practical way to provide more accessible services for Belleville's handicapped children.

Dr. Reg Anderson, BGH medical director, is currently gathering information that will indicate whether there are enough children to warrant the hiring of a co-ordinator, and the setting up of a clinic facility at the hospital.

"We're having trouble getting the facts we need," says Dr. Anderson. "We've tried through letters to family doctors and schools to get an account of how many children would use such a facility. But we haven't had a good response."

Dr. Anderson suggests that if a co-ordinator is hired, the person should also be a physiotherapist trained to work with children, since current BGH therapists are already overburdened.

Philip Rickert, BGH executive director, explains that a 1972 government directive has kept the hospital from initiating any new services. And there simply isn't the budget to hire extra staff, he says.

However, Mr. Rickert says that the hospital could probably find the space for a treatment facility if that were all that were required. In other words, if a co-ordinator can organize a team of already-existing doctors and therapists, there will be a place for them to use as a base.

"We have space in Education Hall," says Mr. Rickert, "that we'd be pleased to use."

Dr. Jean Alexander, head of Kingston's Regional Centre for Handicapped Children, says that her staff of 18 gives treatment to approximately 200 children who travel to the centre from as far away as Port Hope and Brockville.

"I believe the concept of a local team approach is valid," she says," although diagnosis and assessment should still be carried out at larger centres, such as Kingston. But on-going treatment could certainly be done in Belleville."

But until Dr. Anderson's survey of the community's needs completed, and until money can be found to hire a co-ordinator of therapy services, handicapped children will continue to travel to Kingston for treatment.

Merchants Offer Christmas Shopping Tips

Although some shoppers have already purchased Christmas gifts and probably already have them wrapped, most shoppers haven't and the rush is yet to come.

Downtown store owners say business picks up Dec. 1 and increases to a hectic pace as they try to meet the whims of gift-giving customers. To many, it's like gambling, trying to decide months in advance what items will be popular at Christmas time.

Ross Row of Dennison Hardware, 220 Front St., said they've concentrated on indoor hanging plants, planters and indoor gardening equipment. Interest in indoor gardening, he said, has increased drastically over the past years.

They also specialize in gourmet cooking equipment, said Mr. Row, and small kitchen appliances always sell well at Christmas.

Bruce Alexander at Muntz Stereo Centre, 215 Front St., said he is expecting a busy Christmas.

He said tapes and albums always sell well and digital clocks, record players and cassettes tape recorders make good gifts for teenagers.

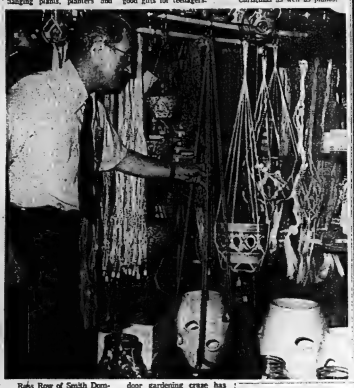
Robert Fesar of Bata Shoe Store, 233 Front St., said he's said Grace Ford at Barratt's Stationery, 301 Front St.

Barb Johnassen at Femina Womens' wear, 253 Front St., said scarf and tuque sets have been selling well. Ski sweaters are also popular. More women, she said, are buying dresses and skirts instead of slacks and jeans.

Maurice Whalen of Whalen's Menâ€™, 277 Front St., said his main job is keeping proper models of organs in stock for gift giving. Easy-play organs, he said, are most popular at Christmas as well as pianos.

Brief cases, desk sets and pen sets are popular items

Electronic calculators and typewriters are often bought for students, she said. "Pencil cases, sharpeners and markers make great stocking stuffers."



Reks Row of Smith Dennison Hardware, 220 Front St., checks out the store's display of indoor gardening equipment. He said the indoor gardening craze has grown rapidly and plants and pots make good Christmas gifts.

Danson Sets Dec. 25 Deadline for Legislation

OTTAWA (CP) — The 800 Christmas present Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson yearns for is parliamentary approval of housing legislation he introduced Monday.

"I desperately want the legislation approved before Christmas," Mr. Danson said outside the Commons.

"I don't mind sitting three sessions a day in committee and weekends as well."

The parliamentary Christmas holiday break begins Dec. 19.

The housing bill would broaden the assisted home ownership program (AHOP) and increase payments for the federal subsidized rental program.

It would also provide for a chairman of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC). An aide to Mr. Danson said William Teron, now CMHC president, would become chairman while also acting secretary, or deputy minister, of the urban affairs department.

The bill would lift limits on family income and extend the AHOP to include any Canadian couple buying a low-or moderately-priced home within price limits set by the CMHC. Currently only families with children qualify.

The legislation also would permit the government to change some AHOP payments to loans from grants. AHOP payments are designed to reduce the interest rate on mortgage loans to about eight per cent from the current market rate, now about 11% per cent.

The AHOP program also would be expanded to include buying built by co-operative and non-profit groups.

Allmand Supports RCMP Investigation

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand defended the RCMP on Monday against allegations by his colleague Jean Marchand that they have used questionable tactics.

Mr. Marchand, minister without portfolio, was not in the Commons as Mr. Allmand rejected his allegations that the force has been using public opinion to strengthen itself.

Elmer MacKay (PC—Central Nova) opened the subject by asking Mr. Allmand whether Mr. Marchand has produced any evidence to support the allegations.

Mr. Allmand said he asked Mr. Marchand to do so on Friday night, a few hours after the Marchand remarks to reporters.

Border TV Disputes Prompts Sharp Criticism from Managers

OTTAWA (CP) — Legislation designed to cut off U.S. border television stations from about $30 million a year in Canadian advertising is immoral and unfair and should be postponed as governments of both countries can negotiate border broadcasting problems, three Buffalo, N.Y., television stations said Monday.

In a brief prepared for submission to the Commons broadcasting committee, the stations said the tax measures would be "contrary in the true interests of Canada."

Executives of WBEN Inc., Capital Cities Communications, Inc. (WKBW) and Taft Broadcasting Company (WGR), as well as KVOS Television, Bellingham, Wash., are fighting Income Tax Act amendments denying Canadian advertisers the right to deduct 100 per cent of advertising costs on U.S. television stations as a business expense.

The same legislation also would affect the Canadian editions of Time magazine, Reader's Digest and several other foreign-owned publications operating in the country.

The Buffalo stations, which have captured about 45 per cent of the viewing audience in the Toronto-Hamilton area and receive a total of about $30 million a year in Canadian advertising revenue, said the legislation would force them to provide television service to Canadians without compensating income.

They said they would not object to a special tax on Canadian advertising with revenues invested in strengthening the domestic broadcasting industry but opposed any measure to end the flow of Canadian advertising dollars.

Province Helps Indian Problems

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario is working with the federal government on ways to aid the Indians of the White Dog and Grassy Narrows reserves in the northwest of the province, Health Minister Frank Miller said Monday.

Answering a series of questions in the legislature, Mr. Miller said members of the cabinet have held talks with their federal counterparts to work out methods of helping the Indians hard-hit by mercury pollution in local rivers.

He said some questions raised by the Indians have been answered, others remain to be considered. The minister said there is a problem of division of responsibility.

Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis asked if the government has decided to close the Ear-lish-Wabigoon river system, which is heavily polluted with mercury.

Mr. Miller said that question is under consideration.

Outside the house, Mr. Miller said the province will appoint a co-ordinator to help speed action.

He said the co-ordinator's job would be to cut red tape and sort out the foggy areas of federal and provincial overlapping.

"We wanted to straighten out the efforts," he said.

Moving Business In Slump

EDMONTON (CP) — The tight housing situation in some parts of Canada has created a slump in the moving business as fewer Canadians are moving their households from one region to another says Peter Naylor, chairman of the board of Allied Van Lines Ltd.

Moving companies enjoyed good growth for the last five years, but this came to an end in 1974, Mr. Naylor said in an interview while in Edmonton for a director's meeting of Allied Van Lines, Canada's largest and oldest co-operative in the moving business.

This year's business volume until the end of September, recorded by the 165 members and branches of the association, only equalled the similar period of 1974, he said.

"The tight housing situation in many parts of Canada is a deterrent to moving."

Mr. Naylor said rent controls enforced or planned for British Columbia, Ontario and Alberta are bound to discourage people from changing residences.

"I can only see rent controls as reducing the supply of housing and making it more difficult for people to find new homes in other parts of the country.

However, he said, more people are moving to Alberta than other places. In the past, B.C. has been the province to attract most households from other parts of the country.

Allied Van Lines is a co-operative of individually-owned firms across Canada and is affiliated with Allied Van Lines in the United States. Its primary function is to provide dispatch services and guarantee return loads to member firms.

The transportation of household effects still provides from 75 to 80 per cent of the company's business, Mr. Naylor said, although Allied is "starting to handle a lot of electronics equipment, new furniture, displays and exhibits."

Judge Refuses Demeter Second Murder Trial

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Appeal Court, in a judgment released Monday, refused to give a new trial to Peter Demeter, convicted of the murder of his wife.

The five-member court dismissed objections raised by the defence about the conduct of Demeter's trial in 1974.

In its written and unanimous judgment, the appeal court said it found that none of the new evidence admitted had warranted a new trial.

Demeter, 42, was convicted by an Ontario Supreme Court jury last Dec. 5 of biring someone to kill his wife, Christine, and is serving a life sentence at Millhaven penitentiary.

The appeal court said the trial judge, Mr. Justice Donald Grant, did not err by unduly overemphasizing points in his charge to the jury.

Nor did he err by excluding evidence in which Lucille Eper, an escaped convict, apparently said he killed Mrs. Demeter as part of her plot on her husband's life, the court said.

It said Mr. Justice Grant need not have declared a mistrial because of the publicity that Demeter's trial received.

Edward Greenspan, the lawyer who conducted the appeal, was not available for comment Monday.

In July, 1973, Demeter and some friends found Mrs. Demeter's body on the floor of the garage at Demeter's home in Mississauga, just west of Toronto. Mrs. Demeter, an Australian-born model, had been bludgeoned to death.

At the trial, held in London, Ont., because of pre-trial publicity, the Crown alleged that motives for the crime were insurance policies totalling more than $1 million on Mrs. Demeter's life and an affair Demeter was having with Austrian model Marina Hundt.

War Games Occupied Poulin

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert Poulin, an 18-year-old Ottawa student who wounded six classmates and then killed himself with a shotgun at a school Nov. 27, spent most of his spare time on two hobbies—playing war games and collecting pornographic magazines and books.

One of the six wounded students died Monday.

The youth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Poulin, described the boy's habits at an inquest into the deaths of their son and Kim Rabet, 17, a neighbor whose badly burned body was found in the basement of the Poulin home the day of the shooting.

Dr. H. B. Colnam, Ontario chief coroner, who is presiding at the inquest, said an inquest into the death of Mark Hoigh, 18, the student who died in an operating room in hospital Monday, may be called.

Mrs. Poulin testified she noticed her son's interest in pornography about a year ago. Since that time, she said, Robert had collected hundreds of pornographic magazines and in the last few months his bedroom walls were papered with pictures of nude women.

Mr. Poulin said many of the magazines described in pictures and words such activities as sexual bondage.

Miss Rabet's semi-nude and badly burned body was found in Robert's basement room. She had been handcuffed to the bed and an autopsy report said that her body bore six stab wounds. The room, her body and the bed had been drenched in oil and set ablaze.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Poulin said their son did not have any girlfriends and had not mentioned Miss Rabet in the last year.

But Mrs. Poulin said her son had mentioned Miss Rabet many times in Grade 10 and she encouraged him to invite the girl over.

Robert did invite her over one evening three years ago and "they played Risk—a beginners' level type of war game," she said.

Robert spent most of his weekends and many evenings playing war games at friends' houses or at home with his "one close friend," Victor Tolgyesy.

He also spent many evenings playing war games over the telephone with Victor, she said.

Both parents said they gave Robert nearly total privacy in his cement-walled bedroom cordoned off from the rest of the basement by sheets.

On the day of the. Incident Robert went upstairs at about 7:30 a.m. and told his mother he was very sorry because, he wanted to pick up some notes from a friend who had joined him in a school project.

Teachers Outline Strike Strategy

OTTAWA (CP) — Representatives of striking Toronto teachers and the Ontario Secondary School teachers federation (OSSTF) were to meet here today with representatives of the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) and the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) to discuss strategy against proposed federal wage guides.

Jim Forster, president of the OSSTF, said about 500 Toronto teachers Monday night the proposed anti-inflation guides "have an impact on every union in the country."

He said their effect would be to destroy the process of collective bargaining and said teacher representatives would be "talking to anyone who will listen" while in Ottawa to rally the support for the fight against the guides.

His remarks came at a rally at Ottawa's City Centre which capped a demonstration by the Toronto teachers on Parliament Hill earlier in the day to protest the guides.

He said also meetings were planned with the Canadian Teachers Federation and the Ontario Teachers Federation.

He told the teachers they should direct their struggle against the Ontario government because of the role the province is playing in helping implement the proposed guides. He said an even larger demonstration was being planned at the Ontario legislature in Toronto, probably Thursday.

Mr. Forster also attacked an opinion of the federal anti-inflation board, released Friday which said the 38.3-per-cent increase offered by the Metropolitan Toronto school board to the teachers in a two-year contract would be considered excessive by the anti-inflation board.

The 8,800 teachers, on strike since Nov. 12, are seeking an increase of 43.9 per cent as set out in a report prepared by a finder, Stanley Hartt.

Earlier in the day the teachers, who came in 12 chartered buses, heckled Finance Minister Donald Macdonald who came out to meet them and said "It is bound to be difficult."

Sleeping Pill Sales Now Halted

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration said Monday it has directed J. B. Williams company to halt distribution and promotion of its Sominex 2 sleep aid and to recall all outstanding stocks.

The FDA said Sominex 2 contains the prescription drug diphenhydramine, and the label failed to carry the required warning that the drug should not be used with alcohol, during pregnancy, or by people with asthma or certain other diseases, and thus posed a significant health hazard.

Another J. B. Williams sleep-aid, Sominex, is unaffected by the action because it does not contain the drug.

Rent Control Under Criticism

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's new rent control legislation will discourage building and force property owners into bankruptcy, the select committee studying the bill was told Monday.

Briefs presented by a number of landlords and landlord organizations were critical of various sections of the bill. They were unanimous in their criticism of the eight-per-cent limit on rent increases and the fact that the bill is retroactive to last July.

P. M. Farlinger, director of the Urban Development Institute of Ontario, said timing of the bill should coincide with federal selective wage and price controls announced Oct. 13.

The legislation should end when the federal controls end, he said.

Mr. Farlinger said vacant apartments should be allowed to rent at the market level.

A brief presented by Paul D. N. Tenenini, secretary of the Sudbury Regional Landlord Association, said the bill would cause further losses for landlords. In Sudbury, landlords have been losing money for three years, he said.

"The situation there is very serious." Mr. Tenenini said. "If you roll back our increases to eight per cent we'll lose $30,000 next year instead of the $5,000 to $10,000 we've been losing.

He said for the last two years the vacancy rate in Sudbury was 18 per cent.

J. P. Alguire, vice-president, commercial development of Marlborough Properties Ltd., of Toronto, said the bill should call for a 10-per-cent increase.

All landlord submissions urged that tenant income be excluded from consideration in determining or establishing rent levels.

A brief from Goff Construction Ltd. of Woodstock, Ont., prepared by Harry W. Goff, said the bill would force his company into bankruptcy.

"I have absolutely no money to pay back retroactive rent increase, and no place to get it," the brief said.

O'Hanley Development Co. of Toronto said the bill strikes at the "very heart of our operation."

In a brief, the company said it has made a specialty of acquiring, rehabilitating and managing apartments in the Metropolitan Toronto area. It has not been unusual to purchase a building with a backlog of neglected maintenance and carry it with a loss for several years, the brief said.

Norman Brudy, representing the Federation of Metro Tenants Associations, said people cannot afford homes on the market at present and that the government should consider housing a public utility.

It should "set a reasonable price, like 25 per cent of a man's salary in rent," he said.

Mr. Brudy, who said there are one million tenants in Metro, said some persons pay as much as 40 per cent of their income in rents.

He suggested that instead of the proposed eight-per-cent increase, landlords be allowed two or three-per-cent increases.

Rent increases in Metro have gone up 18 per cent a year or more over the last few years, Mr. Brudy said.

He said the date for the roll-back of rents should be Jan. 1, 1974.

The federation of Ontario Tenants in its brief to the committee said the bill should include government housing. Because of the vagaries of the rent scale, the provincial government is open to charges of rent gouging worse than any private landlord, the brief said.

N.B. Paper Settlement May Set Trend: Munro

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro said Monday there is hope that a paper industry settlement in New Brunswick may set a trend that will end lengthy strikes by about 25,000 paperworkers across Eastern Canada.

The settlement, at Irving Pulp and paper in Saint John, provides for a pay raise of $1.85 an hour on the present base rate of $4.87, plus a cost-of-living allowance of 37 cents.

The settlement is above the federal wage and price control guides of a 10-per-cent pay increase in one year and must be approved by the federal anti-inflation board.

At present, about 45 mills are closed affecting 40 per cent of Canadian newsprint production.

Davis Stands Firm On Guidelines

TORONTO (CP) — Federal Di[illegible] told Monday.

selective wage-and-price con- "It's as simple as that,' the trols will be unsuccessful if On[illegible] — in the legislature tario opts out Premier William during a special debate to discuss the Metropolitan Toronto secondary school teachers' strike.

The teachers were seeking a 13.9-per-cent increase providing for a salary range between $12,124 and $25,274 with a cost-of-living allowance during a two-year contract. The board offered a 38.2-per-cent increase giving a salary range of between $11,575 and $24,620.

Governments Seek Loan Sharking Laws

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal and provincial consumer affairs ministers met Monday to try to agree on planned federal legislation designed to crack down on loan sharking.

Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet said he had presented "working papers" to the provinces. Federal and provincial officials are to meet in the next few weeks and another ministers conference has been scheduled for Jan. 9-22 in Toronto.

Mr. Ouellet said the object of the planned borrowers' and depositors' protection act is to force fuller disclosure of lending costs and to ensure that all lending transactions can be reopened in court to let a borrower obtain relief if he can show lending charges are excessive.

It would also require most lenders to be licensed by the federal government, or in some cases, by a provincial government. A ceiling on interest rates would be set and lending at higher rates would be a criminal offence.

This is an effort to crack down on loan sharking, or lending at exorbitant rates. It would also be done to help retailers who offer easy payment of income tax refunds but at a large discount to the taxpayer.

Mr. Ouellet said he expects to reach an agreement from the provinces at the January meeting, after officials have had a chance to study the implications of federal proposals for existing provincial laws.

The legislation is to be introduced in Parliament early next year.

Wins Titles

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jimbo McConnell of Wonder Lake, Ill., captured two American Power Boat Association outboard titles in this year's Miami Beach course outboard races. He drove a Scotti Craft boat with a V-6 Evinrude.

I JUST SAVED 7% ON MY NEW CAR!

After midnight, December 31, New Car Buyers in Ontario will have to spend hundreds of dollars more for most models.

Under existing legislation Ontario new car buyers must complete their deal prior to January 1, 1976 to be eligible for the provincial government 5% Sales Tax rebate on most new models. At that time as well, the currently reduced provincial sales tax will revert to 7%.

AS OF JANUARY 1, 1976 NEW CAR BUYERS WILL BE OUT OF POCKET ANOTHER 7%

As they say, "All good things must come to an end", and the countdown has already started all across Ontario to end the Provincial Government's 5% sales tax Rebate on most new cars. As well, the current 5% sales tax is due to revert to 7%. The deadline is midnight, December 31.

After that, new cars are going to cost Ontario consumers everywhere a lot more, hundreds of dollars more.

There's still time for you to move up to a new model at a real saving. Now is the time for wise buyers to take action. Whether you're thinking domestic or import, full-size right through to subcompact, don't delay your buying decision, visit these reputable district dealers this week and compare. Every model in town is competitively priced. Special deferred terms can be arranged and remember, your trade-in is probably worth much more than you think! Make this test drive week . . . do it now!

Council Approves Official Plan Amendments Over Cox's Objections

Belleville's official plan should be back at city hall, with final provincial government approval, in two months.

That was the prediction by city manager Wilbur Purcell after city council Monday night approved the latest request for modifications to the document from the housing ministry.

The move sets the plan into the final phase if the government approved.

Expectations are that it will take four to six weeks for ministry staff to get the amendment covering the modifications processed into the plan for ministerial approval.

"I'll be sending it (the amendment) off in a couple of days," said Mr. Purcell after the meeting in which council approved the changes.

The modifications were described as "numerous" but "generally minor in nature"— in the city manager's report.

In fact, they covered 16 foolscap pages from the ministry and another 11 pages of comment from Quinte Planning Board staff, involving deletion, changes in wording and sentences.

So bulky was the documentation that council's speedy endorsement drew a protest from Ald. Joe Cox.

Ald. Cox, chairman of council's subordinate planning advisory committee, (SPAC), objected to such swift passage without discussion.

Instead, he urged council set aside a special session to discuss the modifications — a proposal that won support from Ald. Stu Meeks.

Mr. Purcell said he could answer many of the questions on the spot so the issue could be dealt with immediately or referred to SPAC.

Ald. Jean Smith said council had already approved the official plan and the changes sought by the ministry were "very minor." She could see no "particular problem" with immediate passage of the modification.

Architect Outlines Plans For City Hall Facelift

By HARRY HULHALL
Staff Reporter

After a century, Belleville's city hall still retains charm and is an historic architectural link worth preserving.

From the outside, that is.

Inside, it could do with about $105,000 in alterations to make it live up to appearances.

That's the finding of city architect Paul Wiegand, commissioned earlier this year by council to do a feasibility study on improvements needed to enhance public approaches inside the centre of city government.

Mr. Wiegand reported back to city council Monday with assurances that the city landmark remains suitable for its civic purposes.

But its interior is "disappointing" and "inappropriate" for the administrative centre of a "progressive city like Belleville." Many offices are presently but access to them is poorly laid out, "dingy, poorly decorated and lacking — architectural qualities."

In general this means a "very bad first impression" for Belleville visitors.

Among Mr. Wiegand's finding.

— The building's staircase is a safety hazard and difficult for many people to climb.

— The heavy entrance doors are "forbidding" and not appropriately inviting for a community known as The Friendly City.

To overcome such problems, the architect's $105,000 estimate include these suggestions:

— Take off the doors, creating an entrance with a vaulted ceiling beneath the clock tower. Siren would lead to a new vestibule.

— Replace the existing central staircase with an angled stairway broken by a landing.

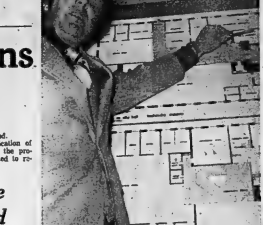
— Open up the assistants reception area and offices in the space provided by the new stairway.

— Construct a second floor rotunda with a vaulted ceiling with glazed entrances to various departments.

There also is room beneath city hall's roof to create a third floor. Council should consider making use of the additional space potential for future expansion said Mr. Wiegand.

An elevator could also be considered in this event. It's cost would be about $40,000 estimated Mr. Wiegand.

There was no indication of immediate action on the proposals as council voted to receive the study.



Juvenile Charged

A 16-year-old Hamilton youth will appear in juvenile court here Wednesday after he was arrested by Belleville police Monday and charged with five counts of theft in connection with incidents at four Belleville commercial outlets in past two weeks.

Chief Douglas Crosbie said today the arrest was made several hours after someone escaped with $200 after tilltapping the cash register at Fenina Ladies Wear at 253 Front St.

He said police recovered $260 of the missing $538 which included money missing in thefts from Bata Shoe Stores at 233 Front St. ($33) Lobley's on Pinnacle St. ($300) and two purses from McIntosh Bros. Stores Ltd. at 257 Front St. he said the youth is also wanted by Hamilton-Wentworth Regional Police.

The Inside Story

Architect Paul Wiegand tells city council Monday night that Belleville's century-old city hall gives impression of charm and is architectural link to be preserved. But inside it's a different story. His study suggests it might cost $105,000 in alterations to make interior reflect a progressive city.

Council Briefs

Sewer, Road Approved

Extension of road and storm sewer services toward the city's northeast industrial park was read into authorizing bylaws by city council Monday.

Council formally endorsed the projects two weeks ago.

First and second readings were given to ordinances authorizing a $7,186.09 trunk storm sewer and a trunked gravel road, costing $215.00.

More Dockage Coming

Additional dockage for pleasure craft will be built for Belleville harbor during the winter.

It's one of the reasons the Harbor Improvements Committee wants to continue renting part of the waterfront building on the federal government dock, Ald. Stu Meeks told city council Monday.

The committee already is using the building for storage.

Council approved payment of a $50 monthly rental to the Belleville Harbor Commission, responsible for the building.

City Takes Over Courts

Public tennis courts in west Belleville now can be classified as a community centre, qualifying for provincial grants.

The site is close to the Dick Ellis Rink and Centennial Secondary School and is Hastings County Board of Education property.

City council Monday passed a bylaw authorizing an agreement with the board that the city run the four tennis courts as a community centre facility.

Storm Sewer Passes

A $400,000 storm sewer project in northwest Belleville received city hall approval Monday night.

City council accepted an engineering report on the scheme, which extend a trunk sewer 1,800 feet along Dundas St. from Fahey St. up through Lemoine St. road allowance.

The trunk was laid between Bata Shoes Ltd. to Fahey in 1972.

Five Properties Sold

Only five properties were sold for taxes owing the city treasury this year in Belleville.

Delinquent taxpayers are given three years before their properties are listed.

This year there were 16 delinquents, but 11 paid up as the Nov. 14 deadline neared, treasurer Frank Morrell reported to city council Monday night.

The remaining five owed taxes totalling $26,364. They brought bids worth $30,051.

The owners still have a year to redeem — after city collectors must make a title search.

Firm Leases Gym

City council Monday moved to oblige a new industry by securing use of a recreation facility for its staff.

Council let recreation — arena committee will lease gym facilities for Bill Gamble at Sir James Whitney School — at no cost to the city.

The industry needs the facility for a family recreation program, explained Ald. George Segouras, committee chairman.

Speed Limit Lowered

City council Monday formally imposed a 25-mile-an-hour speed limit on Hillcrest West St.

The street was left out of a bylaw when speed restrictions on the rest of Hillcrest's streets were approved some time ago.

Resident Urges Guards At Downtown Crossings

City council was urged Monday to place guards at downtown crossing during the Christmas rush.

The suggestion came from Raymond Davidson, a Pine St. resident who has been a one-man delegation to council in recent months over pedestrian crosswalks.

Council in October endorsed a traffic committee recommendation for designating legal pedestrian crosswalks on Pinnacle St. at Campbell and Market streets.

Mr. Davidson said in the meantime crossing guards should be placed at both spots — and at Front and Campbell streets — as traffic mounts during the holiday season.

Mr. Davidson suggested officially school guards could be pressed into service.

Mayor Jim Drake said guards at any such busy intersections would have to meet police department standards. However, the suggestion would be considered, he told Mr. Davidson.

Toys for the Needy

Stan Uens (left), Belleville Firefighters' Association representative and Ken Cook, special events co-ordinator for the Students' Association of Loyalist College (SALC), help kick off annual toy and food drive sponsored by both associations during opening ceremony Monday at Loyalist. Cook holds first toy donation. Anyone with repairable toys or non-perishable foodstuffs to donate for Belleville area needy families at Christmas can call 962-9197 anytime. The drive ends at 6 p.m. Wednesday.

Pre-Christmas Visits Prove Popular Idea

Pre-Christmas visits by Santa Claus to Belleville area homes, courtesy of the Students Association of Loyalist College (SALC), are proving a popular addition to the SALC's annual toy and food drive this year, students spokesmen say.

The drive, co-sponsored by SALC and the Belleville Firefighters Association, sees student volunteers collect repairable toys and non-perishable foodstuffs for later distribution to needy area families.

To create further interest in this year's campaign, SALC offers visits by St. Nicholas to home of parents who have young children to pick up items for donation.

Spokesmen say Santa will chat with the children, take their letters and hand out candy canes. The visits are by appointment only and can be arranged by calling SALC's office at 962-9197.

As of the drive's opening ceremony Monday noon, eight appointments were already set up. Both the drive and visits ends at 6 p.m. Wednesday.

Spokesmen add people can arrange for pick up of donations by calling the same number. Volunteers will man telephones for 24 hours.

Monday's opening was conducted by Belleville Mayor Ben Corke, Paul King, Loyalist dean of faculty and academic services, Carl Hunt, SALC president, Capt. Robert Sims of the Salvation Army and Stan Uens representing the firefighters.

Five Hurt In Mishap

Total property damage is estimated at $7,000 and five people suffered minor injuries in a three-car collision Monday on Highway 2 at Montrose Rd. two miles west of Belleville.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville said Monday a car driven by Jamal Saleh, 23, of 18 Colonial Rd. at RR 3, Belleville was waiting to make a left turn when it was struck in a rear-end collision with a car driven by Michael Paul Sanders, 20, of Dutch Mill Inn in Trenton.

Police said the collision forced the Saleh car across the path of a car driven by Dennis Athanasiopoulos, 23, of 74 Patrick St. in Kingston and owned by Trudeau Motors Ltd. of 31 Station St. in Belleville.

Both Athanasiopoulos and Saleh suffered minor injuries but did not require hospital treatment. However, four occupants of the Sanders car were treated and released from Belleville General Hospital for minor injuries.

They are: Sandra, with facial and scalp lacerations; Dawn Sanders, 19, Trenton, with facial and scalp lacerations; Donald Johnston, 25, of 77 Murphy St. in Trenton, with cuts to his mouth area; and Kenneth Collin, 25, of RR 1, Carrying Place with cuts to his mouth area.

Another passenger in the Sanders car, David Barr, 20, of RR 1, Carrying Place was uninjured.

Constable Robert Jackson estimated $4,500 damage to the Saleh car and $2,500 to the left side of the 1975-model Vauxhall, $1,500 to the front end of Sanders' 1974-model Chevrolet and $1,000 to the left side of the Trudeau Motors' 1974-model Tornado in the 7:30 p.m. mishap.

Artillery Association Plans Annual Dinner

Quinte Artillery Association will hold its second annual St. Barbara's Dinner on Wednesday in honor of the patron saint of artillerymen.

The Troubadors will entertain at the dinner and dance to be held at Royal Canadian Legion in Belleville. Guest speaker will be Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie.

The association's last general meeting for 1975 was held in late November at Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment Officers Mess at Belleville Armories.

At that meeting officers for 1976 were elected. They are; president Walter Tripp, vice-president Jack Lapenter; secretary Roy Crail, treasurer Bob Davenport, directors Ross Duffie, Harold Vaughn, Dick Lazey and Larry Pullett, quartermaster Ross Stewart; attendance chairman Bill Shepherd, membership chairman Dick Burns, publicity chairman Jack Rashotte, padre Bram Humphreys and immediate past-president Bob Patrick.

MLS Home Sales Up Sharply This Year

The Quinte District Real Estate Board through its multiple listing service has sold more than $30 million in real estate so far this year.

The total is almost double the $11 million sold during the entire previous year.

Real estate board president Phil Bennett said Monday it has been good year for the multiple listing service (MLS) but is "only because of the support of member brokers and salesman" that the recording breaking total was reached.

MLS statistics show that for November alone, 39 residential transactions amounted to $1.5 million. Figures for November last year were not available.

For all MLS transactions including vacant land and commercial properties in November tally is $1.7 million compared with $602,000 for November last year.

Approximately 31 area real estate brokers and 225 salesmen participate in the MLS program which is administered by the Quinte real estate board.

Explaining the sharp increase in MLS business, Mr. Bennett said the system has been improved and streamlined.

"Our MLS record improves each year," said Mr. Bennett. "We have streamlined information processing and have increased the size of the staff to handle the workload."

Funds Still Available For Home Renewal

There's still money available to Belleville householders for home renewal.

In fact, Mayor Ben Corke is anxious that more people inquire about their qualifications for low-cost Ontario Home Renewal Program (OHRP) loans.

"I'm really inviting more applicants to come to city hall," the mayor told city council Monday. " . . . There are still funds available."

City manager Wilbur Purcell confirmed the city still had OHRP funds to distribute.

Some 22 loans have been approved so far, totalling about $60,000, said Mr. Purcell. And about $42,000 of that is forgivable — it need not be paid back.

This year the city was allocated $132,825 in OHRP funds by the province.

Cinema Offers Film for Toys

Stella Cultrane is providing an opportunity for parents to get rid of unwanted toys that have been stuffed in the closet.

In exchange for toy donations, Mrs. Cultrane, manager of Cinema at Quinte Mall, will provide a free cartoon show at 1 p.m.

Santa will be on hand to accept the donations of new or good used toys which will be the attraction to a Cinema show.

The staff of Cinema are donating their time Sunday to help supplement the Belleville Firefighters annual drive for toys.

Council Endorses Need for Ice Dams

City council is supporting an appeal against provincial government budget restrictions that threaten to freeze construction of long-awaited ice-control dams on the Moira River in Belleville.

Council Monday night voted its backing for the Moira Riv-ers Conservation Authority (MRCA) which wants a review of the funding restraint by the natural resources ministry.

There's a certain urgency about the issue, Ald. Stu Meeks — council's spokesman on MRCA — indicated to council. While funding now is restricted, it might get even tighter — thus extending the problem.

"We're concerned that if money becomes tighter . . . that we may never get these dams built," said Ald. Meeks.

The city already has close to $500,000 involved in the project with property acquisitions. There is only one more holding to be acquired before all the necessary land is assembled, he said.

The province pays 75 per cent of the project's cost while the city picks up the 25 per cent due from the MRCA.

Talked about since the 1950s as a safeguard against ice jams and floods, the dams were planned for next year. They are to be located at the rear of College St. and downtown at Field St.

The dilemma was caused when MRCA's proposed 1976 budget was slashed by the ministry's Conservation Authorities Branch.

Ald. Meeks said the $1,876,-000 MRCA estimates were cut 34.5 per cent to $1,096,700.

This ruled out construction of the College St. dams. Provincial officials suggested the Field St. facility could be built — although MRCA feels if there's not sufficient funds in the budget for that.

There is also an engineering problem. Building the downstream dam first is considered poor planning.

City council agreed with Ald. Meeks' request to support MRCA's plea in Natural Resources Minister Leo Bernier to "give some special consideration in this case."

The MRCA proposal: that budget funds be restored to permit construction of both dams next year, or (2) That sufficient money be made available to build the College St. facility first.

Performing one of many well executed routines during The New Ice Generation program Monday night at Memorial Arena are Michael Bradley and Linda Roe. Canada's first professional ice show, "Generation" plays again tonight at 8 p.m.

Second Performance Tonight

Touring Ice Show a Hit

Canada's first and only professional ice show made its Memorial Arena debut Monday night in the first of two one-a-night shows in Belleville. The club performed the two-hour show in front of approximately 500 appreciative spectators who took in the excellent display.

The New Ice Generation more than lived up to its name insofar as far as the crowd was concerned. By the start of the second act the bubbling enthusiasm of the performers had captured the hearts of the spectators who were more than willing to join in the hand clapping, foot tapping rythm put out by the skaters.

The show is one that combines a professional level of athletic ability along with the grace and style of artistic dancing. The show displays the talent of director-choreographer and five time two-fold champion skater Bernard Ford of Trenton in every aspect of its performance.

A touch of professionalism is evident from the lighting and sound systems to the costumes and co-ordination of the numbers used in the performances. Ice level seats make for a more personal touch.

The show kicks off in a rocking mood with music from the 50s and costumes to match. Rock Around the Clock gets things rolling and from there it just keeps getting better with just the right combination of a serious mood touched up with the necessary amount of comic relief that tends to make one forget that the performance is actually being done on skates.

One of the highlights of the show is its Canadian content that has earned it the title of "home grown" throughout the country.

The final show for the troops here will be tonight be-ginning at 8 p.m. at Memorial Arena.

Yardmen Close But Not Quite

BANCROFT (Special) — Belleville Yardmen Minor Midgets were forced to settle for second place in tournament action here on the weekend when Midland earned top spot on the strength of a superior goals against record in three games.

Midland and the Belleville squad each picked up five points in three games off two wins and a tie.

Yardmen scored wins over Bancroft and Keswick and sandwiched in between was a 3-3 draw with Midland.

The Belleville skaters spread their scoring around in all three tournament starts, showing a balance of power to go with solid goaltending by Bruce Bell and Brian Cook.

Scoring for Yardmen in an opening game 5-2 defeat of Bancroft were Gary Capp, Dan Duffy, Nelson Frederick, Jordy Rushlow and Andy Plaice. Steve Charbonneau, Brian Gallagher and Billy Fransky replied for the losers.

In the tie with Midland, Jim Skinkle, Mike Bryant and Tano Christopher found the mark for Belleville to offset singles by Steve Dunn, Chris Ball and Dave Ironside.

Sharing Belleville's goals in a 3-3 win over Keswick were Scott Arnold, Duffy, Mike O'Shaughnessy, Howard Graham and Bryant. Jim Pollock, Blair Hainpstre and Joey Zed hit for the Keswick counters.

CFB Puts Four in Finals

Trenton players figured heavily in the finals at the Central Ontario Badminton Association's B sanctioned tournament on the weekend. Held on the courts of Canadian Forces Base, Trenton, the event saw hometown people involved in four of five finals.

Janice Gainforth and Lynne Helps were the only Trenton-ians who captured a championship however. They defeated Jeer Sharrock and Jeanette Hayward of Whitby in the ladies doubles 15-4, 15-3.

Trenton's Gary Gilbeau and Rick Fehler evened their match 11 with a 15-10 win in the second game, but lost the rubber match 15-8 and dropped the men's doubles title to Dave Whitley and Paul Sunderland of Kingston. The Limestone City pair took the first game of the set 15-11.

Judy Pultz and Harvey Boudreau were the second Trenton entry to lose in a final. They dropped the mixed championship to Ed and Maria Gorny of Peterborough 15-11 and 15-4.

The men's singles was the only final that didn't involve a Trenton entry. Kingston's Bruce Mohr earned the title downing Dave Whitley, also of Kingston, 15-5, 17-15.

In ladies' singles Kingston's Gayle Hayerolt downed Lynne Helps, of Trenton, 11-9, 11-5.

Albert Seniors Top PECI

Albert College seniors lifted their record to 2-1 in Bay of Quinte Basketball B Division action Monday night with 74-17 victory over Prince Edward Collegiate, in Picton.

Anthony Smart led the way with 31 points and Mike Tynes was next with 14. For the losers, Quinn popped in 18.

Albert midgets took another step on the chin, their third in as many starts this season.

The Belleville school hung in during the first half of action, They were down just 27-26 after the first two quarters. However, things fell apart in the final two periods and they ended up on the short end of a 78-42 score.

Steve Johnson, of Albert, led the game's scorers with 19 points.

Busy Weekend for Bantams

Belleville McIlroy-Maines minor bantams came up with a pair of solid efforts in tournament action at Bancroft, on the weekend but the squad ran out of gas in its third start.

The McIlroy-Maines team played a 2-2 draw Friday with Bancroft and in its first start, Saturday, was nosed out 6-5 by Kingston. With little time between starts, the Belleville entry bowed out to the tune of 10-1 to Bradford.

John Broader had the only McIlroy Maines counter in the club's third start. Counting for Belleville in the cliffhanger with Kingston were Jamie Robertson and Danny Rose with two each and John Ricketts.

In the tie with Bancroft, Robertson potted the equalizer with seven seconds to play and Belleville goalie Jim Mulroney out in favor of an extra attacker. Ricketts was the other McIlroy-Maines marksman.

Sunday, in Ontario Minor Hockey Association AAA play, McIlroy-Maines lost to Peterborough 10-1. Ricketts spoiled Peterborough goalie Mark Evans' bid for a shutout.

Belleville Salmon River Motel Novices split a pair of games in league play on the weekend. The team lost 8-0 Oshawa but rebounded to pin a 5-0 defeat on Kingston as David Bunnett recorded the shutout. PeterJhulraney and Randy Uren each scored twice and John Nelles once in the win. Paul Burkitt and Ken Whiten drew two assists each.

Dixie Lee minor peewees gave Oshawa a run for the money before dropping a 6-5 decision. Chris Coastes potted two for Belleville goals; Robby Slinchcombe scored once and earned two assists while Ben Shepherd and Dan Sprague took care of the other markers.

Brian Gray scored the winner for Oshawa with only 38 seconds to play.

Kinsmen Major Bantams split a home and home series with Kingston, losing 3-1 in the Limestone City and winning 6-5 at home.

Clarence Brookerna scored the only Belleville goal in Kingston. Joe Scherer had two and Rick Reveille one for the winners.

Bill Howe and Shaun Mulroney each clicked for a pair of goals in Sunday's Kinsmen win. Mark Crawford and Brookerna shared the others. Scherer had three and John Linesman, two for Kingston.

In exhibition play, Belleville Lions turned back Stirling Jovenules 7-3 at Memorial Arena, Saturday. Looking after Lions' seven-goal total were Bobby Crawford and Glenn Gibson with two each. Bobby Napoleon, Randy Hutchison and Rob Bunton.

Stirling got one each from Dave Jeffs, Rob DeJong and Kevin Solmes.

Pronovost on Point Spree But Penguins Don't Prosper

MONTREAL (CP) — If Pittsburgh Penguins were as successful in keeping the puck out of the net as their veteran right winger Jean Pronovost has been at picking up points, the club would sport a much better won-lost average than the 10-11 shows today.

Only Montreal Canadiens and Philadelphia Flyers and Buffalo Sabres—all division leaders—have scored more goals than the Penguins in National Hockey League competition so far this season.

And while Pronovost is one of the reasons the Penguins have 26 goals in 21 games so far, the fact remains that only one of the other 17 teams has a worse goals-against average. Washington Capitals have allowed 4.76 goals-per-game, while the Penguins have given up 4.61.

In contrast, Montreal and Philadelphia each have scored 108 goals, while the Sabres have 103 to their credit. At the same time Montreal, Buffalo and Philadelphia goalies run one, two, three in the goals-against department.

Pronovost, purchased from Boston Bruins May 21, 1974, currently is on a streak during which time he has picked up at least one point in 15 consecutive games, the longest such stretch in the league this season.

He failed to pick up at least a point in only one game so far this season—when the Penguins were shut out 4-0 by Bobcaygeon Vachon of the Kings in Los Angeles, Oct. 30.

Last week, Pronovost, a 28-year-old native of Shawinigan, Que., had six points in three games, had six points in three games, including his 400th as a Penguin in regular-season play. That outburst stowed him into fourth place in the scoring race with 34 points, seven fewer than the leader, Guy Lafleur of Montreal.

In the 21 games in which he has had points, Pronovost has three points five times, two points three times and one in the other 13 games. His consistency is the best among the day's list.

Lafleur and centre Bobby Clarke of Philadelphia, who is second with 39 points, each have been blanked in five games. Centre Pete Mahovlich—third behind Lafleur and Clarke with 36 points—has failed to get at least a point in each of six games, the same as defenceman Denis Potvin of New York Islanders. Potvin is fifth with 33 points, one fewer than Pronovost.

Pronovost's 34 points consist of 13 goals and 21 assists, while Lafleur has 17, Clarke also has scored 15 times and Mahovlich has 14 goals.

Ironically, the top goal-scorer—Danny Gare of Buffalo—does not appear in the top 25 point leaders today. Gare has 19 goals, but has earned only six assists.

JOINS BRAVES STAFF

ATLANTA (AP) — Veteran baseball coach Vern Benson will join Dave Bristol's coaching staff next year, the Atlanta Braves announced Monday. Benson, 51, has coached in the major leagues for 14 of the past 15 years, including the last five with St. Louis Cardinals.

INVITED TO SWEDEN

OTTAWA (CP) — The Badminton Association of Sweden has accepted an invitation to attend a tournament next spring, the Canadian Badminton Association announced Monday. Sweden will send a four-member team, all under age 21, to Canada for 10 days beginning April 24. As part of a reciprocal agreement Canada will send a girls' team to Sweden in 1977.

Weak Sisters Worry 'Eagle'

TORONTO (CP) — Alan Eagleson, executive-director of the National Hockey League Players' Association, says he is concerned about shaky franchises in the league, but thinks the problem might be eased by consolidating the weak franchises.

"If you can consolidate the six teams that are shaky into four, you end up with only two franchise collapses instead of six," the Toronto lawyer said Monday. "This could be done by dispersing their front four. two teams is beef up the other four.

"After all, what would you prefer if you were owner of a bankrupt franchise in Minneapolis or 20 per cent of another franchise that stands a chance of making."

He considers Minnesota North Stars as one of the weak links in the NHL. If projected losses after six weeks follow through, they probably will lose $100,000 on their 1975-76 operation, he added.

Eagleson considers Atlanta, Flames, California Golden Seals, Detroit Red Wings, Kansas City Scouts and Washington Capitals as other problem areas. He also is worried about Pittsburgh Penguins, whose sleeves that franchise has the slightest percipect for survival among those in difficulty.

"I don't think the Penguins franchise can't survive in Oakland, adding that he has suggested that the Toronto area can support a second NHL team.

"In the short haul I can't foresee any more support for those teams," he said. "I'm terribly concerned about the situation.

League president Clarence Campbell says the financial state of affairs in the league might somewhat dampen expansion plans.

"We've got to solidify what we have before we start widening out and thinking about the Toronto area can support a second NHL team.

"In the short haul I can't foresee any more support for those teams," he said. "I'm terribly concerned about the situation.

Player Remanded

TORONTO (CP) — Dan Maloney of Detroit Red Wings, charged with causing death by bodily harm, was remanded Monday in provincial court to Feb. 2 for a preliminary hearing.

Maloney was charged following a fight with Toronto Maple Leaf defenceman Brian Glennie during a National Hockey League game at Maple Leaf Gardens. Glennie was taken to hospital and later released.

Crown Attorney Robert McGee told Judge J. B. Parker the hearing will be held in a special courtroom and videotape equipment will be used during the preliminary session.

Maloney will be represented by Toronto lawyer George Filsinger. Judge Parker will elect trial by judge and jury at the February hearing.

The charge against Maloney was laid one week after Attorney-General Ray McMurtry announced that hockey players taking part in unprovoked assaults during games would be charged under the Criminal Code.

The maximum penalty on the assault charge under indictment is a five-years jail term.

Goalies Get Their Lumps

TORONTO (CP) — Goaltenders' averages took a beating in the World Hockey Association during the last week as a number of top shooters paddled their point totals.

WHA statistics show that Joe Daley, the leading goalie with a 2.89 goals-against average a week ago, has dropped to 2.69 this week and most of the other top 10 netminders have suffered a similar setback.

In the meantime, four players scored five or more goals during the week, including two who each scored five in one game.

Wayne Connelly of Minnesota Fighting Saints and Ron Ward of Cleveland Crusaders became the second and third players, respectively, to score five in one game this season. Vaclav Nedomansky of Toronto Toros had the first five-goal game two weeks ago.

Ward, with his five goals in a 10-9 Cleveland rally against the Toros, was the first player to accumulate that feat twice. He was the first player in WHA history to score a five-goal game when did it in 1973 when he was a member of the old New York Raiders club.

Gray Looking For Napoles

HALIFAX (CP) — Clyde Gray, Canadian welterweight boxing champion, says he now has the key to winning the world championship after retaining his Commonwealth crown in a bout here Monday night.

The key? Carry the fight to your opponent.

Gray, who came close to winning the world title twice but lost because, he says, he held back, retained his Commonwealth title by an unanimous eight-round technical knockout.

He carried Monday's fight to Lawrence Haley of Stellarton, N.S., throughout, battering the stocky Canadian middleweight champion with crushing combinations.

Referee Sammy Luftspring stopped the one-sided affair at 2:31 of the eighth round as Haley reeled helplessly around the ring, bleeding from the eyes and nose.

Ivy Ungerman, Gray's manager, said he will be in touch with world welterweight champion Jose Napoles immediately to arrange a title fight.

"If I fight Napoles I'll carry the fight to him," said Gray as he explained his strategy in his dressing room.

"He (Haley) was fighting defensively tonight and I had thought he would have been more aggressive."

Haley and Gray, both Nova Scotians, drew a record 8,300 fans to the Halifax Forum, which Ungerman said was a good omen for future fights in the city.

He said he will try to bring Dave Downey, the former Canadian middleweight title holder, "out of hiding" for a fight in Halifax before going after Napoles.

Gray and Downey have been challenging each other for several years without getting into the ring. Haley took Downey's Canadian middleweight title on a split decision last May.

Monday's fight started slowly but Gray started his stalking tactics in the second round when he scored with sparring jabs that brought blood from around Haley's eyes.

Gray took charge in the third and only faltered briefly in the fifth when Haley opened up and slugged with him.

In the sixth, Gray staggered but,

GREEN FACES ?

Sure . . . some color televisions give you green faces. Not to mention green arms and hands! But the televisions you buy at Angelo's will never do that. No sir. You see, it's the good fortune (not to mention discrimination, hahe) to buy a color television at Angelo's, the only green thing you see will be your friends and neighbors. (Green with envy, that is).
Come on into Angelo's and see the beautiful colours at just a few of the many we have at the Belleville Plaza.

Dog Revived

This small dog was trapped in a burning house in Regina Thursday when firemen arrived. Fireman Alfred Noels found the animal overcome by smoke but a couple of drags on an oxygen mask, designed for humans, soon had it back to near normal.

Watergate Inquisitor Sam Erwin Retires to Writing and Speaking

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Sometimes Sam J. Ervin meets a person who thinks the United States needs a new constitution. The suggestion does not appall to him.

"I think those people need to have their heads examined," he says. "We don't need a new constitution. Ours has weathered many storms in the last 200 years. It was written to last for the ages."

At 78, in retirement from the Senate, Ervin finds that many Americans want to hear about the constitutional beliefs of an old man who endeared himself to thousands with his political wit and homely diction as the Senate Watergate hearings.

He thought he would do a lot of fishing after retirement last January. But he has been too busy on the lecture circuit, where he is more popular than John Dean, Charles Colson, or any of the president's men his Senate Watergate committee helped to topple.

He has given "I have no idea how many" lectures to college students, bar associations and businessmen. He usually speaks briefly on some aspect of the constitution, his specialty, and then answers questions about them about Watergate.

Ervin turns down 15 invitations for every one he accepts. His travel schedule would wear down younger men, but the former senator says he enjoys it. "I've got in a groove and it's most relaxing. I just sit there and read."

He also is thanking money, sometimes. Record fees have ranged from $1,500 to $2,000. On the other hand, he frequently speaks without fee.

Ervin and his wife, Margaret, are home more now than they ever were during his 20 years as a state legislator, judge, state Supreme Court justice and congressman. They live in an eighteen-room brick house across the street from the house in which he was born.

A lot of time is devoted to reading. The list includes biographies of such men as Daniel Webster, Benjamin Franklin and Benjamin Disraeli. Ervin has read most of the Washington Star-news, everything of the works of Theodore White and Dan Rather.

Every month, the Senate clerk sends from Washington a pouch of mail from people who reportedly believe that Ervin came to the Senate with the constitution and always will be there.

Retirement seems to agree with him. He has lost 15 pounds on a diet of "lots of North Carolina turnips and cabbages and no sweet desserts." His jowls are ruddy and his eyebrows are longer lunge about his forehead like bedetfies in flight.

Ervin is working, in fits and starts, on a book about the conflicting rights I was in trying to preserve the rights that the constitution guarantees to the people."

They include the censure of Senator Joseph McCarthy, the exposure of the corruption and tyranny in labor unions, the civil rights era, military surveillance and Watergate.

He does not mind passing a morning focusing his sharp memory on incidents and impressions from the past. Some examples:

On Joseph McCarthy: "McCarthy found out that you could make an accusation, no matter how untrue, and get away with it because the truth would follow on leaden feet. When I first went to the Senate in June, 1954, you'd see McCarthy surrounded by 50 or 60 reporters who knew their day's work would soon be done because he'd make a statement about somebody."

On CIA female Rachele Constitution Dirven Beck (former president of the Teamsters) came up and the 14th Amendment about 30 times in one day. He even refused to answer whether he was married or not. He said that might incriminate him. I said, 'You don't have to answer to this questionire, but you're going to have to answer to Mrs. Beck when you get home.'"

On civil rights legislation few blacks: "I got more people across one of being sort of a split personality, opposing civil rights bills and standing for civil liberties. I think my position was a matter of principle. I identified that he was ordered out to Colorado State University to cover a rally protesting the Vietnam War. There were 47 students participating in the rally and 27 reporters and intelligence agents. He was supposed to tape the speeches, which were peaceful and re-strained. But he couldn't because six army helicopters flew overhead throughout the demonstration and made too much noise."

On Richard Nixon: "He had the most pronounced, aggravated notion about the powers of the presidency. He envisaged the president as being somewhere of an absolute monarch."

On reactions to Watergate: "I was a result of televising the hearings (in the summer of 1973) as people could see the witnesses and form their own judgment as to who was telling the truth, the reaction of the country was very favorable. I am left with an abiding conviction that there's a great backlog of devotion to our fundamental principles of government and devotion to morality in this country."

Ervin still sees many things in Washington that bother him. He considers deficit spending and "this idea that all of the problems of the people should be regulated" as the two greatest threats to the republic.

Then there is Senate Bill One, a revision of the federal criminal code that, among other things, "tries to make it conform to the nature of the British Official Secrets Act."

If Congress ever mark something classified, it would be a crime for anyone to publish it, even if the classified document is a plan to destroy the United States."

Would Ervin like to re-enter the fray? "I stayed up there for 20 years and gave them three or four hundred billion dollars worth of good advice and they took about 15 cents worth."

The truth of Gladstone's statement he grinned. "I take that back. They did pass a good statute, is the most wonderful many of my bills."

He plans to keep lecturing, time by the brain and purpose, reminding people of his belief in of man."

"The truth of Gladstone's statement that the American congress is the most wonderful work ever struck oil at a given 1972, general election.

B. C. Premier Barrett Is Strange Mix Of Humorist and Cunning Politician

VICTORIA (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett, seeking a second term in office, bills himself as like old fat Davey, engaged in an uphill battle with British Columbia's big-business interests.

The 45-year-old social worker turned politician went into the Dec. 11 provincial general election campaign with the theme, the underdog in a fight against bigness as represented, he says, by the Social Credit party.

In announcing the general election Nov. 3, Mr. Barrett said big business can be beaten and big labor has a voice but the "downward majority" of the unorganized, the poor and the aged—need leadership.

"We're in a bitter struggle against the big-business alliance under the front of Social Credit," the premier told a gathering in Dawson Creek, B.C.

Mr. Barrett, one of the country's more colorful premiers and the leader of the province's first socialist government, slips easily into the "just folks" routine he adopts for campaign rallies.

His stock campaign speech is a mixture of W. C. Fields-like comedy and the arm waving gospel-preaching style of W. A. C. Bennett, former Social Credit premier. Mr. Barrett is the first Socialist premier of the province.

He heatedly mixed comedy routines with serious reminders of what his party has done since it wrested power from the Social Credit party in the Aug. 30, 1972, general election.

He jokes that those who are against the New Democratic Party administration do not dislike its programs such as Medicare and Pharmacare. "They just want to get rid of little old fat Dave."

During his three years and two months in power, the premier, with an often devastating style, has brought a more relaxed atmosphere to the office occupied by the more conservative-minded Mr. Bennett.

The longer Mr. Barrett was in office the more evident it became that behind the humorous, compassionate humanitarian was a cunning politician with a sense of power and a willingness to use that power.

"If there's one thing I learned from W. A. C. Bennett it's how to kill," he once told an interviewer.

"The time to hit a politician is when he's down."

It was this kind of cold, cunning approach to politics for example, that appeared to be behind his election call.

On Oct. 3 the premier dropped his cabinet shocking, among other moves, to demote Minister of Lands Dan Nimsick to travel-lnspector and to assign Transport Minister Bob Strachan as .C.'s agent-general in London.

The moves pacified, because of the controversial mineral royalties legislation, and transport, because of its responsibility for the controversial Insurance Corporation of B.C., were two of the more critiqued areas in Mr. Barrett's administration.

On Oct. 7, the NDP government boggled the opposition by unexpectedly ordering back to work for a 90-day cooling-off period more than 10,000 workers involved in four separate labor disputes.

On Oct. M, B.C. backed up its claim that the federal government's wage and price controls were not tough enough by imposing a 68-day price freeze on food and other essential goods and services.

Mr. Barrett, seemingly inching for an election, kept the opposition off guard by reiterating that there was only a 10-per-cent chance of a vote in 1975.

Then on Nov. 3 he called the election, claiming that he needed a mandate for some "tough decisions" that would have to be made to fight inflation.

Observers felt it hard to believe that the premier, who had almost two years left in his mandate, really felt he needed to go to the people for such matters, since he had already taken strong action with the back-to-work legislation and the price freeze.

It is obvious that the premier, a political brawler with roots in Vancouver's tough, working-class east-end district, felt the time was right for his government's government was ever to get in for a second term.

During the NDP's turbulent term, it has turned the province upside down, buying into the private sector, setting up com-pulsory automobile insurance and imposing tougher tax measures on corporations to help pay for social programs.

Mr. Barrett has polished the image of the government as the defender of the weak, the champion of the downtrodden.

Foundation Formed

LONDON (CP) — The Sports Aid Foundation which will raise funds and encourage sponsorship for training of sportsmen and women has been formed in Britain. All sports are eligible for grants from the foundation and beneficiaries will range from amateurs to international competitors. Members of Britain's Olympic team will benefit first. Sept

Slow Driving

BRADFORD, England (CP) — Driver Douglas Berry, 46, of this Yorkshire city was astonished when a police car flagged him down recently and the constable told him he was going too slow. Berry, who was driving on a four-lane road, was furious after the constable told him to drive about 35 miles an hour. The constable said there was a long line of traffic behind the Berry car.

Gardens Opened

LONDON (CP) — More than 3,000 acres of beautiful private gardens are open on certain days of the year under the National Gardens Scheme, set up nearly 53 years ago as a charitable trust. The scheme was established in 1927 in premises in Queen Alexandra Way but has been in 20 of the Queen's London and District Nursing. Last year 700 to 800 persons visited the gardens.

OXFORD, England (CP). — One of Oxford University Press's massive publications, the Dictionary of National Biography, which lists all those who have died since 1900, is being produced in a compact edition for the first time. The complete text has been reproduced micrographically with the 37,424 pages reduced to 2,000. Reading glasses will be provided with the two volumes.

Puzzling Phrases

OXFORD, England (CP) — Oxford University Press is publishing a new dictionary—the Dictionary of Current Idiomatic English. Unless a foreigner has knowledge of English he might be confused by phrases like "push the boat out" or "make a clean breast of it." The dictionary explains phrases used in specialized fields, phrases not accepted and whether a word is formal or slang.

Cottage Restored

NOTTINGHAM, England (CP) — The cottage where English writer D. H. Lawrence is said to have been born in 1885 and where he spent his early childhood is to be turned into a living museum reflecting his family's lifestyle. The miner's cottage, one of a terrace in Eastwood near this Midlands city, will be refurbished to its original state with appropriate furniture and gas lighting by next year.

Acting Students Must Wait Year Before First Performance

VANCOUVER (CP) — Twelve students in a new kind of professional theatre school here will have to wait another year before they will be allowed to appear before a public audience.

They are students of the Playhouse acting school, the only acting school in Canada directly attached to a professional theatre—The Playhouse, Vancouver's leading regional professional company.

Powys Thomas, the Welsh-born Canadian actor who co-founded of the National Theatre School in Montreal in 1960 and served as artistic director of his English section for five years, heads the Playhouse school.

He said in an interview the school offers a two-year course in acting speech and movement. While students work closely with the Playhouse Theatre, they will not appear in any public performance until the second year of the course.

They will then be cast in small parts in either the Playhouse Theatre's main or second-stage productions in the 1976-77 season.

Thomas, 50, a veteran of many years at the Stratford Festival and an actor at some time in most of major professional theatres in Canada, has planned the program as a two-year cycle. It will not admit new students next year, but in the fall of 1977 when this class has graduated.

In this way, he said, the faculty as well as the students can concentrate fully on their planned program of studies. Others on the faculty are Lloyd Costin, voice coach at the Stratford Festival and a graduate of the National Theatre School, and Christian Thomas as movement instructor.

The school was one of the first projects planned by Christopher Newton when he took over the Playhouse Theatre as its artistic director last year.

To get it up, he parred $20 000 out of an already-tight budget. Students pay $750 a year for tuition, and put up another $1,000 each year which is paid back to them in weekly allowances.

The Playhouse school will train more actors for the English-speaking stage in Canada than any other school in the Theatre School, Thomas said. By being attached to the theatre company, students also will have a better feel of professional theatre life than they would have in an independent school.

In addition to the school's own faculty of three, students receive lectures from Newton and other members of the professional company, including designer Cameron Porteous, although the school does not teach design.

Showbiz Shorts

OTTAWA (CP) — A display of theatre designs by Brian Jackson of Toronto, covering the 20 years of his work with the performing arts in Canada, be opened Monday night at the National Arts Centre.

G. Hamilton Southam, director-general of the centre, said the display may be the first of its kind from the centre to go on tour across the country.

Jackson, a native of London, came to Canada in 1955 to head the properties department at the Stratford Festival and did his first set designs for The Canadian Players' production of Shaw's Man and Superman in 1957.

He has designed sits and costumes for plays and operas for most of the regional theatres in Canada, including last year's King John at Stratford and Kronborg 1582, the musical version of Hamlet done last year at the Charlottetown Festival.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (Reuter)—Thieves broke into the house where pianist Liberace was staying and stole his $20,000 gold necklace, complete with miniature gold pianos and a tiny gold Rolls-Royce with diamond headlights, police said.

They said $3,000 in jewelry also was stolen from Liberace's associate, Gregory Scortese, who occupied the house.

The pianist said the necklace was given to him during a recent performance at a Nevada night club.

Liberace's own Hollywood home, a treasure house of historic pianos and exotic furniture, was broken into Oct. 28. However, the caretaker surprised the intruder before he could take anything and he escaped through a window.

HAMBURG (AP) — East German authorities have disbanded one of the state's most popular pop music groups for having "insulted the working classes" and "defamed the state security services," a news report in the Hamburg weekly Der Spiegel.

The group, Klaus Renft-Cobo, was acclaimed only two years ago in the Communist party newspaper Neues Deutschland: "Their music is our yesterday and our today, bound into our very way of life."

Several days after the turnaround by the authorities, the group's recordings willsuppressed from shops and discotheques and their music was no longer heard on radio, says Der Spiegel.

NEW YORK (AP) — The CBS television network said Monday it will start a new Friday night series called Sarah on Feb. 13.

The hour-long series, based on a novel by Marian Cockrell, stars Brenda Vaccaro as an eastern U.S. schoolteacher who starts a new life in a western mining town in the late 1800s.

CBS's announcement filled the last vacant time period in its mid-season program schedule. The show's competition will be two NBC situation comedies, Sanford and Son and The Practician, and an ABC variety show starring Donny and Marie Osmond.

LONDON (Reuter) — About 150 faithful fans from all over Britain trooped here Sunday to watch ,ilooking Cassidy fire his first shot.

Corralled into a small hotel basement, they peered spellbound as the first Hopalong film—Hopalong Cassidy enters—flickered across the screen.

MUNICH, West Germany (Reuter) — Hans Schwekhart, one of West Germany's greatest stage directors and actors, died Monday two weeks after he was admitted to hospital with a circulatory complaint.

Schwekhart was director of the Munich Kammerspiele Theatre from 1942 to 1964. He celebrated his 80th birthday two months ago by staging a new version of Berthold Brecht's Herr Puntila und Sein Knecht at Munich's Residenz Theatre.

Old Experts Never Die They Go Overseas

MONTREAL (CP) — Old experts never die—they go overseas and lend their expertise to developing countries.

That's the sort of story heard at Montreal headquarters of Canadian Executive Service Overseas (CESO), a "person-to-person" aid program.

Retired Canadian executives—in the capacity of advisers—have carried managerial and technical expertise to more than 1,000 projects in 46 countries since CESO's inception in 1961.

"We have a saying—we're retired but not dried up," says smiling comment of Bruce F. Harris, CESO vice-president for Asian operations after four years of field service in West Africa and Malaysia.

Like most volunteer consultants, Mr. Harris, 61-year-old retired lumber company operator who formerly lived in West Vancouver was accompanied overseas by his wife, Doris, as as "partner and secretary." She also gathered cultural information for the benefit of future volunteers and worked with children.

Bruce and Doris Harris, who have three children and three grandchildren, emphasized in an interview that the benefits of such missions are mutual—"it is a two-way street.

"I loved it," Mrr. Harris said. "I long for those days and those smiling faces."

"That work has kept me busier than my own business ever did and there is a feeling of remove job satisfaction," said Mr. Harris.

Assignments generally last from two to six months but volunteers frequently do an additional tours. While they receive no salary or fees their air fare is covered by CESO and their living costs are met by government or company.

Occasionally the volunteer is a woman, as in the case of Dorothy Lemoine, 46-year-old languages teacher from Vancouver who was assigned to Indonesia requested by her husband Philip. He plans to work with local groups in that country.

Aiming to help developing countries achieve economic growth, CESO experts give guidance in everything from diamond-drilling to pig-raising, manufacturing, agriculture and fishing, management, accounting and finance, pulp and paper and construction.

Thomas H. (Tommy) Tigert of Toronto, longtime official of Canadian Lumbermen Corp., opened a northern British Columbia sawmill—then left his wife, Dorothy, in the north, where she is a volunteer, worked with orphans in a remote community. Now the Tigerts are in the Philippines, where he is adviser at a copper and gold mine.

Frequently one assignment creates another, Mr. Harris reported.

In Sri Lanka, the former Ceylon, asked CESO for help in extending its 6-acre barley crop because malt imports were cutting into the country's foreign exchange.

That problem was solved by Harold McLaughlin, 79-year-old barley - growing champion from Saskatchewan. Alta. But Sri Lanka then asked for an expert in malt. W. E. (Bud) Sandland, Willowdale, Ont., a "malt ster," crossed the country to tackle the job.

Jim Bowman of Winnipeg was improving the breeding stock of pigs in the Philippines at the same time as Roy Cahoon, former CEC vice-president of engineering, was improving TV circuits in that country.

Applications for French-language consultants come from such African countries as Tunisia, Morocco, Ivory Coast, Togo, Dahomey and Cameroon and from the Germain vice-president for CESO operations in Canada, Jean-Louis Roy, said:

"In all, we have a roster of 1,200 volunteers ready to fill new ones signing up monthly," said Mr. Roy. At present there are 43 couples in the field, another 100 getting ready to go and 35 names have been submitted to clients who made applications for experts.

CESO's $1.3-million budget is financed mainly by federal government through the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) plus contributions from Canadian business.

Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

Wednesday, Dec. 3

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're generous, up to a point, today. You do, however, require appreciation or you could turn sour in the evening.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The day will not be as profitable as it could be. While you're slogging the load, you'll also be pulling the cart.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A serious matter confronts you today. You're wise to treat it in an affable manner, while still recognizing its gravity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're an effective worker today as long as you don't take on an unrealistic load and wind up doing nothing really well.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're sure of yourself today—to a limited degree. A strong willed person could bewilder you into defending against your better judgment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today you'll get your fair share by being honest and straightforward, but not too pushy. Respect those you deal with.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) A friend has an annoying habit of throwing down ideas you feel are good. Today, save aggravation. Don't tell him what you have in mind.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're still under favorable financial aspects but there is a small warning: Avoid any kind of extravagant conduct.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Anything you undertake for you to do today will be better accomplished with as much people as possible. Two's company—four is impossible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You could be upset today. Those you've done favors for expect more and more to be passionate, but don't be used.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Everyone seems to let his hair down once in a while. Trouble is, you may not know when to quit today.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) This will be a very rewarding day if you don't trip over your own feet. Avoid implusiveness.

Menopause Not Always Factor

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Are there any conditions other than menopause which can cause women to have severe and frequent hot flushes and night sweats?

I am 62, and I had a partial hysterectomy several years ago. I have been on estrogen for six years or more. I have been very physical, and all the results seem satisfactory. Do you have any suggestions?—Mrs. S. T.

The flushes and sweating of menopause are a vasomotor phenomenon, controlled by the nervous system. It is a problem initiated by the ovary, but the nervous system that regulates such things as the size of blood vessels is quite complex. The same mechanism can cause coronary thrombosis when the goose flesh some folks experience under certain circumstances.

This control mechanism can create other symptoms and disorders, such as cold hands and feet. So menopause is not always a factor in these disturbances. Night sweats, as an example, can occur with certain infections.

At 62, one would have expected an end to your menopausal problems and so we must indicate that estrogen therapy has not ended them. If you are at this time, other causes should be investigated.

Perhaps a mild sedative or a tranquilizer would be effective as an alternative to the hormones. You should discuss this possibility with your physician. Menopausal symptoms can remain for long periods in some women, but I have always advised the search for other causes if they remain many years, as in your case.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My two sons, ages 4 and 5, had a medical examination and both came home with colds. The clinic that did the test told me to take them to a doctor.

I did four days later, and the sugar didn't show up. The doctor is a hickey specialist. Do you think he overdid it? Maybe he said it was from something they had been eating. But they each have a piece of candy before going into the clinic.

My mother died of diabetes. I don't have it. If someone in the family has had diabetes, is there a chance that one's own close relative will have it?—Mrs. C. H.

The bars of candy could have been responsible to produce the positive sugar readings. In some people, sugar appears in the urine normally after a heavy meal, but without being indicative of diabetes. A blood sugar test to check your child's load is more significant. In this, an elevated blood sugar would indicate an insufficient quantity of insulin to properly "burn the sugar" in the blood.

There is a tendency for diabetes to reappear in families. Occasionally a young children would produce dramatic symptoms—extreme thirst, frequency of urination, bedwetting, listlessness, and a confusing sugar reading—and not reach a coma. Parents with diabetes in their family background should inform pediatricians of this possibility.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband and I are both 37 and we have been trying for four or five years before having children. We are both continuing to try and would like to start a family.

Recently I have heard that if you have your first child after age 35 you run a risk of having breast cancer. Is this true?—Mrs. J. S.

I know of no evidence that connects breast cancer with the age at which a woman gives birth to her first child.

In another part of your letter, you say you also inquire about the possibility of pregnancy by your age. Medical science has taken many dangers out of childbirth. The chances are very good that you will have no problems because of your age.

Completing your education is important to you and to your children. Fulfilling this desire could have a positive effect on your family life and parenthood, and thus contribute to a better marriage in the long run. This would far outweigh any marginal advantage in conceiving at 27 as opposed to, say, 30.

Cuba's Lenin Park Is Cultural Collage

HAVANA (Reuter) — Bookworms, music lovers and rodeo fans come into town all in Havana's Lenin Park, a huge recreational area offering an intriguing mix of cultural and cultural activities.

Opened three years ago to mark the anniversary of Lenin's death, the park with its lake, open-air amphitheatre and rodeo stadium, stands just south of the capital, giving Havana's few residents a better chance of a cross-country walk virtually on their doorstep.

On Sundays thousands of local people join tourists from the provinces in the afternoon for the vast lawns or eat meals in the many cafeterias.

There is also a luxurious restaurant called The Basque, built around an old sugar farm, its white marble interior entwined with green mossy walls.

Regarded as Premier Fidel Castro's brainchild in the field of Cuba's leading attractions, Lenin Park is Disneyland, Cuban in line with Chinese concepts of leisure. The sound of violins replaces fanfair music, and free open-air theatres are preferred to slot machines.

Strollers may go from an art gallery to a puppet show and on to a literary club where young people read poetry aloud, play the guitar and sing traditional songs.

Beside a tree-shaded stream stands a library where locals buy books for the day. You sign your name, take the book away to read anywhere within park limits and hand it back when you leave it.

Tiles range from children's tales to books by French authors Honore de Balzac and Emile Zola and the complete works of Karl Marx and Lenin.

The idea for the park began with a dam built near Havana's international airport. At first it was intended to use the reservoir for pleasure boating, but soon huge amphitheatre, with seats cut from limestone and a revolving stage floating above the water, came into being alongside the 27,000-seat rodeo stadium.

There, during the winter, cowboys clad in Texan style compete in provincial and national tournaments.

Rodeo competitions developed after the 1959 revolution when Cuba opened cattle ranches to try to become a meat-exporting country. They are popular, particular, with people living up for hours for meals.

Raise Rejected

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Sheriff Raymond Frank (didn't show) said, just a four-cent raise for next year, but Travis County commissioners rejected it. Mr. Frank's proposal to round off $10,000.00 salary at $20,000 would foul up accounting procedures, commissioners said.

Starred for Sox, Fox Dead at 47

BALTIMORE (AP) — Jacob Nelson (Nellie) Fox, second baseman for Chicago White Sox for 12 years, died in hospital Monday following a lengthy illness. He was 47.

Fox, of St. Thomas, Pa., retired from baseball in 1965 after suffering from akin cancer.

Fox came up through the Philadelphia Athletics farm system and then was traded to the White Sox in October, 1949, with catcher Joe Tipton moving to the A's in the deal. It was with the White Sox that Fox enjoyed his greatest success, holding down second base for that team from 1950 to 1963.

He set a major league baseball record for second baseemen by playing 798 consecutive games from Aug. 7, 1958, through Sept. 3, 1960.

He enjoyed his finest all-around season in 1959 when he batted .306 and helped the White Sox to the American League pennant. He was named the American League's most valuable player that year.

That was his sixth .300 season for the Sox. His best season at bat was 1954 when he hit .313.

He was a flawless fielder who led American League second basemen in putouts for for nine consecutive seasons starting in 1951.

In 1963, the White Sox swapped Fox to Houston in exchange for two players, pitcher Jim Golden and outfielder Danny Murphy, and cash. He played just one full season in the National League before retiring in 1965. He later coached for Houston and for Washington Senators.

Fox compiled a career .288 batting average. He appeared in 11 all-star games, batting .308 and hit .375 in the 1959 World Series against Los Angeles.

Lancers Lose 5-2 To Barrie

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP) — Barrie Flyers defeated Lindsay Lancers 5-2 in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A action Monday before about 300 spectators. It was the only scheduled game.

Lindsay opened the scoring at 7:00 of the first period on a goal by Wayne Mackichan. Barrie replied with goals by Paul Gegan at 12:59 and Bob Monteith at 19:38 to give the Flyers a 2-1 lead at the end of the first.

In the second period, Darryl Sly scored for Barrie and Malcolm replied for Lindsay.

The Flyers, who had five of the game's seven penalties, added one goal from Ron Robinson and one from Doug Acomb in the third.

Payne Will Continue as Roughrider Coach

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders announced today coach John Payne will remain with the club at least one more year.

The Western Football Conference club has signed a contract with Payne that includes an option for a second year said president Al Sangster.

There was speculation this fall that Payne, an Oklahoma native who has been head coach here for three years, might not return because of reported dissension. Reports said retiring quarterback Ron Lancaster was interested in the job.

No details of the contract were released. Payne was out of town and unavailable for comment.

Before coming to the Riders, Payne was a coach with Winnipeg Blue Bombers Edmonton Eskimos, Brigham Young University and Oklahoma Central as a guard. Oklahoma State College. He played at Ok-l

World Champion Falls To 17-year-old Cuban

MONTREAL (CP) — Bienvenido Lazo of Cuba may not get a chance to compete here in the 1976 Summer Olympics, but he can relish the fact he upset a world champion at the International Competitors 1975 boxing event Monday night.

Lazo, only 17 and described by his coaches as a developing boxer who still ranks "third or fourth best in his weight" in Cuba, proved too much for world amateur lightweight champion Yanulli Solomon of the Soviet Union, defending his more experienced opponent the gold medal.

The Cuban stunned dispatched the 30-year-old Soviet to the canvas in the first round and then opened a deep cut over Solomin's left eye with a devasting left in the second, forcing the referee to stop the fight and award Lazo the victory.

Soviet fighters did salvage two gold medals in the tournament when light-welterweight Valeri Limanov scored a clear-cut decision over Alex Kazuda of Japan and light-middleweight Viktor Savchenko decked Cuban Luis-Felipe Martinez twice before being awarded the bout at 1:39 of the second round.

It was a bad night for Canadian fighters who dropped all three bouts they competed in on the final card of the competition.

Ian Clyde, 20, of Montreal lost a unanimous decision in the flyweight class to Japan's Fuji Nagai, while Camille Huard, 34, of Ganya Sud., Que., dropped a unanimous decision to 36-year-old Tibor Bedart of Hungary, a quarter-finalist at last year's world amateur championships in Havana.

Meanwhile, middleweight Bryan Gibson, 27 of Montreal, making only his second international start in that weight class after vacating the light-heavyweight ranks, came on too late in his bout with Ugandan Mustafa Wanagi, staggering his opponent several times in the third round but dropping a 5-0 decision and settling for the silver medal.

Buckeyes Are No. 1

NEW YORK (AP) — Ohio State is the 1975 regular-season champion of college football in the United States.

The Buckeyes, who completed a 11-0 season a week ago and will meet UCLA in the Rose Bowl, received 39 first-place votes and 1,144 of a possible 1,200 points today from an Associated Press panel of 38 sports writers and broadcasters.

Texas A and M, Oklahoma and Alabama held onto the next three spots. Texas Aggies ran their record to 10-0 with one game remaining with a 30-10 triumph over Texas and received seven first-place votes and 1,058 points. Last week, the Aggies trailed 1,058-1,018.

Oklahoma, 10-1 and bound for the Orange Bowl, received the first-place vote and 890 points. Alabama ran its record to 10-1 by blanking Auburn 38-0 and earned 781 points.

The final poll to determine the 1975 champion will be taken following the bowl games.

By losing to Texas A and M, Texas Longhorns dropped to ninth place from fifth. That permitted Michigan, Nebraska and Arizona State to move up one position apiece to fifth, sixth and seventh places. Michigan and Nebraska finished up a week ago but Arizona State, 11-0, nailed down the Western Athletic Conference crown and a berth in the Fiesta Bowl by shading Arizona 36-21.

Injunction Is Denied

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice John Morden of the Ontario Supreme Court refused Monday to grant an interlocutory injunction on behalf of the Toronto Marlboros Hockey Club that would prevent John Tonelli from playing professional hockey.

In a 45-page document, Mr. Justice Morden ruled that the Ontario Major Junior A Hockey Association standard player contract Tonelli signed last year was one-sided in favor of the Marlboros.

When Tonelli reached his 18th birthday, he signed with Houston club of the World Hockey Association.

Mr. Justice Morden also indicated that the development fees asked for in the junior contract are unfair. The contract states that a player, upon graduation from junior hockey, must render 20 per cent of his pro salary for three years to junior hockey.

In Tonelli's case, 20 per cent of his $230,000 salary over three years would give the Marlboros $64,000.

Anti-inflation Board Delays Talks Between Teachers and Board

TORONTO (CP) — Problems in settling ground rules Tuesday delayed negotiations between Metropolitan Toronto school boards and the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation.

Dyce Sime, chairman of the Ontario Education Relations Commission, said procedural and legal problems during commission talks with both sides, arose over a statement Friday by the federal anti-inflation board that it would disallow wage increases offered to the teachers.

Mr. Sime said legislation establishing the board has not yet been passed in Parliament but mediation must continue with the view that it will be established.

The strike which started Nov. 12 affects 8,000 students in 135 high schools.

Douglas Lawless, commission administrator, said both parties agreed to try to reach a solution with the help of a commission-appointed mediator, expected to be appointed today.

William Ross, chairman for the Metropolitan Toronto school board, said the anti-inflation board statement will influence negotiations. The teachers say they will not acknowledge that board exists.

The school boards offered an increase of 28.5 per cent over two years and the teachers were seeking a 43-per-cent increase. The present salary scale is $7,900 to $18,300.

Meanwhile, Education Minister Tom Wells told the legislature the government does not intend to legislate the teachers back to work because "I think we all agree that the best way is to get the parties concerned back to the bargaining table and that is being done now."

In Ottawa, Ed Broadbent, the federal NDP leader, said the anti-inflation board contradicted the government's policy for wage and price restraints in the case of the teachers.

He said in the Commons that the policy paper published Oct. 14 states that historical relationships in salaries will be protected.

He said there was a 21-year history of wage parity between Metro Toronto high school and elementary teachers. But now the elementary teachers will be paid more than high school teachers.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said the decision is the board's responsibility and declined to comment.

Ford's Plan To Aid New York In Trouble

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's plan to loan New York City the money it needs to avoid bankruptcy faces the threat of a filibuster in the United States Senate after winning approval by a 19-vote margin in the House of Representatives.

Senators were scheduled to begin consideration of the $2.3-billion loan bill today, and backers of the measure hoped to get it passed before the city faces its next financial default deadline Dec. 11.

The House gave approval Tuesday to the measure on a vote of 215 to 201, with 36 Republicans and 175 Democrats voting in favor of the aid plan.

Senator James Allen (Dem., Ala.) said he will filibuster the bill when it reaches the Senate, but he admitted he thinks the supporters now have the votes to invoke cloture and shut off debate.

A filibuster might delay action on the bill because it takes at least two days to shut off debate. Opponents of the aid plan conceded after the House vote that backers of the bill have the momentum to get the measure through the Senate.

The House-approved bill would give the city up to $2.3 billion in short loans for the next three years, but it requires the city to pay at the end of each fiscal year the amount it borrowed before it can get more money.

Tighter Drug Laws Will Cost $2.9 Million

OTTAWA (CP) — Tighter enforcement of the Narcotic Control Act and the Food and Drug Act will cost the federal government $2.9 million instead of the $1.3 million originally budgeted Health Minister Marc Lalonde said Tuesday.

He told the Commons social affairs committee the numbers of cases under the acts increased to 22,000 from 23,000 between 1972 and 1974.

Among other supplementary funds he requested was $170,000 "to step up our work aimed at ensuring the safe drinking water supply for Canadians."

Dr. Alex Morrison, head of the health protection branch, said the money will be spent for research to revise the 1968 water standards.

"The old standards are inadequate because they set no limits for mercury or asbestos and we now know the radioactivity level they allow is 100 times too high."

Police Arrest Boy For Attempted Murder

LISTOWEL, Ont. (CP) — Police said today that a 15-year-old boy has been charged with attempted murder in connection with an attack Saturday on a 30-year-old Listowel woman in her home.

The juvenile was arrested Tuesday following an investigation by Listowel police and provincial police.

Police said the woman, Pauline Bert, was stabbed indecently assaulted and choked by a person who apparently went to her door and asked for a glass of water.

She left he was a clean-looking type," said Police Chief William Sachs. "There was no robbery that we can establish."

Mrs. Bert, a widow, called police at about midnight Saturday night after the attack. She is in satisfactory condition in hospital.

Listowel is about 25 miles northwest of Kitchener.

Six Toronto Students Attending Classes Here

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

About six metropolitan Toronto secondary school students are currently attending classes in Hastings County as a direct result of 22-day-old teacher strike in Toronto.

Director of education Eric Runacres said Tuesday the six students, spread throughout the county, are attempting to keep up their courses despite the strike which has affected 140,000 students in Toronto.

Mr. Runacres explained the families of all these students own cottage property in Hastings County and therefore are entitled to an education here as long as the individual high schools can accommodate them. A fee of $38 a month is being charged to each student.

He said to date there have been no students from Toronto trying to go to school here on a pay-as-you-go basis. He speculated that these students seeking a secondary school outside of metro would probably try for boards with a 30-mile range.

Asked whether he thought the move was a strike breaking step Runacres replied that the teachers and principals are accepting these students and that they feel it is not a negative move against the Toronto teachers.

However, he cautioned that if a greater influx of students from Toronto occurred he'd be scared may have to re-evaluate its position. "But now it's a very minimal problem and we don't anticipate many more coming here," he added.

Leaders Predict Bitterness

Union Votes Yes, Mail Now Moving

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Mail service was restored across the country Tuesday, bringing to an end the longest strike in the history of the post office.

The 22,000 members of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) began returning to their jobs, many of them grudgingly, after voting by a narrow margin to accept the tentative agreement.

There were no reports of any serious problems as the first shift returned to work following the 43-day strike. But union leaders say there is a lingering bitterness among many of the workers and peace in the post office is not assured.

Results released by union headquarters in Ottawa show that of 14,541 votes cast, 7,251 or 51.8 percent favored accepting the agreement while 6,800 or 47.5 per cent voted no. There were 141 spoiled ballots.

Joe Davidson, CUPW president, told a news conference Tuesday that such a close vote after a six-week-long strike indicated the membership was behind the national executive as headquarters had maintained during the strike.

"I'm very proud of the vote, and I'm very proud of our members," he said.

"The government of Canada and the postal department threw away an opportunity to ostracize peace in the post office."

Reports indicate members voted to reject the agreement in Vancouver, Regina, Saskatoon, the Ontario cities of Windsor, Sarnia, Sudbury, and Sault Ste. Marie, Montreal and Quebec City, Locals in Edmonton, Calgary, Winnipeg, London, Ont., Toronto, Ottawa and Halifax voted to accept the offer.

Jean-Claude Parrot, chief union negotiator, said there will be discussed in the post office during the life of the new contract, which expires in July, 1977.

"This is not a threat," he said. "It's a fact of life."

Meanwhile, the post office has asked the public to withhold all mail addressed outside the country until further notice.

First-and second-class mail within the country can be posted immediately, a spokesman said Tuesday.

The post office is working on several potential problems connected with a full resumption of service just prior to the Christmas rush. An announcement is expected within a few days concerning international mail.

All overseas surface mail deadlines for Christmas delivery have passed and some airmail deadlines are approaching. The post office is studying ways of ensuring that airmail headed overseas will reach its destination in time for Christmas.

Union Will Ostracize Strike-breaking Posties

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Five Belleville inside post office workers will be ostracized by the remainder of their union for crossing strike picket lines, said local president Walter Freeman.

Some weeks ago, the handful of inside workers crossed lines and began sorting mail while other local members walked picket lines.

"They'll be completely ostracized — treated as if they didn't exist," said Mr. Yateman.

Asked if the union would attempt to force the five to leave their jobs, he said "we can't force anyone to leave the union. They're obliged to pay union dues and we're obliged to represent them."

At the Quinte District Labor Council Tuesday night Ian Reilly, outgoing vice-president, asked council members "to step to another wicket to let scabs know they are scabs. And let them know why you don't want to buy your stamps from them."

Mr. Yateman said "we'll take a hard look back inside with us" as he and 32,000 members of his union returned to their jobs today.

"We lost the battle but we didn't lose the war," Mr. Yateman said during an interview following a Quinte District Labor Council meeting.

He said if this meant his union would work to rule or stage work slow-downs, Mr. Yateman said "I can't suggest any tactics ... but we'll use any tactics we can to reach a just end."

He specified members of CUPW worked each week as an important part of what he referred to as a "just end."

Mr. Yateman was also critical of an editorial comment published by The Intelligencer, calling for a moratorium on strikes.

"We waited for 16 months to get the government to the negotiating table," said Mr. Yateman. "We struck in desperation to get the talks going for a contract."

Residents to Refrain From Mailing Cards

By AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

Belleville postmaster Roy Wainwright asked residents Tuesday to refrain from immediately posting Christmas cards as a backlog of first class and parcel mail, now in public hands, could be cleared through the post office.

He made his request following the return to work of the city's 53 inside postal workers, at 4 p.m. Tuesday.

Workers at the Pinnacle St. post office opened today at 8 a.m. after two previous shifts had cleared a small backlog of mail and sorted mail received at street letter boxes and at the post office Tuesday.

Deadlines for Christmas cards are Dec. 8 for overseas, Dec. 13 for out of town, and Dec. 15 for city mail.

The postmaster said it would be wiser to adhere to the deadlines, otherwise, he could not guarantee that cards would get through by Christmas.

A ban on third class mail — advertising handouts and flyers — has been established and will last for the next five days.

Walter Yateman, president of the Brighton and District CUPW local, said all city workers were beginning mail sorting, voting to go in to work.

He would not reveal how many of the 28 members who voted decided not to return to work in to their jobs.

"I feel we're stuck with another union's contract," he said, referring to the $1.70 an hour increase over 30 months accepted by inside workers — a wage package similar to that of letter carriers.

"We should have had the right to bargain our own contract," Mr. Yateman said, reasoning that inside workers work shifts and have longer hours.

Bandits Take Hostages

PARIS (Reuter) — Armed bandits exchanged gunfire with security men in a Paris bank today, then locked themselves inside with about 10 hostages, police said.

Three persons were believed wounded in the shootout.

The gunmen, wearing three-quarter length coats and fedora hats, burst into a branch of the state-owned Credit Lyonnais bank in central Paris in mid-morning, only minutes before British Chancellor Denis Healey arrived to deliver cash.

The security men saw the robbers as soon as they entered the bank and drew their guns. There was an exchange of shots that the bandits somehow managed to close the doors.

France's elite brigade of gang-busters sped to the scene and police sealed off the police blocked off traffic. No precise details were available on the gunmen, the hostages or the wounded, police said.

Drivers Not Conditions Cause Mishaps: CSC

"There are no good driving conditions: only good drivers."

That is the Safe Driving Week message Canada Safety Council (CSC) is presenting to Canadian drivers in conjunction with its campaign from Dec. 1-7.

CSC says it intends the message — contained in this year's feature poster — "will emphasize the need for drivers to adjust their driving habits to winter conditions or face the consequences."

"Few drivers are really bad all of the time — just not nearly enough are really good all of the time," CSC comments. "It is the momentary lapses that can create traffic havoc."

"The brief period of inattention, the failure to verify road and traffic conditions for that one extra trip, the temporary procrastination about getting the wiper blades fixed or the burned-out headlamp replaced or the one seasonal party too many, when the vehicle should best have been left at home," or even at the office or plant!"

The week is not aimed at the small group of really bad drivers, CSC points out. The messages would probably not be seen or heeded any way," it adds.

"It is the basically good driver who will most often notice and heed a safety tip — and appreciate it."

Foxboro Man Remanded in Court

A 19-year-old Foxboro man will appear in provincial court here Dec. 22 for date to be set for trial on charges of possession of a weapon dangerous to the public peace and wilful damage over $50.

Rodney Cameron Reid of 38 Main St. was remanded when he appeared in provincial court here Monday.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville say the charges resulted from an investigation into an incident at Loyalist College Nov. 13 during a Keg and Barrel Night sponsored by the Students Association of Loyalist College (SALC).

Police say earlier in the event, SALC's security force — the Blue and Gold Society — were forced to eject a person who was creating a disturbance.

Police say the man attempted to return to the dance, was confronted by society members and displayed a knife. The man was not a Loyalist student, police add.

Police estimate $200 damage each to two main outside glass doors which were broken during the incident.

Man in Court on Two False Pretence Charges

Norman Buxton, 34, of West Hill near Toronto will appear in Hastings County Court here Thursday for trial on two counts of false pretences.

Buxton is charged in connection with two incidents in Trenton on Jan. 9 and Jan. 16 this year.

He pleaded not guilty to both counts Tuesday before Judge Russell C. Hooey and a 12-member jury was selected.

Assistant Crown attorney John Wood of Belleville said Buxton's Toronto lawyer was not prepared to proceed with the trial Tuesday. "County court proceedings are not scheduled today.

David Peterson, MPP London Centre, told area Liberals Tuesday he plans to seek the leadership of the provincial Liberal party during its January convention. Sixteen local Liberals were selected delegates to the meeting.

1975 Contract Talks Stall, Firemen Go to Board Again

TRENTON — For the fourth time in the last five years, Trenton's firemen and the town will be going to arbitration to settle contract differences on Dec. 17.

Firemen members of Local 2338 of the International Association of Firefighters, have been working without a contract for the last year. Negotiations for this year's contract were not inaugurated until September after the firefighters won an arbitration award of a 17-per-cent increase for 1974.

Trenton council refused to negotiate the 1975 contract demands when they were submitted early this year until it knew what decision the arbitration board would reach.

Contract talks were terminated soon after they began, with firemen seeking a 19-per-cent wage increase and the town offering 12.4 per cent.

Salaries will be the only item discussed during the arbitration because the firemen have withdrawn all requests for fringe benefits.

Sixteen Local Grits Named to Convention

PICTON — The Prince Edward-Lennox Liberal Association Tuesday elected eight delegates and eight alternates to attend the provincial leadership convention in January, 1976.

The meeting, held at Isa On the Bay, drew a turn — out of fewer than 25 members.

Liberal association president Mary Kaiser said it was hoped that by moving from a municipal hall for the meeting, more persons would attend.

"Are there any ideas on how to roust out our members which we supposedly have six of," she asked during the meeting.

Delegates are Wayne Lindsay, John Cole, Barry Young, Eleanor Lindsay, Irene Hacksolm, William Edwards, Charles Fraleigh and Janice Backholm.

Alternates are John Murphy, William Rutherford, Homer Collins, Bay Wight, James Madden Jr., Wally Brenzel, Lyn Gordon and Shirley Foster.

Town PUC's New Impost May Get Test in Court

By JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Some town developers have hired lawyers to explore the possibility of having the new utility commission water impost declared illegal.

Many subdividers are known planking not only about the charging of the additional tax but say they are being forced to pay the impost retroactively.

Trenton builder Isaac Tango said Tuesday that it is the good of a signature from the town if they can turn around and charge (the developers) to high heaven."

The developers say they question the reason they must pay the new tax on all hooking units — $300 for homes and $280 for apartments — that are covered under subdivider agreements signed before the impost was announced, Sept. 18.

James McDonald, commission chairman, said that this factor was considered when the levy was under discussion.

"We gave all the developers a 30-day grace period before we began charging for the hook-up," said Mr. MacDonald.

The chairman said the town was going to spend almost $200,000 for expansion of the water filtration plant and that the new subdivisions would directly benefit from the program.

"The new homeowners, and the developers, are the ones creating the increasing demands on the present electrical and water systems so why should the rest of the town have to absorb the cost of facilities expansion?" said Mr. MacDonald.

Albert Defosse said "The increasing costs are making it difficult for young people to purchase homes." He is one of the local developers who has said the impost is unfair.

Developers say the lawyers are not only examining the legality of the retroactive charges but also whether the entire levy is lawful. Many have said the matter will probably be settled in the courts and have paid the charges under protest.

Stan Klemencic, a town developer, said "When I was told I had to pay the new impost before I would receive either electricity or water I did it but I told the PUC I was doing it with reservations."

"There was nothing I could do but pay for the hook-ups and absorb the additional costs," he said.

New Liberal MPP To Seek Top Job

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — David Peterson, newly elected provincial Liberal member for the riding of London Centre, Tuesday told members of the Prince Edward-Lennox Liberal Association that he will seek the party's leadership at the provincial leadership convention in January, 1976.

A guest speaker during a meeting of the local Liberal association, called to elect delegates to the leadership convention, Mr. Peterson observed that some consider his decision "presumptuous and premature."

The 31-year-old MPP added he is eager to mobilize the Liberal party and to instill new life.

He said that these are "troubled times" and there is no clear alternative. Electors are seeking something new.

Mr. Peterson, who said he will officially declare his decision to seek the party's leadership next week, commented that the Liberal party is at a crossroads.

He noted there is "an exciting new caucus and a lot of talent."

Mr. Peterson referred to the province's conservatism as "a tattered and threadbare government operating one step ahead of the inevitable."

This creates a perfect opportunity for the Liberal party whose place in the over-all spectrum is in "the middle of the road, sensible, reasonable, compromising position representing the long term interests of everyone."

He said that a major review of what is being done with farm lands, "a resource we are abusing now", must be taken. He also commended that Canada has only a two-to four-year supply of natural gas remaining.

In a question period, Mr. Peterson said as premier of his province he would de-centralize government and suggested the removal of several ministries to other cities. "I favor organized reasonable growth," he said.

He said the New Democratic Party now has a higher sense of purpose than the Liberals, but predicted any losses will be quickly regained after the leadership convention.

"If I were the party leader I would put the party in a state of election readiness. There is nothing more effective than between-the-campaigning."

Mr. Peterson is involved in the import-export business and is a graduate of the University of Toronto law school.

He first ran for elected office this fall in the redistributed riding of London Centre. After the election he was appointed Liberal energy critic and now is one of the 13 party committee studying hydro rate increase.

Poverty-level Retirement and Zero Productivity Prime Concerns in Canada

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

The finding that most retired Canadians have poverty-level incomes should be of concern to all Canadians, no matter which side of 65 they be on.

The Canadian Council on Social Development, an independent body, has studied the financial circumstances of retirement-age Canadians. In the last census, some 1,700,000 were past 65).

It says it found that more than half the people who are over 65 had incomes below the poverty line. It defined that line as an annual income of $7,028— or $135 a week—for a family of four.

Such people are eligible for the federal guaranteed income supplement.

The obvious message," says the council, "is that Canadians lack adequate income security for their retirement years."

Maybe it's less obvious, but surely there's another important message as well!

The minority of retired people who have adequate incomes must have planned and sacrificed a little during their working years.

Their prudence could serve as an example to working people who are still young enough to start providing for their own post-66 financial security and comfort.

The council's report gives short shrift to private pensions, concluding that governmental pension benefits are the best answer to the problem.

Granted, universal schemes—like Canada and Quebec pension plans—should be and are the base on which retirement security is built.

But only the base. If the universal pensions were expected to provide a pre-retirement level of income—something it was never intended to do—the tax burden on income-earners would be staggering.

In fact the current state of the Canadian economy makes it doubtful that we can continue to expect a constantly rising standard of living—much less the luxury of having the government assume the entire responsibility for our comfortable retirement.

The last time the economy displayed strong growth was in first-quarter 1974. Since then there have been 11 months of decline or stagnation, and six months of modest recovery.

Productivity has shown no effective increase since 1972, when output per person improved only 1.8 per cent, down from a meagre two per cent in 1972.

"Although our aspirations have continued to expand, we have moved into a virtual state of zero growth and a steady state in productivity," says H. Ian Macdonald, the economist who is president of York University, Toronto.

He contends that Canadians may have to accept a lower standard of living unless the economy starts to grow significantly.

(An international comparison recently ranked the Canadian standard of living seventh. A generation ago it was the highest in the world).

"Either we accept a renewed determination to increase economic growth or we agree to diminish our aspirations to the higher standard of living," Dr. Macdonald warns.

"To deny the first and ignore the second is to court social disaster."

The Canadians most vulnerable to social disaster would be those who are outside the workforce and lack its leverage.

The biggest such group: The retired. They are expected to number 3,100,000 a quarter-century from now, says the Canadian Council on Social Development.

While waiting for governments to undertake fundamental economic reconstruction, working Canadians would do well to strengthen their individual plans for post-retirement security.

Individual Rights

"I made my own decision."

Those words from a young man in an interview when asked why he had decided to return to his job in the post office in defiance of union strictures.

In a democratic society there has to be room for both unionism and the right of the individual to arrive at his own decisions. The people who went back to work, as distinct from those who stayed out, while being denied an opportunity to vote on the government's wage offer, demonstrated that right.

Looking at present trends, the mail strike, and with lesser errors out in Toronto, one of the most damaging factors is the fanning of strike psychology, parallel with inflation psychology.

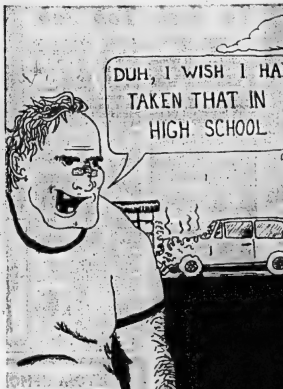
In an article in The Canadian Magazine back in June, Fraser Kelly wrote, prophetically as it turns out, of the clamor of teachers for wage — of Windsor's 29 per cent boost in February, Ottawa's 34 per cent in March, both after lengthy strikes, and Metro Toronto's teacher demands of "increases of up to 72 per cent under threat of a mass walkout this fall."

Fraser says this is called "pattern bargaining" — the tendency of workers to pattern their demands after settlements awarded to other workers in the same industry. "Everybody, he notes, tries to leapfrog over each other, which as he adds, "can't be done forever."

The writer alludes to a growing feeling that North America "may be teetering on the verge of profound social and economic decline." And Canada, it will be recalled, has recorded a work loss record worse than all other developed countries save one. Only Italy had lost more.

The title of the article gives some idea of the mood of the country: "Frustrations of a Strike-bound Society."

It fits the situation today.



NEWS ITEM: HASTINGS COUNTY SCHOOLS TO OFFER CENTRAL CREDIT COURSE IN DRIVER EDUCATION

...And Money to Burn

Teachers and others bent on extracting more money from the system may a prime concern is the cost of living.

Everyone is aware that living costs are rising and that the Anti-Inflation Board must direct its attention to prices as much as to wage and salary increases. But let's not forget that teachers by and large are already well paid, and in Metro have been offered substantial increases. We recall one who wrote to a Toronto columnist some time ago pointing out that he and his wife were doing alright. They enjoyed numerous trips here and there, and the writer spoke in wonderment of the fact that another substantial raise was forthcoming.

Consider too a Globe and Mail article of recent days pointing out that negotiators for Metro teachers and the school boards, and factfinder Stanley Hartt had stayed in luxury hotels.

The teachers, the report said, had footed the bill for about a dozen of their negotiators staying in a hotel where rooms start at $34 a night. Costs "must be astronomical" a spokesman for the teacher acknowledged.

If we are to believe the teachers' claims, there is not enough to meet the cost-of-living, but, there's plenty to shell out for accommodation for talks. Some contradictions here — and wonderment no doubt, in the minds of a public which in the last analysis, foots the bill.

Front St. Studio

Lise Ann Hansen is a young Wellington artist who has exhibited at the Quinte Mall and has now opened a studio in a former drug store on Front Street.

In addition to her own varied style in which portrait work predominates, Miss Hansen has furnished some links with the past.

On the wall above the door, just inside, she has had a wall covered with old magazine covers. They are pure Canadiana in print and she acquired them from old picture frames. Some of her own work, along with a picture of a family, posed in the traditional way of the time, and some other bits and pieces complete the scenario.

This, in addition to her own interesting artistic style, makes for an interesting new addition to the Front Street commercial and art scene.

Mounting Tragedy on Highways

The Trenchian

Twice of late we talked to people who knew two young men killed in separate traffic accidents. The enormity of the tragedy in the wards of young lives one cannot express adequately in words.

Yet if one looks at the long dreary list of mishaps, which fill the columns week after week, although they are not limited to weekends, he must be struck by some commonly pressed lessons.

Like it or not, the majority of the drivers involved in the severe crashes are young, often teenage. Why? The answers are doubtless complex, but there must be some. The number of such accidents has increased tremendously. Insurance companies know this, and add to their cost, and unfortunately to the premiums of all the rest of us who must pay for car insurance. Some attention needs to be given to methods of solving this part of the problem.

Second, it is startling how many are single vehicle crashes. The human mood commonly put is "out of control". We have often commented on the perilous increase in single vehicle accidents in the past few years. Is it Driver Error? Speed? Mechanical fault? All three combined? The single vehicle crash is the one in which the driver cannot blame anybody or anything but himself. If he were driving a well maintained vehicle, driving with due care and attention to road and weather conditions, such accidents should not happen.

The other element is the increase in fatal accidents, indicating crashes at high speed. Partly this seems to be due to inattention to bad weather conditions, since many crashes are occurring at night, in rain, in fog, or in other poor weather. But there is also little doubt that a combination of drink, excessive speed, and general disregard for traffic signs and signals are to no small degree responsible.

We go on with propaganda and education campaigns, but what good have they done?

Somehow, we must find a way to have enough people to enforce the laws and by stopping people who disobey them and signals, help to create good driving habits, and thus reduce the prodigality of accidents.

With all respect to police, who cannot be everywhere at once, we think the province must look in terms of a special traffic detail of its police, with particularly trained, and enough personnel and vehicles to patrol adequately. Otherwise the senseless slaughter will never stop.

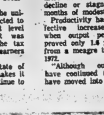
Carlos on Thin Ice Over Gibraltar Issue

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service



In a curious and totally unexpected reference to the integrity of the territory of Spain's neighbor, Spain's new King Juan Carlos was clearly referring to the Spanish case for Gibraltar.

And already that self-governing crown colony, whose rugged impregnability is an extension of the Spanish mainland, has appealed to London. Overnight its prime minister, Sir Joshua Hassan, for more protection against any ongoing Spanish threat.

A major foreign policy position of the France regime had been the return of the Rock to Spain, if it took coercion, harassment and a re-reading of European law as extensions of proper ownership to bring this about.

But General Franco went to his grave without the Rock returned to Spain, the 20-called "Birthday present" which he had wanted before death finally removed him from the scene.

Since the late '60s, Gibraltar has been cut off completely from Spain. The Gibraltar-Spanish border gates have been closed for years, the Spanish side only incidentally, since the Gibraltarians say they didn't order their gates closed).

For Gibraltar's busy economy and 25,000 population the end of direct contact with Spain meant the end of jobs on the Rock for about 5,000 Spanish day workers who come to the Rock each morning, and leave for nearby homes in Spain each afternoon.

It also meant an end to the substantial business in the duty free, land speculation and oddments of trade coming from which many rich Gibraltarians made their fortunes.

But the political and historical implications of Franco's Spain trying to squeeze Gibraltar into submission are more serious.

Gibraltar has all the personal, press and civil freedoms denied to Spaniards within the country. Inevitably it would have lost also through any absorption into Franco's authoritarian state.

"Gib" is the last historic headland of British manpower in the Mediterranean and in the Atlantic. It is literally dedicated mainly empty of Royal Navy ships these days, but of fighting granite and in history of faded British might.

But remember the Spanish people had this way about "The Rock," El Roque as they call it. It was also a symbol of great Spanish sea power and empire before it was captured by a British fleet in 1704 and ceded to Britain by a peace treaty in 1713.

The Gibraltarians in the mid 1930s and into the time Franco government turned on the heat, had private talks with successive British governments on absorption into the United Kingdom as an integral part like, say Wales.

But British governments have rejected this formula and presumably will continue to do so.

And yet curiously the Gibraltarian Rock is a mixture of the races of the Mediterranean, Levantine, Latin inference, British of course, but above all of the Andalusian (Spain's southern region), is a bilingual person in English and Spanish.

The Spanish he speaks is similar to that of Andalusia, the region to which Gib is attached physically. I have heard waiters in Gibraltar hotels in that dialect, rapid Spanish of Andalusia, make fun of the fussy British tourists, who arrive in their hundreds from the nearest direct flights from London and Manchester to Malaga capital of their "British brothers."

Queen Victoria I linked by blood and marriage to Britain's German Hanover Royal House very warily indeed in the Gibraltar issue.

Goodness knows he has enough on his plate trying to Spain herself without tweaking the tail of the British lion which snarled at Napoleon. Why not like to purr at a king in Spain!

Refinery Idea Under Fire

Montreal La Presse: We first learned of the proposed aluminum refinery at Cap Tourmente in the province's recently-tabled budget.

We had never believed that the government planned to combine this abomination with tourism, this vandalism on the banks of the St. Lawrence River — near one of the nicest areas on the continent. But it's true.

If our elected officials thought that in doing this they would have to reckon only with the Parti Quebecois, they opposition they were mistaken. Anyone aware of the importance of nature and the ecological dangers of such a project must surely rebel against it.

Exclusiveness Reigns Among Deputy Ministerial Clique

By RICHARD JACKSON

Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA — It is reasonably certain that most Canadians know that Pierre Elliott Trudeau is Prime Minister.

And quite a few will be aware that Donald Macdonald is the new Finance Minister.

There will even be some who might identify two or perhaps more members of the federal cabinet.

But how many could name a deputy minister?

The answer, almost certainly, has to be not ve y many.

Yet there are now going on nearly 100 of them, who take up what must be one of the two most important bodies in the country today — the other being the federal cabinet, and perhaps only slightly more influential.

But even there in the highest councils, the cabinet itself, the deputies play a big and often decision-shaping hand in policy-making that directs all our lives — from the welfare wion to the corporate board chairman — in one way or another.

So that is why they a e known — and both feared and fawned upon — as the Mandarins of Ottawa, a name borrowed from the highly-ranking Chinese who rigidly controlled the destiny of millions.

Carefully they always have kept a low profile, theunine the front rapht and time how cast that the politicians prine as highly, so as to fade into the shadows of power behind what some of them laughingly call their "political masters."

And so smooth are their manners over the years that they reflect an image at all. It is in fact rather that of which the public catches only faint glimpses.

So little is know about them — as compared to the unknown quantity of interviews cascading around the politicians — privately and publicly — that at what life is like for the privileged few who wield the power behind the throne.

They make their home in the boneyed hive of plush suba ban Rockcliffe Park.

There they enclave at half century-old homes worth up to $250,000 has an aloofness that cold-shoulders social climbing and the crass mercenaries of the vulgar market place.

No one living in Rockcliffe is trying to make it — they already know where it is and are there.

They are a very secure, extremely self-contained power elite.

And this security — protection beyond pe adventure from the cold competitive wind that blows in the working world of profit and loss beyond the cozy confines of their Ottawa cocoon — perhaps is best reflected in their style of home entertaining.

No recit

So to bear — Jean Beetaw who lived in Canada's ambassador of catering consultants which white glove service, and who is talking about in Ottawa, the mandarins mostly host small informal affairs.

"Little parties" as they call them, for seldom more than 20 personal friends. Maybe 16 or so fellow Mandarins with whom they do be sees by phone and word-of-mouth confidential memo, and, of course, their discreet always-discreet-in-the-background wives.

Everything like the Mandarins themselves is low-key.

Even the food and drink. Martinis and a good but modest wine.

A buffet, reports Mrs. Beaton, with either cold barley or whole salmon and the inevitable turkey.

With the best natural mushroom gravy tinged green salad, baked Idaho potatoes flow ones that grab you. Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick), dessert, coffee and liqueurs, all laid on, exclusive of the beverages, for seldom more than $10 a plate.

There is nothing flamboyant about it," recounts Mrs. Beaton, whose own parties have never been planning, serving and supervising these parties for years. "The exclusivity of the parties is the key to it.

"They all know and trust one another" — a net of Ottawa hi-boys network — "and they stay very much within their own elected circle of acquaintanceship.

Not very exciting really, is it? But how would you like the same warm, self-comforting glow that the Mandarins enjoy from their own exclusive re-stricivity of position and power? Nice, huh?

Yummy Gifts from the Christmas Kitchen

Not everyone can churn out dozens of crocheted hats or pair after pair of knitted mittens. Or batiked silk scarves by the yard or macramed wall hangings. But nearly everyone can be crafty in the kitchen and produce food gifts for holiday giving which are very tasty, very special and very cheap.

For an extra special friend or relation consider your kitchen gift with a purchased piece of kitchen equipment. For example, a loaf of your best home-made bread carefully wrapped and tied with a ribbon to a brand new bread board. Or some of your good chili sauce in a fancy wire-closure canning jar. Make a special cheese spread and pack it in a piece of local pottery.

The only caution about food gifts: If it's something that needs refrigeration or freezing; the receiver should know about it or he may put it under the tree for a week!

You can gauge what kind of food gift to give by the age and family size of the recipient. An elderly couple or person living alone might appreciate a gift of many kinds of cookies together with a tiny Christmas pudding or fruitcake. A young couple would enjoy small jars of several kinds of unusual savouries or jellies while a large family or one with small children might like a Christmas morning coffee cake.

Five Savouries

Barbecue Catsup: two large cans Italian tomatoes; ¼ cup sugar, one tbsp brown sugar, one chopped onion, one tsp allspice, ½ tsp ground cloves, one green pepper, "chopped, three drops hot sauce, two crushed garlic cloves, ½ tsp dry mustard.

Combine all ingredients, bring to boil and simmer slowly over low heat. Stir frequently, for about one hour, until the mixture is reduced by half. Sieve and then bring to the boil again. Seal in sterile containers. Yields 1½ pints.

Fine wine vinegar: one bottle inexpensive red wine (dry), 32 ounces tarragon vinegar, two cloves, three bay leaves, one clove garlic. Simmer over very low heat for 30 minutes. Strain through cheesecloth, pour into sterile bottles. Cork tightly and seal tops with paraffin. Yields two quarts.

Mint Vinegar: Heat a pint of cider vinegar with ½ cup of sugar; Add ¾ cup fresh mint and simmer for five minutes, crushing the leaves as you stir. Strain and seal.

Cauliflower Pickles: Wash and drain a cauliflower and cut into flowerettes. Cook until just barely tender. Don't overcook. Put in sterile jars and cover with a sauce made of three cups of vinegar, two cups white sugar, one-third cup dry mustard, ¼ cup flour, 1½ tbsp turmeric powder which has been cooked together for about five minutes. Seal.

Christmas Pepper Relish: Using red and green peppers in equal amounts, discard seeds and put through food chopper using finest blade. Drain. Measure out two cups of pepper which is very dry. Combine 6½ cups sugar and 1¼ cups cider vinegar; add peppers and stirring constantly, boil hard two minutes. Stir in one bottle of Certo after removing from stove. Stir and skim five minutes and pour into sterile jelly glasses. Seal with paraffin.

Three Sweet Things

Ginger Tangerine Marmalade: 15 tangerines, one orange, three lemons, 1½ cups chopped preserved ginger, sugar. Wash the fruit and slice very thin. Discard seeds. Measure, and to each quart of fruit add 1½ quarts water. Let stand overnight. Cook slowly in the same water for about two hours or until rind is very tender. Add the ginger. Measure. Add two-thirds as much sugar as you have combined fruit. Cook rapidly to 220 degrees or until jelly stage, about 20 to 40 minutes. Seal in sterile glasses. Yields five pints.

Holiday Marmalade: one pound dried apricots; large can crushed pineapple, four cups sugar, grated rind and juice of one lemon; grated rind and juice of one orange. Wash apricots in warm water. Put them through the food chopper and let stand two hours in hot water to cover. Cook over low heat until tender, stirring frequently. Add the other ingredients. Cook until thick, stirring to prevent burning. Yields two and one half pints.

Sweet cider apple butter: Core and chop apples and put them in a large heavy pan with a mixture of sweet cider and apple cider to almost cover. Cook over very low heat until well cooked. Stir constantly. When they are cooked, sieve and add ½ cup brown sugar for each 1½ cups pulp. Add ground cinnamon, cloves and allspice to taste and cook over very low, preferable on asbestos pad, until thickened. Pour into hot sterile jars.

Candies

Divinity: 2½ cups sugar; ½ cup water; ½ cup corn syrup; a dash of cream of tartar; two egg whites, stiffly beaten. Combine sugar, water and syrup and boil 25 minutes. Add cream of tartar to the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour syrup over, slowly stirring well all the time. Drop by spoonfuls onto a platter.

Last Minute Fruit Cake

3 cups (lb.) shelled whole Brazil nuts or almonds
14 oz. package (about 4 cups) graham cracker crumbs
1½ cups seedless raisins
1 cup dried dates
1 lb. package cut mixed glace fruit
1 cup drained maraschino
1 package (6 cups) miniature marshmallows
1 tbsp. grated orange rind
¾ cup orange juice
¼ tsp. each of ground cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves
¾ tsp. each of ground allspice and ginger
1 tsp. vanilla
½ tsp. almond flavoring

Line a loaf pan (about 9x 5 x 2½ inches) with two strips waxed paper (one crosswise, one lengthwise) extending paper 3-inches above pan. In a large bowl, combine whole nuts, crumbs and fruit (quarter the cherries). In top of double boiler, melt marshmallows with rind, juice, spices and flavorings. Add to fruit-nut-mixture. Fill prepared pan, pressing down with a spoon. Fold waxed paper over cake and press down firmly. Chill in refrigerator for least eight hours before using. To store in refrigerator for any length of time, wrap securely. If desired, when serving cake, brush surface with corn syrup and garnish with fruit and nuts.

Cherry Cookies: one cup shortening, two cups sugar, three eggs, well beaten, four cups flour, one tsp. baking soda, one tsp. ground cloves, one tsp. nutmeg, very ripe sour cream, ½ cup chopped walnuts; one cup candied cherries.

Cream shortening, add sugar gradually and beat until fluffy. Then add eggs, beat well. Sift flour, soda and spices together. Add to the sugar mixture alternately with the sour cream. Fold in the walnuts and cherries. Put dough in about ¼ inch thickness. Cut into appropriate shapes. Bake at 375 degrees on a greased cookie sheet for about 15 minutes.

Pecan Balls: one cup butter, ½ cup sugar, two eggs, separated, dash salt; 1¾ cups flour; one tsp vanilla, chopped pecans, chopped candied cherries. Cream butter and sugar together. Add egg yolks and beat until well blended. Sift the salt and flour together and stir into the first mixture. Add the vanilla. Shape into balls and roll in egg whites which have been lightly beaten with a fork. Roll the balls in this, then in chopped pecans. Place on greased cookie sheet and press cherry on top. Bake 30 minutes at 350.

Yohn — Beare

Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Yohn

Christ Church was the scene of the October 25 wedding of Linda Lee Beare and Timothy Paul Yohn.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard G. Beare; the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman C. Yohn.

Canon R. B. D. Wright, assisted by Father Ken Sitt officiated at the afternoon ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father and mother, the bride wore a Spanish style gown of miniature Mantilla lace sprinkled with sequins. A full length chapel train and a Mantilla style fingertip veil were features of the gown. She carried a cascade of red roses and white roses with baby's breath.

Lynne Beare wore a peach coat dress jersey knit halter dress with matching hooded jacket. She carried a nosegay of daisies and baby's breath. Vicky Gaffney, Debra Mac-Pherson, Kathy Kritsch and Patsy Yohn, the groom's sister, were attendants in similar ensembles.

Ron Smith was groomsman and he was assited by Tom Hiddleston, Steve Beare, the bride's brother, Greg White and Greg Yohn.

After a dinner and dance at the Four Seasons Motel, the couple left on a wedding trip to points west.

They reside in Belleville.

Growth Reduced

MANILA (AP) — Philippine family planning specialists say a multi-million-doll-r birth control program has reduced the annual population growth rate from 3.01 per cent to 2.69 per cent in the last five years.

The world's first "full size" compact sewing machine.

Because of its size, perhaps you prefer "lack" of size, one might think of it as being short on features. Not a bit. Our compact is packed with features including a free arm for awkward sewing like cuffs, sleeves and pockets. With a flick of the dial you choose all of the beautifully practical stitches you'll ever need. Sewing a buttonhole is as simple as 1, 2, 3, 4...

Husqvarna's compact offers you more sewing area than most bulky, standard machines, a non-jamming shuttle, plus Husqvarna's exclusive non-oiling feature.

And the whole package comes in a neat, attractive carrying case.

Teen-aged Alcoholic Knows He's in Trouble

Dear Ann Landers: Even though the odds are a million to one against my letter getting in the paper, I'm going to write it anyway.

I'm a senior in high school, age 17, and male. I gulped down ten big shots of gin this morning before I left for school. Suddenly I'm not I'm an alcoholic.

I started to drink when I was 15. I've been drinking heavily for about six months. My grades in school aren't as good as they were, but they aren't bad. I've never flunked anything. I have fallen asleep in class but no one suspects I'm a boozer. I never drink more than anyone else when I'm invited. I do my serious drinking alone.

I know my problem. It's my father. He picks on Mom all the time, drinks a lot every night and has a terrible temper. He was the only male in a family with six girls and tries to run everyone's life. I guess I hate him.

I have no one to turn to for help but Ann. I need it. Please tell me what to do.—Too Young To Be A Drunk

Dear Friend: Have you thought of talking to your high school counselor? Isn't there someone on staff you've already tried it. Like everything else, some counselors are more helpful than others. I hope your school has good ones.

Look in the phone book for Alcoholics Anonymous. Find out when your neighborhood group meets. It's free and nobody asks questions. It has a higher rate of success in rehabilitating alcoholics than psychiatry, religion, hypnotism, etc. Please call it a try.

Dear Ann Landers: May I be you today? Here's my letter:

Dear Boy Wonder: I killed your dog today. He dashed onto the highway from behind my shrubbery, not ten feet in front of my wheels. Being only a dog, he couldn't know that an automobile cannot stop from fifty miles an hour in ten feet. He'll be cleaned my wheels, the oncoming car would have hit him. From the tone you let him out your door unsupervised, this was his inevitable fate.

All day I have felt sick inside. I love dogs—have had at least one ever since I was very young. But within the sick feeling, there is cold anger—anger at you, dear Pet Owner, for allowing your dog to run free, especially since you live beside a very busy and dangerous highway.

You will grieve at the loss of your dog, but if you ever acquire on a dog, please keep him behind a fence or on a leash. Spare yourself and me the grief of his death. I live in St. Louis but I could be—Any Driver, Anywhere

Dear Driver: That same tale details that usually completes a year. Thank you for telling us how it feels from behind the wheel.

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this for the lady who lives in Chicago and hates to shave her husband. She wants him to shave his entire body because it turns her on. It turns me off. I love to arrange a transplant between my husband and him.

Elmer is masculine and handsome and has a hair on his chest. I'd give anything if he would shave it off. He looks less like a ballet dancer. Sign me—Elmer

Dear Gypped: Nobody's perfect. Be satisfied with Elmer's six hairs and kwickerbeekin'.

Dear Ann Landers: I just had to print this letter and do the readers of Ann Landers a favor.

Dear Ex-Dog-Owner: Today, I found the dog you dumped. She was standing in the middle of a busy intersection, staring at oncoming traffic. Her well-bred, loved" master would return for her.

You probably thought someone like me would adopt the poor thing. Well, I did pick her up, but now she is at the animal shelter because my family already has three dogs.

Why didn't you take her to the shelter in the first place? Don't you know that the shelter is full of dogs dumped never find a home? Instead they face starvation, mistreatment, or death under the wheels of a car or truck.

At the shelter your dog will be fed and cared for and an effort made to find a new, responsible owner. At worst, she will be painlessly put to sleep instead of suffering a tragic death on her own.—Tired Of Injustice To Animals

Dear Tired: Thank you for saying again what has been said before in this space. Some people need to see something four or five times before it sinks in.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm willing to find out if there is anyway a person can get rid of dimples.

I'm a girl, 14, and sick and tired of people commenting on "cute" my dimples are. Is it possible that a plastic surgeon might fill in the holes in my cheeks? Would it cost much? How does one go about he involved?

If you say it can be done I'll start to save my money now.—Hate The Holes In My Face

Dear H.T.H.: Your holes in your face are fine. It's the holes in your head you should be concerned about.

I've had dimples all my life and can tell you from experience they cause no end of problems. Your real trouble is that you don't know how to accept a compliment. Go to work on THAT hang-up, honey, and leave your face alone.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I had a double-ring ceremony when we were married in the Lutheran Church, 18 years ago. I noticed recently that Claude wasn't wearing his wedding ring, I asked why. He told me that last month a man he worked with lost his hand when his ring got caught in the machinery. I asked him why he hadn't told me about the accident when it happened. He said he didn't want to upset me.

A few days ago when I saw Claude's ring in the bureau drawer I felt very sad. That evening I asked him if he'd wear his ring on a chain around his neck to remind him of our wedding day. He said, "That's a crazy idea. Forget it."

Now I'm beginning to wonder if perhaps Claude has met someone at work who doesn't know he has a wife and four children. He's home every night and never goes anywhere without me, yet I'm—A Little Worried

Dear Worried: A father of four children doesn't need to have his wedding ring around his neck as a reminder that he is married. Your grocery bills are reminder enough.

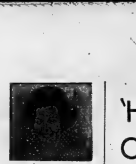
A man who is at home every night and goes anywhere without his wife is not likely to be fooling around with any of his back, honey, and don't give him a hard time.

Dear Ann Landers: I am at the end of my rope. I hope you can tell me what to do. I'm going crazy.

For two years I've been hooked on the nutty bread. She has begged me for the recipe but I can't trust her for half an hour behind my back. She cheats on me left and right. When I call her she cries and begs me to take her back—says it's a code drinks too many and that she didn't know what she was doing.

Then after she pulled that, I said, "We're through. Get out of my life and stay out." Then I came home that night she was sitting on the floor in the hall

'Hopelessly Uneconomic' One-room School Survives



MOOSE ISLAND, Ont. (CP) — At 9 a.m. each school day, teacher Joe Layes opens a door near the fireplace in his living room and walks into the one room that is Sugar Bay School.

The school is about 125 miles north of Toronto on Moose Island, one of the 30 000 Islands of Georgian Bay. It is one of 31 one-room schools in Ontario.

Ten years ago there were 1,454 such schools in the province. Last year there were 25.

But Sugar Bay School is here to stay although it is uneconomic to maintain. The nearest high school is about 19 miles away in Parry Sound.

Island children who go to high school board in town with relatives or at boarding houses during the school year. If it weren't for Sugar Bay School and others like it, young children would have to be separated from their families during their early school years.

The 12 children in Grades 1 to 8 at Sugar Bay School range in age from 6 to 13.

When the water is free of ice, Hector (Uncle Ben) Gregoire takes the children to school in his boat and picks them up, at the end of the day. He has been doing such trips for 31 years.

In winter, the children go to school by snowmobile and in between frosts and thaws they walk.

The school is a fact of everyday life for the children. But for teacher Joe Layes, 52, and his wife, Mary, 39, it is still an adventure.

Last January, the Layes were stranded at the school for nine days without heat. They cooked in the fireplace and sat around in snowmobile suits.

It is seven miles by boat and 17 miles more by car to the nearest grocery store, where food prices are high. The Layes also have had to buy a boat and snowmobile to get around.

Mr. Layes receives $1,000 a year as isolation pay in addition to his annual $10,000 salary. But he says it is as expensive to live on an island as it is in the city.

Mr. Layes, who taught five years at Rosedale public school in Toronto, met his wife, a teacher at Sugar Bay, along with great fishing and hunting, sounded great, Mr. Layes said. The Layes moved to Moon Island in the summer of 1974.

Mr. Layes said he was nervous the first day of school.

"I didn't know how I was going to handle all these grades at once."

But he said he knew he was dealing with a different kind of library, he wouldn't find it in classroom and they said: "Hi, how are you?"

Mr. Layes said his pupils are more open and friendly than city kids and they get along better with each other in school because there are very few of them and they have to get along.

Teacher and pupils are disadvantaged in that there is no library, no resource centre, no laboratory or gym.

The have to do away with one-room schools started in 1964 when township school boards started consolidating resources. The program was stepped up in 1968 when county school boards were created.

But the decision to abandon one-room schools was a result of money, Mr. Crossley said.

"They are hopelessly uneconomic," he said. "We couldn't get the resources to the kids in any economic way."

Fairy Tales Help Kids Pretend

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Some Philadelphia teachers are turning to those famous old tales about beautiful princesses, good fairies and wicked witches to help their class don't lose the ability to pretend.

Sister Francis Helen, a Grade 1 teacher at St. Martin of Tours elementary school, said: "I've only met one child in four years who has been fairy-tale ert ruined. That little girl wanted to be a princess. In fact, she still does.

She says there is some indication television is not presenting kids enough make-believe to preserve the ability in children.

Peter Charlier, principal of Sabold elementary school in suburban Springfield, says there is "very definitely a television orientation" for most children but "it's not all that bad."

"Their association with fairy tales is the Walt Disney variety. We've taken some real fairy tales from the big old book, they don't know them."

That's not true in Sheppard elementary school, where principal Joan Huges offers a read-aloud program "and my third-graders gobble up the fairy tales—things like The Three Bears."

"It is something that has to be developed and taught, an appreciation for things like Rumpelstiltskin and The Three Pigs."

Dr. Jacqueline Shachter, a Temple University professor specializing in children's literature, says there is a split over the value of fairy tales.

"You can't take dreams and hopes away from people," Miss Shachter says. "But some teachers who object to the bad name the word 'witchcraft' has because of the influence of Cinderella."

And she says people talk fairy tales too literally.

"I'm sick up to the gills sometimes that people are concerned with royalty, and I get sick and tired of kings and queens and princesses. I'd like to see a Cinderella-type story where the poor good girl mar-

Sugar Being Sold In Metric Bags

By JUDY CREIGHTON
The Canadian Press

Bags of sugar packaged in metric sizes were dropped into November's food basket and in one city shoppers were paying more for less, a cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press reveals.

Vancouver consumers pay, reading at a two-kilogram sack (4.4 pounds) paid $3.53 while shoppers in St. John's, Nfld., paid $1.39 for a five-pound bag.

Anita Singh, spokesman for the Canadian Sugar Institute which represents all sugar companies, said the metric-size bags selling in Vancouver are imported from the Prairies where companies already are bagging beet sugar in metric sizes.

"The imported sugar is being sold because of a strike at the B.C. Sugar Refinery which has crippled the sugar industry there for months," she said from Toronto.

"As a result, B.C. is having to import its sugar and this would explain the higher cost."

Ken Barnes, marketing manager of Redpath Sugars Ltd. in Toronto, said that when his company switches to metric packaging in 1976, "it is theoretically possible for the new bag to be more expensive."

But another official said there will be no change in the per-unit wholesale price, unless new side factors have to be considered.

Mr. Barnes would not explain such an increase but said his company would be making an announcement prior to the metric change over.

In three of the 12 cities surveyed, beef sirloin roast rose in price from the previous month. Decreases were noted in four cities and five remained the same.

The biggest jump was in Vancouver, where sirloin rose $1.06 a pound to $3.33 from $2.26.

Pork prices, declining since mid-September, continued their drop between six cents and 14 cents a pound in eight cities. Increases of five cents and 10 cents a pound in Vancouver to 79 cents and 20 cents in Ottawa to $1.69.

The 17 items in the market basket are priced in the same supermarkets on the last Tuesday of each month."

They include one pound of sirloin-tip roast beef, all-beef wieners, centre-cut loin of pork, top-grade chicken, ground chuck steak, frozen cod fillets, top-grade bottler, tomatoes, frozen peas, green peas, drip coffee and apples.

Also included are one dozen medium eggs, one quart of whole milk, a 24-ounce loaf of sliced white bread, 10 pounds of first-grade potatoes, five pounds of white granulated sugar and a 28-ounce can of halved pears.

Some findings, compared with last month and the total price in November, 1974:

Halifax: Pork dropped 51 cents to $1.08 and codfish 20 cents to $1.09. A five-cent increase put chicken at 93 cents. Wieners were down six cents to 99 cents. The November total of $14.37 is $1.13 higher than the previous month's total of $13.25. In November, 1974, the cost was $17.35.

St. John's, Nfld.: The cost of sirloin rose 31 cents to $2.69. Wieners were down 14 cents at 99 cents and sugar 40 cents to $1.39 but coffee was up 29 cents to $1.52. Codfish dropped to $1.39—a six-cent difference—potatoes rose seven cents to 67 cents. Apples dropped four cents to 29 cents. The November total was $15.09 compared with October's $13.56 and last year's $18.75.

Saint John, N.B.: Tomatoes, up 40 cents to 89 cents, took the highest jump in the survey. Sirloin dropped 33 cents to $2.69. Wieners climbed six cents to $1.05 and pork was down 16 cents to $1.68. Eggs were down three cents to 91 cents. Check was up nine cents at 96 cents. Coffee dropped 27 cents to $1.55 and sugar was down five cents to $1.38. Total was $13.47—$1.61 less than October's total of $15.34. In November, 1974, the total was $18.54.

Charlottetown: A decrease in the price of sirloin in the basket brought the total down to $13.80 from the previous month's $17.61. Sirloin roast and wieners dropped 20 cents to $1.98 and 99 cents respectively. Pork dropped 29 cents to $1.99, bacon five cents to $1.17. Bread dropped off nine cents to 39 cents and 11-cent drop on pears put them at 77 cents. Coffee went down 33 cents, to $1.62. In November, 1974, was

Soft Drinks and Candy Symbols of Affluence

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — A nutritionist says some lower-income New Brunswickers consider soft drinks and candy as symbols of affluence, but schools say they are responsible for growing signs of malnutrition in the province.

Janet Gagnon, nutritional consultant for Albert, Westmoreland and Kent counties said the malnutrition is not severe "but if some people keep eating like they are, they're definitely going to wind up in hospital with some kind of malnutrition disease.

Miss Gagnon said some women she has met for nutritional counselling had been drinking 40 ounces of pop daily and living mainly off candy bars and chocolate.

"I've found that the middle-income woman or the one who is financially quite well off is the one who is the biggest consumer, not the one in the lower economic bracket."

She said lower-income women often do not realize they are eating the wrong things.

"They don't know that pop is empty calories and that candy bars are absolutely no vitamins in it."

People who cannot stretch their budgets to cover a nutritious diet generally suffer from a lack of knowledge, she said.

They often waste food, unwisely by overcooking. They rely heavily on convenience foods, they do not store food properly and sometimes they buy things they should not be eating.

Police Offer Tips To Cut Holiday Crime

Good will toward men may look great on Christmas cards but to some it's meaningless.

Local merchants and shoppers are warned to be on their guard during the seasonal Christmas shuffle trade by shoplifters and thieves.

Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie says due to the increased number of shoppers store clerks often don't have the time to keep an eye on suspicious customers.

People shoplift, he says for three reasons: impulse, because they are claptomaniacs or to make money. The classification often depends upon the value of the item.

Merchants, says Chief Crosbie should be particularly careful not to leave expensive merchandise on shelves.

Constable Brian Turner, Community services, Belleville OPP, says the Christmas shoplifting problem is amplified because of the number of customers and by casual untrained staffs in stores.

Merchants, he says should take the time to explain to casual workers to be on their guard for shoplifters and be knowledgeable of cheque authorization procedures.

Clerks, says Constable Turner, should be on watch for persons with large shopping bags, or with bulky clothes or baby carriages.

Shoppers, says Chief Crosbie, should be particularly careful of parcels in shopping buggies or parked cars.

Women Christmas shopping with large sums of money should keep a careful eye on purses, he adds.

Pool Site a Mystery

PICTON — A community swimming pool will get the green light here if project organizers can obtain the property site they have in mind.

Picton reeve Larry Richardson, who will serve on the pool committee as an interested community resident, Monday informed town council that a site has been chosen but not yet purchased.

"If they can obtain it they will proceed full speed ahead," he added.

Location of the property has not yet been revealed, Reeve Richardson commented, however, that the proposed pool site has been narrowed down to one property.

Last spring pool committee members were told by the Prince Edward County board of education that an enclosed pool could be built at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute. Supporters of the pool idea rejected this proposal in favor of the new mystery site.

Court Date Set

A 36-year-old Toronto man will appear in provincial court here Dec. 9 for trial on charges of possession of stolen goods, personation and possession of marihuana for the purpose of trafficking.

Dennis Craig Moule of 68 West Lawrence Ave., was remanded when he appeared in provincial court here Monday.

Ontario Provincial Police at Roslin say the charges resulted from an investigation following a routine traffic check on Highway 2 at Bayside Oct. 16

Suspect Remanded

A 21-year-old Toronto man will appear in provincial court here Jan. 20 for trial on charges of possession of stolen goods and possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

Michael John Prendhomme of 68 West Lawrence Ave., was remanded when he appeared in provincial court here Monday.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville say the charges resulted from an investigation of a routine traffic check on Highway 2 at Bayside Oct. 16.

BE KIND TO ONTARIO APPLES

Thanks to an unusually good season, the quality of Ontario apples is exceptionally high this year. To enjoy them at their best, treat them gently - both in the store and in your home.

Marketeers especially, by far our most popular variety, are fragile and bruise easily. So you'll want to handle them carefully both in the produce department, and when storing them.

For short-term storage of small amounts, place them in the refrigerator in a perforated plastic bag. For larger quantities, a cool temperature, 0 to 4 C., or 32 to 40 F., is recommended. Allow good ventilation, sufficient humidity, and cover with perforated plastic.

U.S. TV Stations May Cut Advertising Rates

OTTAWA (CP) — American television stations probably will reduce their advertising rates by half or more to continue selling broadcasting time to Canadian advertisers when amendments to the Income Tax Act become effective, the Common broadcasting committee was told Tuesday.

Allan Slaight, president of Global Television, and Moses Znaimer, president of CITY-TV, both of Toronto, said they have evidence that Buffalo TV stations are quoting cut rates to Canadian advertisers.

They said KVOS, a station in Bellingham, Wash., which beams a powerful signal into the Vancouver area, already has said it will cut rates.

The tax amendment will make payments to U.S. television stations for Canadian advertising no longer deductible as a business expense in computing corporation profits taxes. The same bill, now before the broadcasting committee, would disallow similar expenses for advertising in Time and Reader's Digest magazines.

With a corporation tax rate of about 50 per cent, this will mean that advertising in U.S. publications or on U.S. TV stations will be about 50 per cent more costly for Canadian corporations.

Mr. Slaight and Mr. Znaimer said stations in Buffalo, whose signals are picked up in Toronto and Hamilton, and in Bellingham can easily reduce their rates 50 per cent and still make a profit.

Pierre Camu, president of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, and Michael Hind-Smith, president of the Canadian Cable Television Association, also appeared before the committee to press for early approval of the bill.

Ontario Wants $25.3 Million Cut From Bell's Proposed Rate Increases

OTTAWA (CP) — The Ontario government asked for a $25.3 million cut in proposed Bell Canada rate increases Tuesday while the Consumers Association of Canada called for complete cancellation of the additional $110.3 million that Bell wants to collect from subscribers next year.

The recommendations to the Canadian transport commission came near the close of more than five weeks of hearings into Bell's requests for higher rates effective Jan. 1.

Ontario lawyer D. W. Burnside said $85 million in added revenues next year still would permit the shareholder-owned telephone company to maintain its financial stability.

Consumers association lawyer Andrew Roman said the entire Bell rate package should be rejected until the company produces detailed information on its 1961-million 1976 construction program.

Bell wants a series of higher

Traffic Halts

VANCOUVER (CP) — The first runnerfull of three inches this season closed the Trans-Canada Highway just north of Second Narrows Bridge as traffic slid to a halt. The closure was a result of 30 cars either going into the ditch or unable to climb the hill.

including 6.5 per cent more for basic monthly residential and business telephones and a variety of increases in long distance tolls and service charges. Bell lawyer Ernest Saunders told the commission Friday the company needed the extra revenue "as a matter of vital necessity."

Mr. Burnside said Bell underestimated its revenues by $60.9 million and failed during the hearings to provide adequate information on its construction program, economic forecasts and accounting procedures.

He said a $25.3 million cut will still allow Bell to increase its rate of return on common equity to 11 per cent from the present level of 8.9 per cent.

Mr. Burnside challenged Bell president A. Jean Grandpre's warning that the company will be forced to return next year for a further rate increase even if the full amount in the present application is granted and takes effect Jan. 1. The precise application is Bell's seventh in as many years.

Mr. Burnside said Bell should not have an immediate need to ask for more money and that the next application should be for permission to increase the company's allowable rate of return.

Shared Caring, Sympathy A Great Unifier Says Bible

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

One who had seemed far off drew near and a lonely heart quickened at his approach. His distant image took on that of a longed-for friend.

"Behold, he comes, leaping upon the mountains, bounding over the hills," goes the biblical song of Songs. "My beloved is like a gazelle for a young stag."

They met. They spoke. Their hands linked. They belonged together. "For lo, the winter is past . . . The time for singing has come and the voice of the turtledove is heard in our land."

That is the story of the lyrical between a man and a woman, of the blending of parts into wholeness. It is the way of love itself.

In that basic sense, it also is the message of Christmas, the coming of Jesus among the people, of the realization of God's presence directly in their humanity, of the two reunited in a shared destiny.

"And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us," says John's gospel. "For God so loved the world . . ." The Great Lover embraced His best beloved.

Scripture so portrays the relationship of God and His people, their "husband" who "will be truth you to Me for ever," as Hosea 2 puts it. Jesus is described in Matthew 9:15 and elsewhere as the "bride-groom" to his followers, and the kingdom of heaven like a "marriage feast" in Matthew 22:2. The church, in Revelation 21:2 and elsewhere, is called "the Bride."

Scholars say the symbolism is not meant to imply gender in God, who is conceived as being without limitations of gender, but that it does dramatize the deep significance of the human drive for sexual completion of self through another.

It is a profound impulse, common throughout the world's creations.

In humanity, it takes us personalities far beyond the animal species, qualities of shared caring, sympathies, understanding and loyalty, of mutual giving and combined strengths as well as the special human capacities for imagination, delight and forbearing grace.

It is the sanctified unifier of the human components.

"Male and female He created them," goes the ancient account in Genesis 1. "And God blessed them, and God said to them, 'Be fruitful and multiply and fill the earth and subdue it.'"

Their distinction by sex, and union through it, and divine blessing.

Together, the couple "became one flesh," Genesis 2:24-25 adds. "And the man and his wife were both naked, and were not ashamed."

From the start, in the biblical perspective, sexual relationship was consultated as ennobled estate.

"Sex is of divine ordaining," notes Bible scholar Walter Russell Bowie.

"It is a gift of God," says evangelist Billy Graham.

But in the fallen, sin-torn sphere, it has been widely depreciated as a mere physical process to quench a natural appetite, without moral or spiritual significance. In consequence, many social analysts say sex has been cheapened.

Psychiatrist Rollo May says casual sex "becomes boring" and more sensuality "becomes erotic."

"When sex is only sensuality, you sooner or later turn against sex itself."

Then, a generation that outwardly glorifies sex is afflicted, indeed, not embraced it.

Analyzing Playboy magazine, a kind of modern cultural symbol of sophisticated sex, Harvard theologian Harvey Cox says its central motif is to stay cool and detached and avoid serious involvement.

"What playtime is over," he notes, "the playmate's function ceases, the playmate having been used, in effect, like some disposable paper napkin."

It seems a bleak, put-down lot for a beautiful endowment of humanity.

Defenders of religion and those with slanted notions of it have spread a shallow literary resentation that the sex act was humanity's "original sin," but this is contrary to authentic Judeo-Christianity and also to the biblical account.

It explicitly states that the basic human misstep was the grasp for dominating power, to "be like God," as Genesis 3:5 puts it, to be personally supreme, the egocentric thread that cuts everyone off from total empathy with others.

Through that self-exalting tendency, Judeo-Christianity says humanity began going astray from its underlying kinship, a lack of complete inter-relationship with God or anyone.

That separation—from God and others—is the sin. Each person stands alone, wanting complete rapport with someone, needing to be totally loved and totally understood, but at the same time wary of giving those very possibilities.

Then "they knew they were naked," Genesis 3:7 says, "and they sewed fig leaves together and made themselves aprons." They also hid, guilty in their obsession for power.

The convert defensiveness had nothing directly to do with sex. Although sex reflects the desolation that comes from the self-absorbed tendency to dominate and exploit, as well as the contrasting blessedness that comes through interflowing affection, gratitude and trusting fidelity.

Ever since Sigmund Freud, sexual attitudes have been seen as a measure of the mental health of society, riddled with suppressed fears, aggressions and perversions or reflecting balance, stability, "confidence and some semblance of harmony."

While psychologists, as well as theologians and other specialists, applaud the more open frankness with sex, freeing it from Victorian pretenses, they deplore the contemporary excesses that have tended to drain it of meaning.

Concurrent with the tendency has come a wave of child-abuse, other slumdom and social norms, increased violence, a mounting caseload of impotency and apathy and rising rates of divorce and suicide, along with intensified obsessions with nonessential sex and voyeurism.

Psychoanalyst Herbert Hendin, whose new book, The Age of Sensation, reports on extensive analysis of 400 students across the country, says they are grasping either for "detached sensation or to machine-like emotional numbness in a recession of fragmented sexual experiences without meaning or purpose."

Although casual camaraderie among young people has been thought to indicate greater sexual harmony, he says it usually has meant "cynicism, disillusionment and bitterness and increasing "aggression of young men against women."

Women's attitude is marked by suppressed emotions, detached sexuality and numbness in limited, controlled experiences.

Many psychologists say disillusion with romantic love and sex-role equality are causing increased impotence and other sexual pathology.

It "progresses to the point of interchangeability of persons and sexes, with the resultant loss of a sense of identity," says psychiatrist John Schimel.

"It is hard to feel 'male' or feel 'female' if there is really no difference."

Sexual relations are timed, taped, witnessed, photographed and subjected to glandular measurements, examined through interviews and charted on statistical graphs, all in the name of stepping up proficiency and lessening confusion. Both of which seem to snowball as the overhauling continues.

British Businesses Invest $6 Billion in U.S. Firms

LONDON (CP) — British businesses owned assets worth more than $6 billion in the United States through their direct investment in American companies at the end of 1974, Whig-kept Britain in her trade finish position of by far the largest foreign direct investor in the U.S. economy.

Figures published by the U.S. department of commerce show that Britain's investment exceeded that of Canada, the next biggest direct investor, by more than $1 billion. After Canada, the Netherlands' direct investment covered stands of $5 billion, Switzerland $3.3 billion and West Germany $1 billion.'

U.S. stood at $1.3 billion in 1960 and $4.1 billion in 1970.

At the same time, figures issued by the U.S. treasury show that Britain's portfolio investment in U.S. securities was worth $6.1 billion in 1974, compared with $2.68 billion in 1961, when the last full survey was made. In 1974, Britain was fourth after Germany (which had $14 million dollars) and Canada and Switzerland (both in the $11 million range).

A correspondent for London Press Service writes:

Direct investment in another business is defined as the purchase of sufficient shares to control it, whether or not 100 per-cent ownership is obtained.

Portfolio investment represents the widespread holding of shares and other securities as an income-yielding financial asset. Ordinary business may hold such assets, but predominantly they are held by financial institutions, including insurance companies, investment and unit trusts, and individuals. Once purchased, both types of asset make a valuable contribution to Britain's balance of payments.

Britain's leading position as an overseas direct investor in the key American economy is particularly encouraging as a time when that economy is currently giving strong indications of being the first to expand out of the world recession.

Britain's lending position as an overseas direct investor in 1969 was $4.7 billion, and by 1974 it had risen to $9.1 billion, according to figures published by the U.S. treasury department.

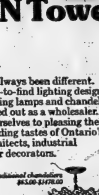
Now you can shop for your lights where the people who lit the CN Tower shopped for theirs.

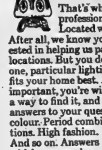
Ruddy Electric has always been different. We specialize in hard-to-find lighting designs. Like our award-winning lamps and chandeliers. Why? Well, we started out as a wholesaler. And we dedicated ourselves to pleasing the very, very, demanding tastes of Ontario's leading builders, architects, industrial designers and interior decorators.



Modern and traditional chandeliers $63.50-$1478.00

20 YEARS EXPERIENCE WITH THE PROS.

Actually we've had over 22 years experience answering the most demanding questions about lighting requirements—about taste. Decor. Function. Colour combination. And wiring. Now, these artists of taste are just like you. Very grateful when their exacting demands are met. But often, they're very secretive about their sources. So we decided to let you in on their secret.



Colonial Scrog and Table Lamps $77.25-$202.25

4 PROFESSIONAL LIGHTING SHOPS.

That's why we now have 4 professional lighting shops. Located where rents are low. After all, we know you're not interested in helping us pay for fancy locations. But you do want to find the one, particular lighting design that fits your home best. And just as important, you're willing to go quite a way to find it, and to get expert answers to your questions about colour. Period combinations. High fashion. And so on. Answers which our people have. Probably better ones than anybody else.

The new Century Place at Front & Bridge St.

But don't take our word for it. Talk to the people of the new Century Place at Front & Bridge St. We supplied the Quinte Mall with hard-to-find lighting designes. We did the same for the new Miracle Food Mart store.

Ask custom home builder Reg Breault, or Paul Bernard of Bernard Interiors about us. Or the people who bought 50 of the finest custom homes in this area during the last 12 months. (Of course, you may have some difficulty at first getting them to reveal our name.) As we said before, some artists are very secretive about their sources.) Ruddy Electric in Toronto even supplied some lighting for the CN Tower and the revolutionary new solar energy heated Ontario Hydro Building.

Bruce Lamps $43.50-$246.00

TASTE MAKERS OF BELLEVILLE UNITE.

We suggest you join the search. First, visit the most convenient lighting store in your neighborhood. Or your nearest department store. Then gather up all your courage. And try to find one of our shops. (We've included some easy clues below). And, once you see our unusual selection of award-winning traditional or modern designs—you'll agree it was worth the effort.

Labor Unconcerned Its Demands Will Break Canada Says Diefenbaker

CLIFF KENTON
Staff Reporter

It doesn't seem to bother labor that as a result of their demands Canada will go broke, a spokesman for National Citizen's Coalition said in Belleville Tuesday.

"We've got a situation where labor demands more money than counterparts in United States and production is lower," said Colin Brown, president of the approximate 21,000 member government watchdog group.

Mr. Brown told members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club that perhaps because Canadians have been taught that we have this great country," we've had the battle we used to have."

"Having all these wonderful assets in the ground is no guarantee," said the London insurance agent.

"Maybe we've spoiled. Individuals are that Canadians have gone a little soft. The word ethic tends to be laughed at."

Citizen's Coalition was officially incorporated about two years ago as a federal non-profit organization. It began as a result of advertising opposing the 1971 White Paper on Taxation. About 680,000 Canadians wrote to members of parliament backing coalition's criticism.

Mr. Brown said the coalition was formed because, "we feel there were a lot of cases where the Canadian public did not feel they had a party to vote for."

Member felt, he said, that Canada was becoming a welfare state with "no work ethic."

In assessing the blame for government mismanagement he said, "I believe the Conservatives are more at fault than the Liberals because of their poor opposition."

The Coalition will begin an advertising campaign in the next few days opposing federal takeover of the potash industry. "We think this is an outrage and that it will be the thin edge of the wedge," he said.

For the past ten years, private money has been invested in the high risk potash industry with little profit.

Now that the industry is beginning to make money, said Mr. Brown, the government criticizes its slow development. The Liberals can't develop due to lack of capital and even a legal lack taxation.

Government wants to buy out the industry with unsuitable compensation said Mr. Brown, "What kind of legalized robbery is that?"

Government did it in Britain. Taxes got so bad industry couldn't do a good job.

Speaking of provincially proposed rent control schemes he said he's convinced they are unworkable and destructive.

The shortage of housing, said the coalition official, is due to of the lack of profit initiative given builders.

Council Postal Survey Has Labor Up in Arms

BY COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The Quinte District Labor Council meeting this next municipal election will work to defeat eight sitting members of council who "spoke out against labor" in response to a poll concerning the postal strike taken by the Intelligencer Saturday.

With the exceptions of Aldermen Jean Smith and Frank Seemungal who could not be contacted council was unanimous in the wish that the strike would soon come to an end and that the Canadian Union of Postal Workers would return to their jobs by accepting the government's offer.

Ald. Seemungal, a Prince Edward Collegiate teacher, reached today said "strike is no means of settling a dispute . . . strike does damage to both sides. I think there was probably mis handling of the postal situation on both sides."

Ald. Jean Smith, in Toronto for a meeting with the ministry of community and social services, said today "I feel Mr. Mackasey handled the situation very well and I'm relieved that it (strike) is over."

However, she said the dispute is out of council's jurisdiction "to comment on the contract."

"Both sides handled themselves properly," she said.

When told of the labor council's stand against councillors who spoke out against the union, he said he does not like the statistics "very seriously.

"In the long run people will sort out what is right," he said. "People should be allowed to speak their opinion."

Walter Yateman, president of the local of inside postal workers in Belleville and Brighton, said members of council took "cheap shots" at the union in the closing days of the strike.

"We elected council to represent all the people but in the article they came out in full force against labor," he said.

"I'd like to see it on record that labor in this area support only those running candidates that receive the support of this labor council," said Mr. Yateman.

Outgoing council vice-president Ian Reilly made a formal motion that council take this stand — a motion that was endorsed unanimously by the membership.

Although Belleville mayor Ben Corke termed the strike "regrettable" in the poll published Saturday and was guest speaker at the labor council meeting Tuesday, no mention was made of aldermanic opinion during a question and answer period.

In making the final motion, Mr. Reilly said "we have to go on record to make sure they aren't returned to office and also to arrange reminders of this decision to be released during the next election."

Mr. Yateman said he intends going to the next meeting of council during some "comment" about the union poll "if I am allowed to."

"We remember our enemies for a long time," he said.

Canadians Spoiled

Colin Brown, president of National Citizens' Coalition, told Belleville Kiwanis Club Tuesday Canadians are spoiled, gone soft and lost the "hustler" they used to have. He said the coalition, a government watchdog group, has about 21,000 members.

Transit Talks In Early Stage

By AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

Wages and fringe benefits have not been touched on and only some non-monetary items have been settled in on-going contract talks between the Belleville Transit Commission and its 23 employees.

News of the state of negotiations came Tuesday from BTC chairman Marylea Burtt and Hugh Kerr, president of Local 126 of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers.

Both sides sat down to bar-

United Way At $111,500

The United Way drive for funds has reached 78.1 per cent of its $146,000 objective and now is $111,500.

The campaign to raise funds for 15 United Community Services (UCS) agencies began in October.

Gord Mullis, executive director of Belleville's UCS, said no date has been set to terminate the 1975 campaign. He added that follow-up research and study will be going on until the $146,000 objective.

Last year the drive ended Dec. 20 with 87 per cent of the $146,000 objective.

Mr. Mullis said canvassing is continuing in industries.

He added the completed residential drive, co-ordinated by Jean Hicks and Mrs. Lyder, reached 109.8 per cent of the section's goal and raised more than $17,000.

Mr. Mullis said alterations to budgets would be made for the 15 agencies if the objective wasn't reached.

galning Tuesday and depending on who spoke, the talks either went "very well", according to Mrs. Burtt, or "not too much progress was made", according to Mr. Kerr.

The two parties had earlier agreed to a new black-out on talks a positive they both maintained.

Tuesday's 2½-hour meeting was the second between the two groups. A third is planned Dec. 18.

Mrs. Burtt said she was pleased with the progress made, saying that we're a long further into negotiations and coming to an agreement than we have been at this time of year previously."

Talks began earlier this year than they had in the four years she has negotiated contracts, she said.

Both sides now concede they will be required to negotiate — the current one-year contract expires Dec. 31 — and next year, something both parties wanted to avoid.

At this stage, said Mrs. Burtt, "no real progress has been made by the BTC on a ceiling under which the commission would want to negotiate wages.

Right now, she said, "we have no idea how far apart would take or exist when asking add-what they want."

She said she expects that the union will settle on wages by December before that they demanded in contract proposals — the union submitted its mid-October.

Earlier this year, the two sides settled a two-week strike when union members voted to accept a 21.2 per cent wage increase. The one-year contract pays drivers $3.40 an hour and mechanics about 20 cents more an hour.

Higgitt Urges Motorists To 'Slow Down and Live'

The president of Canada Safety Council (CSC) urges Canadian drivers to take defensive driving courses, obey rules, wear safety belts, slow down "and be living proof that safe driving pays."

W.L. Higgitt says in all Canada Safety Week, sponsored annually by CSC from Dec. 1-7, is a way of providing you with a special opportunity to re-examine your driving and pedestrian habits.

"It is our way of urging you to think of safe driving as one of the direct responsibilities of good citizenship," he enumerates.

"It is our way of encouraging everyone to participate in our campaign to reduce the dreadful suffering and loss of life that flow from our ever increasing number of traffic accidents.

Mr. Higgitt notes that last year, the week was cancelled with saving 64 lives — about ¼ of the average weekly toll — but a better rate can and must be accomplished.

He says the thousands of Canadians who were involved in serious traffic accident last year need not be reminded of "those awful few seconds" for each mishap because they "now understand the need for safe driving practices.

"But there are thousands of Canadians who so far have been spared this terrifying experience," Mr. Higgitt remarks. "To them, the need for driving and pedestrian safety may not seem so real or so urgent."

They must be convinced of their responsibility before they, too, suffer such an experience," he says.

Loyalist Toy Drive Gets Good Reception

The Students' Association of Loyalist College (SALC) is hard-pressed today to maintain its schedule of pickups of donations on the final day of its annual toy and food drive, says Dave Pickering, SALC spokesman.

Mr. Pickering said by 10 a.m. today the SALC office had received a call from Belleville area residents wishing to donate repairable toys and non-perishable foodstuffs for distribution to needy families at Christmas.

In addition, 15 calls had been received from parents of young children with donations for Santa Claus visits — a new aspect of the drive this year which has become a popular attraction, Mr. Pickering added.

He pointed out calls will not be accepted past 6 p.m. today but if there are backlogs of pickups or St. Nicholas visits the regular SALC volunteers will stay on the road. Until that time, prospective donors can call 962-9197.

Mr. Pickering said as of press time today the toy poundage stood at 1,300. "I think we're doing a little better than last year," he commented.

He said among the usual games, dolls and mechanical toys, SALC has received several bicycles, tricycle and air hockey game "in very good shape."

Ambulance Operators To Discuss New Budget

Quinte district ambulance operators will meet again next Tuesday to discuss latest developments in provincial budgeting for their services.

The operators met Tuesday in Belleville with Gerry Bahr, of the Ontario health ministry's ambulance services' branch, to discuss cost-cutting measures.

The result is next week's meeting between the operators and Sid Meeks, provincial councillor and operator of LaSalle Ambulance.

There will be no details made public until after that session, said Ald. Meeks.

"The operators for the area agreed there will be no statement until after next Tuesday — until we have a chance to sit down and see if we can make sure what the government is proposing to us," he said.

Mayor Outlines Reasons For Total Bylaw Coverage

Belleville Mayor Ben Corke has proposed building standards bylaw is the only way to legally defeated as a "discriminatory" law if it only pertained to rental accommodation.

His statement came Tuesday as an answer to a question following a speech to Quinte District Labor Council.

Much of the criticism of the proposed bylaw stems from individuals claiming homeowners have rights to live in the manner they choose, the bylaw should also be designed to protect those people who do not own their own homes and need assistance to force landlords into completing maintenance on rental dwellings, Corke says.

"If this bylaw were to be passed to just affect rental accommodation it could be thrown out and called discriminatory," said Mayor Corke.

He said he would personally like to see the bylaw passed in stages which would cover rental, commercial and private-home categories individually. He told labor council members "further legal advice will be sought.

"I'm not going to have the bylaw shoved under the carpet," said the mayor. "Believe we need it."

The final result after many meetings will be satisfying to the vast majority of the residents," he said.

Mayor Corke said "council has been called less than bright for the draft bylaw and has been criticized for use of the words 'shall' and 'reasonable' in the document."

"You just can't write a bylaw with the words could, maybe, or perhaps," he said.

Speaking on fines that could be levied against home owners who do not comply with bylaw regulations, Mayor Corke said it has been the experience in Kingston, where the maximum fine is $1,000, that fines are usually $10, with the highest being $100.

"The proposed Belleville fine of $500 a day is a little ridiculous and scary, you know it would never be charged that way," he told council members.

"My genuine concern is whether landlords will prefer to tear down rental dwelling buildings, rather than making the necessary renovations," he said.

Commenting on the already short supply of housing in the city and to a question from a labor delegate, Mayor Corke said "perhaps council has done too little in the area of government assistance to create housing."

However, he said, "I don't see what other funding is available apart from the funding we have already received for senior citizen and geared-to-income housing."

Church Target

Belleville police are investigating a break-in to Bridgecrest Church at 40 North Front St. here which occurred sometime late Monday or early Tuesday.

Const. Douglas Crosbie said today unknown intruders smashed a metal cash box which was empty and were unsuccessful in attempts to force open the door to the pastor's office.

Woman Charged

REDNERSVILLE — A Carrying Place area woman has been charged with failure to stop following a two-car collision Tuesday on Redners Mill Rd. near the junction of County Rd. 25.

Charged is Linda Hatfield, 27, of RR 2 Carrying Place who was northbound on County Rd. 25 when her car collided with a westbound vehicle on County Rd. 3 driven by Walter Knorreck, 67, of Camp Pine St., Belleville.

Damage to the Hatfield car was estimated at $200 and to the Knorreck vehicle at $1,000.

Mrs. Hatfield was taken to Belleville General Hospital with a concussion.

One Serious Mishap In Tuesday's Storm

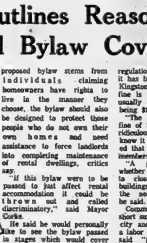
A 20-year-old Belleville man was treated and released earlier today from Belleville General Hospital after he suffered a concussion in a one-car accident near 147 West Moira St. here.

Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said today Robert Gordon Coyle of 147 St. had control of his westbound car when it swerved to the south side of the street and struck a utility pole.

Chief Crosbie said a passenger, Jim MacDonald, 18, of 31 North Park St., suffered cuts and bruises but did not require hospital treatment. He was driven home in a police cruiser.

Constable Robert Cooper estimated $700 damage to the car in the 1.30 a.m. mishap.

Chief Crosbie said the accident was the only serious one to occur during the recent snowfall. He said police investigated 15 minor accidents prior to midnight Tuesday night.



Canadians Spoiled

Colin Brown, president of National Citizens' Coalition, told Belleville Kiwanis Club Tuesday Canadians are spoiled, gone soft and lost the "hustler" they used to have. He said the coalition, a government watchdog group, has about 21,000 members.

Mayor Meets Labor

Mayor Ben Corke Tuesday explained the proposed building standards bylaw to a meeting of the Quinte District Labor Council. During a question and answer period, Mayor Corke said he will seek further legal advice whether the bylaw could be passed to cover only rental accommodation.

Boat Builder Busy

George James of 62 Tracey Street loves the sea, and though he's never been on it, he devotes his leisure time to recreating many of the world's great sailing ships. At least two of his works . . . such as the Cutty Sark shown here . . . will be displayed prominently in Kingston during Olympics sailing events next summer.

Landlubber Builds Ships of His Dreams

Nova Scotia born George James spent his early years next door to the sea — spending, free afternoons on busy Halifax wharfs and reading around the occasional British sailing ship that sailed into port.

But for all his self-confessed love of the sea, and the ships that sail it, George has never really taken his feet from dry land.

Now, in his spare time, he builds models of the ships he has come to have a chance to sail on. That pastime has endured to the stage where it now is part hobby and part business.

Working as a maintenance man at a Belleville car dealership, he is also picking up a reputation as a builder of boats worthy of exhibiting.

A scale model of the HMS Victory, flagship of Lord Nelson, will be constructed for exhibit in Kingston's marine museum — a showing which will coincide with Olympic sailing events next summer.

Another replica is being sought for display by Kingston's Victoria and Grey Trust Co. Ltd.

Not content with pre-manufactured kits, Mr. James says will begin construction of St. Lawrence II. He'll work directly from original plans.

So far in his 10-year ling at marine models, Mr. James has constructed 27 large-scale craft, the majority measuring four feet or longer.

"I spend almost every waking hour building the models," he said. The Cutty Sark, on which he now is completing the finishing touches, will take him more than 600 hours of work.

Always looking for bigger and better models, Mr. James intends taking the plans from the HMS Victory and doubling the scale. It will then make the model more than eight feet in length.

He owns a lathe on order that will permit me to handturn all the parts I need for the model, including cannons which will actually fire," he said. "It will take about four years to complete."

Mr. James says his major task one day will be to build a showroom near the city where all his models may be shown permanently.

JOE DICRESCE

Will THS Realize Potential?

Some coaches are wishing they had a little more experience on their Bay of Quinte Division A Senior Basketball teams. Some coaches are hoping their rubber legs looking benches fill out as the year progresses. Some coaches are wishing they had a little more general balance and height.

Trenton's Joe DiCresce has all of these and he's wondering if it will do more harm than good. "It's nice to have a well-balanced club sometimes," said DiCresce, "but sometimes it's not so nice to try to manage it."

The 1975-76 senior Tigers are the same group that, as juniors, roared through Bay of Quinte and went on to capture the Central Ontario title two years ago. Man-for-man the team is back together and man-for-man their talents are as well-balanced and their individual skills are almost as well-balanced. Because of this the Trenton coach foresees the possibility of some dissent from within.

"We've never been a strong basketball school," said the coach, "but when this group of kids plays together they are really confident just as they were in junior."

"The problem is," he added, "that they are all so evenly talented they tend to get their noses in the air when someone plays and they don't."

Potentially, the Tigers shape up as a powerhouse in the six-team A Division. On the court though, it may be some time before they show it.

"We really get a late start here," said DiCresce. Most of the players at Trenton High School, athletically anyway, is with football.

"Some of the guys are just handing their helmets in one week and stepping on a basketball court the next," he added.

DiCresce clarified that at present the group is still hanging together as well as can be expected on short notice. He credits this to the fact that as a group they have instead victory.

Not keen on offences, the Tiger coach plans to stick with a tight man-on-man defence. Normally, Trenton ends up using a zone defence, but this year DiCresce is determined to get the team hustling and effectively working the man-on-man.

"We've never effectively run a zone," he said, "simply because they can't properly play a man-on-man."

Man-for-man DiCresce considers his players as good as those of any other team in the division as long as they hustle.

"They don't always want to hustle all game, though," he added.

Offensively, the coach plans to utilize centre very basic patterns, switching low posts to suit opposition defences. Generally he just wants his team to position themselves and work the ball around for the good shot.

So, 1975-76 shapes up as one of two things at Trenton High School. It will either be the year of the Tiger or the season of the lap cat. And all this lies in the allNades of the players.

Trojans' Team Effort Too Much for Tigers

Moira Secondary School Trojans evened their record at 3-1 in Bay of Quinte Basketball League A Division Senior action Tuesday night when they handed the home town Trenton High School Tigers a 58-51 loss.

In other A Division games Tuesday, Trenton Juniors beat to Moira 48-32, Quinte Juniors were down 49-40 to Belleville Collegiate and, in midget play, the Tigers walloped Moira 57-17, and the Collegians dumped the Saints 53-21.

"It was a good team effort," said Moira senior coach, Ken Smith. "the entire squad got into the game and everyone played well."

Moira jumped into a six point lead early in the first quarter and that point spread prevailed. Guard Rob Chase led the Trojans charge with 18 points, his best so far this season. Chase's colleague, guard Scott Sisson, popped in 16. Kent Manning added 12.

The Trojans got into foul troubles early in the third quarter and were forced to retort from their man-to-man defence to a zone. Even at that, the Tigers were unable to muster enough points to win. Paul Yates, Dave Lewis and Blaine Rittinger each scored 11 to top the Tigers' attack.

MOIRA 58, TRENTON 51

Moira's juniors took the same path as the seniors. They put together a solid team effort to roll up their first victory of the year. Top scorer was Bill Whyte with nine and Bruce McKay checked in with eight.

Kim McKellar replied for Trenton with 19 points and Brent McGowan added six.

TRENTON 36, MOIRA 17

Gary Calberty topped a strong all around Tiger scoring attack with 11 points and Salvo Bonarrige got 10. Frank Kolstar had four for the Trojans.

BCI 48, QUINTE 40

Chris Niheli popped 12 points to lead the Collegians to the win in their first start of the season. Bruce Bell and John Green each had 10.

Paul D'Anna and Rob Goodfellow got 10 apiece for the Saints.

BCI 53, QUINTE 25

The Collegian midgets, under the direction of former senior coach Brian MacKenzie, proved a powerhouse in their first start of the season. Mike Wright led the onslaught with 21 points and Dan Wilson threw in 16. Jim Belnap was next with six.

Tim Pontifex counted 13 in the Saints defeat.

ROB CHASE

Rollins Peewees Tripped

KINGSTON (Special) — Breaking loose for three unanswered goals in the third period, Kingston turned back Belleville Rollins Construction Peewee Majors 5-1 in Ontario Minor Hockey Association AAA play here, Tuesday.

Rollins opened the scoring in the game and held a 1-0 lead heading for the second period. Kingston rebounded for a pair to move in front in the second and wrapped it up in the third.

Mike Linseman sparked the winners with a pair of goals. Checking in with singles were Kendall Hansen, Stephen Peirson and Robbie Wade. Rollins' counter was supplied by Rich Manderville who finished off a three-way play with Steve Molaski and Davis Ashton.

Only five minor penalties were assessed with the visitors picking up three of the sentences.

In an exhibition bantam match, Belleville Licence Leisure World Selects had to settle for a 3-3 tie with the Kingston Minor Bantam B squad.

The Belleville team owned a 3-0 lead with less than three minutes to play but couldn't hang on. Doug Derrick put Kingston on the scoreboard and Rick Marrocco potted the equalizer.

Counting for Belleville were Shane Butcher and Andy Russell.

Bobcat Boosters Are Busy

Wednesday is the regular meeting night for Belleville Bobcat Boosters who are again lending their support to the Metro Junior B Hockey League team.

The club's most recent project is the sale of attractive Bobcat Booster crests. These crests will be on sale at all fall home games, beginning Friday night when the team plays host to Whitby Brains.

Every home game will also see members of the club running a 50-50 draw, proceeds of which will go towards a future players night scheduled for early next year.

The club meets every Wednesday at 7.30 p.m. at Memorial Arena. New members and their ideas are welcome.

Combines Win 4-1

PICTON (Special) — Belleville Combines put their depth to good use here in a Quinte Ladies' Hockey League match, Tuesday, recording a 4-1 win to gain a share of first place in the standings.

When starting goaltender Bonnie Hannah had to leave the game in the second period after stopping a slapshot, Combines got a solid relief chore from Karen Nokes who blanked the opposition for the remainder of the game.

And on the scoring front, four players shared the Belleville goals as the squad turned in a strong team effort.

Combines' goals went to Jo-anne Hannah, Norma McQuarrie, Sue Morton and Cindy Hannah. Wanda Clapp earned a pair of assists while Morton and Carol McFarlane each checked in with one help-er.

Brenda Armstrong's unassisted goal was the extent of the Picton production.

Combines and Stirling are deadlocked in first place with 12 points each.

Stirling is at Napanee tonight and plays host to the Combines, Saturday.

BDLSL Looking Ahead

With another solid executive elected for the 1976 season, the Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League (BDLSL) is looking ahead and already. there is the possibility of a new look in the offing.

Returning as president of the league is Bill Pyke. Joining him on the executive for another time around are Donna Lucas, secretary, and Bernice Lucas, treasurer.

Pam Smith is the new vice-president. She's a player with the Belleville Broadliners league entry.

The new look may be provided by a new entry to the league from Wagman. A club from the Limestone City has applied for membership. Provincial champion in its division last year, the Kingston club looms as a definite contender for BDLSL honors.

A successful operation in 1975 sends the league into the new year with optimism.

Lack of lighted playing facilities is the only drawback, say league officials.

At present, the BDLSL has Wednesday night at the Alemite Park but most of its games are played at Centennial Park.

"What we would like to see is lights at Centennial Park," says Mrs. Lucas.

Ready to start for the 1976 campaign are Mobil Chemical, Lakeside Oxygen, Ellis Construction, Purinaettes and Belleville Canadian Benefit Fund.

According to Mrs. Lucas, the league is aiming for "parity among the teams."

House League Hockey Roundup

Sidney Inn Finds the Range

Sidney Inn found its scoring eye in Belleville Minor Hockey Association bantam major house league play last week, thumping Avis Rent-A-Car 11-4. The winners' attack was led by Steve Carlton with three goals, John Henry and Robert Bowen with two each. Rounding out the output were Jim Wilkinson, Brian Lacmie, Bill McLinton and Steve Belch. David Dowin was sharp in defeat, saving four times. Assists went to Steven Moore and Kevin Jeffs.

Red Shark topped Goldie's Shell 5-3. Pulling a pair for the winners was Tim Sonke. Ben Burley, Brad Beghie and Tony Thibault had the others. Peter Ervine, Mike Callan and Jim Rumham replied for Goldie's.

Doug Thicke fired three goals to lead Belleville Broadloom past Juby Electric 5-2. John Dent and Dave Secord checked in with a goal each. Randy Dowdall and Scott Peterson scored for Juby.

Dougs Jones Jewellers downed Bells Cleaners 5-1. Bill Carson had two for the Jewellers while Mike Willmott, Gord White and Tim McWilliams each scored once. Scott MacKenzie took care of the Cleaners' goal.

In two more minor games, A and D Esso and Clayton's TV scored wins.

Douglas Schaefiel connected for four goals in the Esso win. Dale Caddick had the other counter. Greg Davis and Brian Court hit for Belch goals.

Tim Murphy's three goals led the way in Clayton's 9-3 defeat of Maher Shoes. Jeff Fiskle had two goals with singles for Jeff McGowan, Clarence Blakely, Pat Semark and Dean Brennan. Jim Miller and Robbie DeGenova clicked for the Showmen.

The Firefighters - Dairy Queen match highlighted play in the atom major group. Steve Ray combined with Darren McKewan for the game's only goal as the Firefighters got shutout goaltending from Gregory Bergeron in a 1-0 win.

Todd Bunker, Tim Kopecy, Andreas Schad, Blake Thompson and Chris Richards found the mark for goals in Quinte Home Builders' 6-4 win over BYBF Selects. Brian Casey scored three in defeat and Mark Deagan was good for a goal and three assists.

Ellis Printing broke out for a rash of goals to top Hawkins Chips 13-1. Paul Holland and Dan Dafoe each collected three goals and Paul Belch, Neil Graham and Warren Cavalier had two each. Lone marksman for the losers was Kevin Dever.

Duby's Painting came up with a first in peewee minor action, scoring its first win of the season at the expense of Dairy Queen which fell 5-3. Kirk Malish had three of the winners' goals with singles for Peter Wood and Serge Bergeron. Rob Archer, with two, and Wade McGinn scored for Dairy Queen.

Penguins and Bowes and Cocks Selects also scored wins but had to work to get them. While Penguins shaded Ellis and Carry 5-4, Bowes and Cocks nipped Wray's Furniture 7-6.

Andy Palmer's three goals powered Penguins who got one each from Dan Reeve and Bob Milligan. Cash and Carry goals went to Russell Frederick, Joey DeJaael, Wayne Peters and Brian Wilkinson.

David Wright was a three-goal shooter for Bowes and Cocks. Dwayne Emery connected for two goals while Dave Graham and Jim Thoreson shared the others. Keith McDonnell and John DeGenova each bit for a pair of Wray's goals with one each for Darryl Martin and Derrick Wagner.

In other games, Y's Men's Club downed Police Association 6-4 and Mobil got by Legion 5-1.

George Scholtz and Gerry Buckley had two goals each for Y's Men. Singles went to Scott Edwards and Jeff Miller. Dave Phillips counted both Police markers.

Blues' Penalties Fatal In Loss to Islanders

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It doesn't pay to take penalties against New York Islanders.

They proved it Tuesday night with three power-play goals, propelling them in a 4-1 win over St. Louis Blues.

The Islanders' power play is enough to scare any goaltender. They lead the National Hockey League with 40 goals after 25 games while having the man advantage compared with 31 in 20 games last season.

Defenceman Jean Potvin scored twice against the Blues with a man advantage—Jude Drouin assisted on both—and also scored a goal—to spark the Islanders to victory.

In Tuesday's other game, Los Angeles Kings also scored three power-play goals to defeat Atlanta Flames 5-3.

JEAN POTVIN

The win for the Islanders, their second ever on Blue's ice, extended the Blues' winless streak to five games, including four losses.

Larry Patey gave the Blues a 1-0 first-period lead before Potvin tied the score on a power play at 9:03 of the second. Billy Harris, with his 11th goal of the season, made it 2-1 for the Islanders on a power play at 16:06 and Drouin increased the margin at 17:44.

Potvin's second power-play goal at the 37-second mark of the third period completed the scoring.

Commenting on his power play, coach Al Arbour of the Islanders said:

"We started working on it in training camp because it wasn't that much last year. We've got five guys out there, no matter who they are, who are working together."

Tommy Williams and Frank St. Marseille scored third-period goals as the Kings broke open a 2-2 deadlock for their win over the Flames.

Centre Marcel Dionne got his 15th goal of the season and added an assist on Williams' tie-breaking goal for his 300th point in only five seasons in the NHL.

St. Marseille connected on the third "Los Angeles power-play goal to stretch the Kings' advantage to 4-2 with 5:34 left to play.

Tom Lysiak reduced the margin to one at the 15:40 mark but Dionne scored his eighth goal of the season into an empty net with 16 seconds left to clinch the win.

Meanwhile, Pittsburgh Penguins, who continue a three-game road trip with a game in Chicago tonight, have called up right winger Jacques Cossette from Hershey Bears of the American Hockey League.

He will replace Chuck Arnason, who has pulled stomach muscles, the club said Monday.

In other games tonight, Montreal is at Kansas City, Buffalo at Washington, Detroit at Vancouver, Los Angeles at California and Toronto at Minnesota.

Nothing Helps Inept Toros

By JOHN SHORT
The Canadian Press

Defensive lapses continue to prove costly for Toronto Toros, who took a 9-2 whipping Thursday night from Edmonton Oilers in a clash of Canadian Division rivals in the World Hockey Association.

The Toros escaped without being fined—at least publicly—but lost all chance of having Sunday's assessments returned.

The Toros, whose lineup includes some of the highest-priced players in the 16-team league, were fined $200 each by coach Bobby Kromm after losing an 8-2 lead and dropping a 10-9 decision to Cleveland Crusaders during the weekend.

Bunn said they could earn the money back by giving up six goals or less in their next two games, but the tactic did little good. The defeat left Toronto last in the Canadian Division, 10 points behind fourth-place Edmonton and a whopping 32 points behind the league leading Winnipeg Jets.

The Jets remained one point ahead of Quebec Nordiques as each team posted a victory. Bobby Hull scored after four minutes of sudden-death overtime to carry the Jets to a 4-3 decision over Denver Spurs and the Nordiques scored five goals in the third period of a 9-3 victory over Chicago.

In the only game not featuring Canadian Division teams, Houston Aeros were beaten 5-3 by New England Whalers for their first loss at home in 15 games—16 of them this season.

New England's victory, built on third-period goals by Brad Selwood, Tom Earl, Larry Pleau and Rick Ley, left the Whalers one point ahead of second-place Cleveland in the Eastern Division while Houston remained seven points ahead of the idle Minnesota Fighting Saints in the Western Division.

Doug Gibson scored the other new England goal while Frank Hughes and Marty Howe replied for Houston.

CAHA Turned Down

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Aeros lawyer Harrison Vickers said Tuesday that a request for an injunction against Aeros player John Tonelli by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has been dismissed.

The CAHA sought to keep Tonelli from playing for the Aeros in a dispute over the World Hockey Association team's signing of Tonelli.

The CAHA and Aeros were unable to arrive at a compromise settlement on development fees for the 19-year-old star.

Tonelli has scored eight goals and added one assist for the Aeros in 21 games.

Vickers said the court's action did not end litigation. He said the CAHA may pursue alternative claim for damages.

Tucks Heisman Away for Second Time

Will Griffin Fill the Bill in Pro Football?

NEW YORK (AP) — Where does Archie Griffin go from here?

Well, his next stop is Pasadena, Calif., for a Rose Bowl date with UCLA and then, hopefully, on to pro football for the only player ever to win the Heisman Trophy twice.

Hopefully, that is, because Griffin stands only five-foot-nine—if you press him he'll concede to 5-9½—and weighs 184 pounds, a drop in the bucket among all those gargantuan pro linemen he'll be running like.

"I'd like to play pro ball," Griffin said, Tuesday. "But I really don't want to go into that now because we have another game to play and I'd trade both Heismans for the national championship.

"That's been the goal of our team since I was a freshman. This is the closest now we've ever come. People think of the national championship as more of a team thing than the Heisman Trophy."

Coach Woody Hayes of No. 1-ranked Ohio State, who accompanied Griffin from Columbus, Ohio, for the announcement, has no doubts about Griffin's future in the pro ranks.

"Maybe he's not as big as they like, but he's as brave as they like," Hayes said. "I have no doubt he can play in the pros. He epitomizes everything you want in an athlete—great ability and great courage—and he's the best leader we've ever had.

"He combines speed and power and runs the ball better than any back we've ever had."

Griffin won the trophy, which goes to the top United States college player of the year, by outstanding running backs Chuck Muncie of California and Ricky Bell of Southern Cal. Griffin received 854 first-place ballots, 167 seconds and 104 thirds from 888 sports writers and broadcasters across the country. On a 3-2-1 basis, that amounted to 1,800 points. Muncie (155-104-47) received 726 points to 708 for Bell (76-108-18).

Rounding out the top 10 finishers were running backs Tony Dorsett of Pitt, Joe Washington of Oklahoma and Jimmy Dupree of Florida, quarterback John Sciarra of UCLA, running back Gordon Bell of Michigan, defensive tackle Leroy Selmon of Oklahoma and quarterback Gene Swick of Toledo.

Stoneham Faces Decision On Future of the Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Horace Stoneham, owner of San Francisco Giants, faced a decision Tuesday whether to sell the National League baseball team and it appeared he had just one firm offer.

The Examiner reported that a group from Canada interested in moving the team to Toronto dropped out of the picture, leaving only a syndicate of investors from San Francisco and New York which would keep the team here.

It could not be determined whether this Toronto group bidding for the franchise was headed by Lorne Dugald, representing Maple Leaf Gardens which also owns the National Hockey League's Toronto Maple Leafs, or a syndicate reported to involve Labatt's Brewery and Howard Webster of the Free Press newspaper chain.

Fincups on a Spree

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winger Ric Selling had three goals and two assists to lead Hamilton Fincups to a 10-5 victory over Kitchener Rangers in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A action Tuesday.

The win kept Hamilton, two points ahead of London in the Emms division standings. The Knights, who have played three fewer games, defeated Toronto Marlboros 8-6.

In other games, St. Catharines Black Hawks downed Windsor Spitfires 11-5 and Oshawa Generals edged Peterborough Petes 3-1.

At Hamilton, 13 players divided 30 scoring points as the Fincups scored 11 goals for the second consecutive game against the Rangers.

Defenceman Ron Roscoe scored twice for the Fincups. Other Hamilton scorers were Mark Perran, Ed Smith, Joe Contini, Joe Kowal, Dale McCourt, Rob Street and Cal Hindy.

The Fincups led 4-1 after the first period and 6-2 after the second.

Defenceman Gord MacDonald scored two Kitchener goals and Gaston Gingras got the other before 1,794 spectators.

Hamilton outshot the Rangers 58-32 and each club received seven minor penalties.

Andy Culhane started in goal for Kitchener but was replaced by Warren Skinner after the first 20 minutes. Mark Locken was in goal for the Fincups.

League play resumes Thursday with Kitchener at Peterborough and Sault Ste. Marie at Windsor.

Knights 8 Marlboros 6

Rookie Steve Stockman and Tom Rowe each scored two goals to lead the Knights to their 13th victory in 15 home games.

Other London goals were scored by Jim MacRae, Dave Hilborn, Rick Doyleand Rick Green.

Green scored on a rink-length rush during a powerplay to put London ahead to stay late in the second period. The London defenceman's goal broke a 3-3 tie at 16:16.

Stockman scored his goals 11 seconds apart in the second period to give London a 5-3 lead.

Mike McEwen, John Gorrie, Mark Murphy and Stelio Esposito scored for Toronto before a crowd of 2,286.

Hawks 11 Spitfires 5

Bill Hamilton and Greg Craig each scored three goals to lead St. Catharines to the win.

The score was tied 1-1 after the first 20 minutes of play but St. Catharines exploded for six goals in the second period and added four in the third.

Ken Campbell, Kevin Kenney, Doug Cilben, Don Sterlini and Ron Wilson scored the other goals for the Hawks.

Joel Quenneville had two goals for the Spitfires. Rolly Hedges, Scott Miller and Ted Roshan were the other Windsor scorers.

Wayne Mills started in goal for Windsor but was replaced by Larry McRae at 12:00 of the second period, after the seventh St. Catharines goal. The Windsor goaltenders faced 31 shots.

Rick Nickelchuk, acquired earlier in the day from Kitchener Rangers, handled 46 shots as the St. Catharines net.

Generals 3 Petes 1

Mike Boyd and Glenn Knight scored for the Generals in the third period to give them their victory over the Petes before a 365 spectators.

Mark Kirton scored the Peterborough goal in the second period.

Mike Boyd and Glenn Knight scored for Oshawa.

Greg Millen stopped 36 shots in goal for Peterborough while Greg Stefan handled 25 shots on the Oshawa net.

JIM NEILSON

Seals' Ace Out

OAKLAND (AP) — California Golden Seals will be missing their star defenceman, Jim Neilson, when they meet Los Angeles Kings tonight and try to even the record for their current home stand at 2-2.

Neilson had to have surgery for torn ligaments in his right knee, and club officials said Tuesday he would be out for "a minimum of eight weeks."

Neilson was injured in Sunday's 4-1 National Hockey League loss to Atlanta. He received a hip check from Hilliard Graves and left the ice on a stretcher.

Last year Neilson, 34-year-old native of Big River, Sask., was voted the team's most valuable player and is the Seals' most experienced. This is his 16th National Hockey League season and second with the Seals after being obtained from New York Rangers.

Off-court Problems For Ilie

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The $100,000 Masters tennis tournament has toned into a serious business for Ilie Nastase.

The temperamental Romanian star on trial on the Professional Tennis Council when the governing world circuit, converges on this city to watch the end of the tournament and discuss his latest antics and disqualifications.

Members of the council were expected today, and high on their agenda is the question of a code of conduct for the players. Nastase's behavior last Sunday, when Arthur Ashe of the United States walked off the court in protest, will obviously come into the discussion.

An odd feature of the situation is that Ashe, as president of the Association of Tennis Professionals, is a member of the council.

Nastase made no protest when the tournament committee reversed its earlier decision and awarded the match to Ashe.

Nastase has been disqualified from matches three times this year. He is also due to face an independent tribunal in London to appeal against the disqualification of his runner-up prize in the Canadian open tournament this year in Toronto, where the organizers accused him of not trying.

Nastase was a model of good behavior Tuesday night when he defeated Manuel Orantes of Spain 5-6, 6-4, 6-4 and kept his hopes alive of reaching the semi-finals.

Meanwhile, the hopes of American Harold Solomon were dashed when Bjorn Borg, 19-year-old Swedish hero, defeated him 6-2, 6-2.

The tournament is being run in two groups, with the top two in each advancing to the semi-finals.

Here are the standings:

White group: Ashe 2-0, Orantes 1-1, Nastase 1-1, Adriano Panatta, Italy, 0-2. Blue group: Guillermo Vilas, Argentina 2-0, Borg 2-0, Solomon 0-2, Raul Ramirez, Mexico, 0-2.

Stars Fold

CHICAGO (AP) — Utah Stars of the American Basketball Association have folded because of economic problems, commissioner Dave DeBusschere announced Tuesday.

The Stars became the third ABA team to fold in less than two months, joining San Diego Sails and Baltimore Claws as victims of financial problems.

DeBusschere said that to clear up their debts, the Stars sold four players—Moses Malone, Steve Green, Randy Denton and Ron Boone—to Spirits of St. Louis for a "substantial amount." The seven remaining players will undergo normal waiver procedures.

A source said Utah owner Bill Daniels, who did not meet his player payroll on Monday, lost $3.1 million on the club.

Platers Produce

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Guelph Platers fattened their lead atop the Southern Ontario Junior hockey League Tuesday with a 13-3 victory over last-place Niagara Falls Flyers.

It was the only game scheduled.

Guelph led 4-0 at the end of the first period and 11-1 after 40 minutes.

Terry Gregory paced the Platers with four goals and two assists while Larry Wilson added two goals and three assists.

Clearwater the Leader In Baltimore's Win

BALTIMORE (AP) — Defenceman Ray Clearwater scored two second-period goals to lead Baltimore Clippers to a 5-1 win over Rochester Americans in the only American Hockey League game Tuesday night.

Baltimore started slowly with Dennis Giannini scoring midway through the first period, but the Clippers then opened up in the second period with Bob Craig scoring at 7:06 and Clearwater adding his goals at 17:02 and 19:18.

Ron Garwasiuk scored the only Rochester goal and Vic Mercredi got the other Baltimore goal. Rochester goalie Ken Broderick made 32 saves and Clipper goalie Dave Hainsworth had 24 stops.

The win moved Baltimore into third place in the AHL's Southern Division while Rochester remained one point behind division-leading Nova Scotia Voyageurs in the Northern Division.

In tonight's games, the Voyageurs play host to Providence Reds in Halifax and Baltimore travels to Springfield.

Dave Bing Delivers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Washington Bullets have been waiting for Dave Bing to play up to expectations since the beginning of the National Basketball Association season.

Bing, a six-time all-star, two-time all-NBA, and former league scoring champion, finally did it Tuesday night, and the sputtering Bullets, overwhelming favorites to repeat as Central Division champions, broke a four-game losing streak with a 107-104 comeback victory over Los Angeles Lakers.

Bing, who averaged 22.8 points a game in nine years with Detroit before being traded to Washington for Kevin Porter prior to this season, had 17.7 in 15 games with Washington before meeting Los Angeles.

Against the Lakers, he scored 22, including 13 in the fourth quarter and eight in the final 6 minutes, after the Bullets had rallied to tie the score 96 all.

Queen's Summer Visit Promises to Be Major Event

LONDON (CP) — Prince Charles and his grandmother, the Queen Mother, captured an unusual share of the Royal Family limelight in 1975, but the Queen's summer visit to North America promises to be the main royal event in the new year.

The charming prince, 27, who says "I'm pretty square," broke tradition with the most candid royal interview ever, a television program and other comments that showed him less "square" than many imagined.

He talked about his love-'em-and-leave-'em tactics with girls, said women's liberationists "rather annoy me," and suggested 30 was a good age for a man to marry. But he hedged on whether the Queen should abdicate in his favor in about 10 years.

Answering questions for Woman's Own magazine, he said it was difficult to say whether it would be a good idea for his mother to retire at around age 60. But finally he said he opposed the suggestion because a monarch with long experience can be of increasing assistance to a government. Contrary to some opinion, he said, the Queen still has considerable influence on her ministers.

"I've fallen in love with all sorts of girls," said the bachelor naval officer, "and I fully intend to go on doing so." But marriage was a serious business, the creation of a "happy, secure" family. Its main objective, and it would be rash to marry "the first person I've fallen in love with."

"In my position, obviously, finding I could possibly entertain is getting divorced."

Although the heir to the throne said "I've never worried about my image," the effect of all this publicity, after years tucked away in a Scottish boarding school and off on naval service, was to project the future king as a graceful if sometimes erratic figure with a serious streak but a keen sense of humor.

In the BBC TV program Pilot Royal, a documentary on his helicopter training, he jokes with mates over possible conflict between naval regulations and "The Queen" as he refers to his mother, over his fledgling beard.

The sudden burst of publicity surrounding the Prince was recalled in 1973 by the traditional flight of nostalgia over the Queen Mother's 73th birthday Aug. 4.

Aside from the dinner party at Buckingham Palace for 40 family and personal friends, the occasion usually scores of laudatory newspaper and magazine articles honoring the "Queen Mum," long a favorite among British "royals." She is held in particular affection in London, where she worked and toured throughout the dark days of the Second World War.

In those days, it was recalled, she did rifle practice in the palace grounds, saying "I shan't go down fighting." When the palace was bombed, and it was suggested the princesses should be sent to the safety of Canada, she said: "The children will not leave unless I do; I shall not leave unless their father does; and the King will not leave the country in any circumstance whatever."

Always a sunny disposition, she still carries a heavy burden of official engagements, demanding efforts by her staff to maintain her activities.

In all, 1975 was a busy travel year for the Royal Family, with the Queen and Prince Philip visiting Japan, Hong Kong, Mexico, Bermuda, Barbados and the Bahamas. Prince Philip then went on a whirlwind tour of several Central American republics. And the Queen went to Jamaica in April to open the Commonwealth Heads of Government Conference.

Prince Charles made a 10-day trip to the Arctic while his ship was on duty in Canada and Princess Margaret visited Australia, as did Princess Anne and husband Mark Phillips in the springtime. The Queen Mother went to Iran, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Wight.

Although the schedule still isn't firm, the Queen and Prince Philip will go to the U.S. July 6-12, their first official visit for almost 10 years, for American Bicentennial ceremonies. Then they go to Montreal to open the Olympic Games July 17—the Queen's first official visit since she opened the Ottawa Commonwealth Conference in July, 1973.

Library Corner

The Fledgling — Elizabeth Cadell.

Victorina's escort from Lisbon to London were a cloak of respectability which convinced the child's father and aunt, not even before the teen-year old girl had made her Gloucestershire discovery of the theft from the rich private chapel of her home, she had begun to take his measure. How the gold statuette of St. Christopher had been stolen and how it reached Portugal again, is interwoven into a delightful story.

Heaven on Earth — Janice Elliott.

It is a winter night in London 1968. In the unfashionable suburb of Chiswick someone she once knew, suffer a near-fatal accident. This chance re-appearance of a ghost from the past drives Olive — for so long an apparently contented woman — to question the nature of her life, her work and fifteen year old marriage. Heaven on Earth is the final part of Janice Elliott's trilogy which opened with State of Peace and was continued in Private Life.

Whitton's Folly — Pamela Hill.

This is the story of Edmund Whitton, who arrives home from India to claim the estate of Kneen in the Scottish Highlands. In India he had been a close friend of Robert Clive. Clive of India's path of glory and his subsequent fall provide an engrossing contrast to the life of Kneen. Jack Merchright — Mary E. Pearce.

This new novel by Mary Pearce shows the same warm country life and people as her earlier books. Almost pessimistic, Jack Merchright comes to Brown Elms Farm just before the turn of the century. He starts to work for Philips Snell, the owner, the farm is badly run-down, but slowly, working as Philipps's underpaid bailiff, he brings it back to life. It isn't easy to impose his ideas on her, nor are matters made easier when Philippa's much younger half-sister, Nenna, falls in love with him.

Lord of the Far Island — Victoria Holt.

Lady Kellaway was orphaned when she was five, taken in by wealthy cousins and raised as a companion to their daughter. But the life of the despised poor-relation changed completely when the son of a wealthy London family asked for her hand in marriage.

The Wallace — Nigel Transter.

William Wallace was a Scot of humble birth, who, driven to desperation by the indignities perpetrated upon his fellow countrymen and women by Edward Plantagenet, took upon himself to challenge the might of the greatest military machine in Christendom. This is the story of what an ordinary man can achieve, touched by the finger of God.

Lumberjack Tackle

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Defensive tackle Wayne Baker of the San Francisco 49ers can tell lumberjack stories one after another. He lived in Plains, Mont., and spent six summers lumberjacking but says he would never make it a career. He says that one day a log he was cutting gave him the scar on his nose. He also says his father has a lot of crooked fingers.

Petition Urges Ottawa To Take Radical Reform

OTTAWA (CP) — A petition signed by 17 prominent economists and academics calls on the government for radical reforms to defeat inflation, including measures to curb the powers of big business, big labor and big government.

The 1,400-word petition, released Tuesday by economists Douglas Hartle and John C.Ir[illegible] University of Toronto, says federal anti-inflation program is inadequate.

The document, signed at a social sciences conference 11 days ago and presented then to Michael Pitfield, secretary to the cabinet, warns that rivalry for ever-bigger shares of the national wealth has placed the asset social system in doubt.

Spokesmen for both Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday they were unaware of the petition, which describes the present policy of partial pay and price controls as "unlikely to succeed in achieving the government's modest objective of reducing inflationary expectations unless it is supported by other policy changes."

The proposed changes include stringent reductions in spending and borrowing by federal and provincial governments during the next few years "even though this might well require some painful cutbacks in statutory programs."

The petition calls for money management more closely attuned to changes in production. It describes rapid growth of the money supply in recent years as a prime cause of domestic inflation.

The most sweeping reforms proposed in the petition would aim at reducing "the bargaining power of the most powerful" for more income, money that the petitioners achieved edge would provoke controversy because the powerful "are unlikely to acquiesce in their losses without a fight."

Among a long list of specific structural changes proposed are tougher laws to curb corporate mergers and a reduction in tariffs protecting industries that are either inefficient or inclined to pad prices.

Governments also should dismantle the various farm marketing boards to let free-market forces govern agriculture prices. Even if this requires adoption of some kind of guaranteed income for needy farmers."

In government, the number of ministries and departments should be reduced, the bureaucracy pared down and federal ministers and senior public servants should accept a rollback substantial pay increases they received this year.

In labor law, the powers of unions representing government and construction workers should be reduced because, Prof. Hartle said in an interview, they are weighted in favor of the unions.

In the construction industry the provinces should make it legal for companies to go directly to the workers rather than have to deal through union hiring halls in some cases, said Mr. Hartle.

Canada, Norway Sign Model Fisheries Pact

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada and Norway signed a major fish series agreement Tuesday that is expected to become the model for treaties with many other countries.

The treaty, allowing Norway to fish for species surplus to Canadian needs was signed by External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen and Norwegian Ambassador Knut Hedemann. Although it is not effective until ratified by the Norwegian Parliament, the agreement notes that this should be "as soon as possible."

An external affairs spokesman said ratification is expected within a few weeks. Norway had been urged to approve it "as urgently as they can push it through."

While the agreement makes no mention of a 200-mile offshore limit, Mr. Hedemann said in a brief speech that it is "based on the premise of an extended area of fisheries jurisdiction."

"The significance of this agreement may, therefore, be said to reach beyond the mere regulation of fisheries and Canada should be seen in the broader perspective of our common desire to promote the orderly development of the law of the sea."

It also calls on Norway to police its own fishing vessels, a practice now standard in most of the 17 countries of the International Commission for the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries.

The agreement is subject to review by Canada and Norway two years after it goes into effect or earlier if affected by a more global multilateral treaty.

Builders Say Rent Laws Will Stifle Construction

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto builder's group aimed harsh words at Ontario's proposed rent-control legislation Tuesday, saying that if it passed, it would serve to stifle rental construction.

In a brief to the select committee studying the rent control bill, the Metropolitan Toronto Apartment Builders Association warned that rent controls would lead to a shortage of vacant apartments and force landlords to let their buildings deteriorate.

The association said the eight-per-cent rent increase ceiling proposed in the bill would force landlords to postpone repairs and reduce maintenance.

The association's sentiments were echoed in a series of other briefs from builders and landlords, which also urged the posed eight-per-cent ceiling on rent increases this year is far too low. The briefs said the cost of services such as electricity have risen by more than 20 per cent.

The Ontario Apartment Board said: "It would appear that the imposition of these controls on most of the regions outside Metropolitan Toronto which have suffered from high vacancy rates over an extended period of time is needlessly severe."

Briefs from tenant groups called for stronger measures to control rents. The Students Law and Society of the University of Toronto said the controls should be made retroactive to June 30, 1974, instead of July 29, 1975.

The society's submission also said the controls should be extended to cover rooming houses, small apartment units and units rented for more than $300 a month.

The Committee of Concern for Rental Housing in Ontario said in a news release that it sent a telegram Tuesday to the select committee asking it to extend its hearing schedule so individual landlords may voice objections.

Ottawa Student Tried To Stop His Attack

OTTAWA (CP) — A page from the diary of Ottawa high school student Robert Poulin, describing how he thought an inflatable plastic woman would stave off his desire to rape a girl and commit suicide, was read to a coroner's jury at an inquest Tuesday.

"Robert Poulin was suffering mentally and ... if psychiatric help had been made available, this incident might have been avoided."

Constable Malcolm Pearce said he learned into the death of Poulin, 18, and Kim Rabel, 17, whose nearly naked, charred body was found handcuffed to the young man's bed Oct. 27.

Poulin committed suicide the same day after wounding six students—one fatally—when he fired several shots into a classroom at St. Pius X high school with a sawed-off, pump-action shotgun.

Mark Hough, 18, died Monday from head wounds.

Constable Pearce, of the identification branch in the Ottawa police department, read from the diary page, dated April 7.

The young man said he was depressed because his school work had piled up. He said that weeks earlier he had considered buying a fake gun through a catalogue, raping a girl on a nearby street, killing her if she protested, and perhaps committing suicide.

The diary said he had considered killing his family with a gun in his father's closet but decided that death was bliss and he didn't want to give them the pleasure.

Instead of killing them he had decided to set fire to the house and then kill himself.

Sgt. Douglas Thompson, of the homicide and robbery section of the Ottawa police force, testified that a rifle was found Oct. 27 at the back of the father's closet but if had not been fired.

The gun Poulin used was purchased at a discount department store four days before the incident, Oct. 24, the inquest was told.

A few days before writing the April 7 entry in his diary, Poulin wrote, he had made two trips to a used book store and purchased several so-called girlie magazines.

Other diary entries detailed how Poulin had ordered a $29.95 plastic life-like doll advertised in one of the magazines which he hoped would dissuade him from having to rape a girl and commit suicide. However, when the doll arrived it was a "big disappointment," the constable said.

On another day—the coroner did not give the date—he had written: "I wish I could overcome this fear of women."

Another page contained a list of names, one of them Kim Rabel, who has been described by parents of both students as an acquaintance.

Evidence presented by Constable Pearce to the jury Tuesday included the rumpled plastic doll, a sexual aid, applications filled out to companies for "pornographic literature," and a selection of Poulin's hundreds of magazines.

In his diary Poulin kept a rating index for magazine articles.

In his diary Poulin also said he had a "half-hatched idea about using the fake gun to rob people at night."

Board Meets

Loyalist College Board of Governors will hold a regular monthly meeting Thursday at the college. It will begin at 8.30 p.m. in the administration board room of Keele Building.

Burning Issue

Belleville General Hospital (BGH) Board of Governors has a burning issue at hand — installation of a new incinerator. Philip Rickards, BGH executive director, said recently that verbal approval has been received from the provincial government regarding funding for the new incinerator's supply and installation. He told the board the government will pay two-thirds towards the $60,000 cost.

Meeting Set

Belleville General Hospital (BGH) Board of Governors has advanced the date of its regular monthly meeting in December by eight days to avoid a conflict with the Christmas holidays. The board will meet on Dec. 18 at 11 a.m. in the BGH administration board room following a session of its finance and audit committee.

New Course Planned

Belleville Collegiate Institute is hoping to offer an innovative mathematics course for Grade 13 students next semester, beginning Jan. 29. The course will be aimed at students who are planning a career in sociology, biology, economics or medicine. The course has been developed by the mathematics department at BCI.

Inspector Resigns

PICTON — Building and plumbing inspector for the town of Picton, Morley Brooks has submitted his resignation to council effective January 1, 1976.

Town clerk Andrew Jarvis told council Monday Mr. Brooks was leaving because he is to his financial benefit" to take other work.

CITY OF BELLEVILLE — LOCAL IMPROVEMENT NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE THAT:

1. The Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville intends to construct as a local improvement the following storm sewer and asphalt road, complete with curb and gutters, and intends to specially assess a part of the cost upon the land abutting the work and the balance against the Corporation at large as follows:

STREET	FROM	TO	ESTIMATED COST	CORPORATION'S SHARE	OWNER'S SHARE	ESTIMATED COST PER FOOT FRONTAGE	ESTIMATED ANNUAL COST PER FOOT FRONTAGE
Sidney Street	Tracey Street	Approx 570 feet north of the north street line of Bell Boulevard	$304,584.86	$226,069.72	$78,515.14	$24.98	$4.24

EXAMPLE: Lot with 50 ft. frontage would be assessed as follows:
50 ft. x $24.98 — $1,249.00
If paid over a period of 10 years at 11% per annum, the annual cost would be:
50 ft. x $4.24 — $212.00.

2. The Special Assessment is to be paid in 10 annual instalments.
3. Application will be made by the Corporation to the Ontario Municipal Board for its approval of the undertaking of the said work and any owner may, within 21 days after the first publication of the Notice, file with the Clerk of the municipality his objection to the said work being undertaken.
4. The said Board may approve the said work being undertaken, but before doing so may appoint a time and place when any objection to the said work will be considered.

EARL M. DAFOE,
CITY CLERK.

A new kind of car.

There's never been a Dodge like this before. Dodge Aspen has been designed with today's driving conditions in mind. Aspen is a compact ...the compact for big-car drivers. That means we've gone to great lengths to make sure that Aspen delivers more room, comfort and luxury than any ordinary compact. To do it we had to come up with a new kind of car.

Big-car comfort.

One thing that big car drivers look for is comfort. And that means having lots of room to stretch out in. Aspen comes through with more legroom and headroom than most full-size North American cars. And to get at all that roominess, Aspen gives you extra-wide doors for easy entry and exit.

Aspen delivers big-car comfort in other ways, too. For instance, the interior trim is superb. And special attention has been paid to sound insulation. So your new Aspen will be big-car quiet.

Big-car ride.

Here's another way Dodge Aspen treats you to the comforts of big cars. We designed Aspen's suspension system to duplicate the feel, vibration isolation, noise reduction and smoothness of a full-size car. The fact that we succeeded is something you'll discover yourself when you take one for a test drive.

Big-car options.

Compact cars used to have a pretty compact option list. Not so with Aspen. Here's just a taste of what you can order to make your new Aspen yours alone:

- air conditioning • six-way power seats • power windows • power door locks • AM/FM Multiplex stereo radio with full four-speaker stereo sound • automatic speed control (with Torqueflite automatic) • sun roof (Sedans and Coupes) • electric heated rear window • tilt steering wheel (available with power steering and automatic transmission).

The list goes on and on. Our point is, if you want to personalize your new Aspen, you'll find the wide choice you've come to expect from a big car.

Reclining 60/40 bench seat with centre armrest standard on SE Coupes and Sedans, optional on SE Station Wagons.

Big-car model choice.

There are three Aspen series. There's the standard Aspen, available as a 2-door Sport Coupe, 4-door Sedan and a 4-door Station Wagon.

Aspen Custom is available as a 2-door Coupe and 4-door Sedan. The very luxurious Aspen Special Edition lets you choose from 2-door Sport Coupe, 4-door Sedan and 4-door Station Wagon models.

While we're very proud of all our new Aspen models, we're even more pleased to point out that for the first time in Canada, Dodge is making two compact Station Wagon models available. It's just another reason we call Aspen the compact for big-car drivers.

Compact-car economy.

In looks, room, and ride, Aspen comes on big. But when it comes to economy, Aspen lives up to what you'd expect from a compact.

Two engines are available as standard—the famous 225 CID Slant Six or the economical 318 CID V8. Both know how to make the most of your gas dollar.

New overdrive transmission.

Want to make your gas dollar go even farther? There's a new optional overdrive-4 transmission. Overdrive means that at highway speeds, your Aspen's engine won't have to work as hard (22% less engine speed) or burn as much gas to keep up with traffic. It's available on all models with the 225 CID Slant Six and 318 CID V8.

Aspen Special Edition 2-Door Coupe.

Aspen Special Edition Station Wagon.

All backed by the Chrysler Warranty.

Your new Dodge Aspen is backed with a 1-year, unlimited mileage warranty. In short, that means that if anything goes wrong during the first year, no matter how far you drive, it's our problem, not yours. (Police cars and taxis excepted.)

In Memoriam

SEARS, Tom Leonard — At Douglas Airport Dr., Belleville, December 3rd, 1974.
Dear Dad in the lamp of memory,
And that is where you'll be,
We'll dream awhile of yesterday,
And of eternity.
Memory is the garden of heaven,
Where we walk hand in hand,
With all the ones we love so much,
And things we loved so much.
—Lovingly remembered by sister Myrtle and Jack.

DARROW — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Cordell E. Darrow, who passed away December 3, 1970.
Dear as you were,
And more than you getting tired,
When a task was put upon you,
You'd be tossed into arms around you,
You always tried to do your best,
You don't deserve your place of rest,
You've worked hard for so long,
Only God knows the load,
So you've taken the load.
—Lovingly remembered by wife Lena and Jean, Edward, Roy and Larry.

CROSSLEY — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Ernest, who passed away December 3rd, 1973.
Sweet memories are all I have,
Sweet memories are all I crave,
Sweet memories are all I hold dear,
Memories that will always linger,
Memories that will never die,
Always remembered by Elsie, Jean-ette, and Ted.

Arts Council Looking Inward

By SUSAN McCONNELL
Staff Reporter

A meeting has been organized by the executive committee of Quinte Arts Council (QAC) to deal with an apparent problem of communication within the council.

President Linton Reid said this week the problem is "there isn't enough communication between the various representatives of the council.

The QAC works as an umbrella agency with 23 member groups.

Mr. Reid said some of the members do not want to become too involved; they are not interested in gaining the QAC support.

"Our function is to co-ordinate and motivate agencies for cultural activities in this area," he said.

Mr. Reid said the meeting, scheduled for Monday, will also deal with the role the QAC is supposed to play. "It will be a whole re-examination of the future," he said. "We want to determine where we fit in."

The QAQC received its constitution in Belleville in 1967.

At a recent executive meeting, Chester Hall, a committee vice-president, expressed difficulty in articulating the role and purpose of the QAC.

Mr. Hall said even the constitution did not clearly outline the exact role and function of the committee.

Manfred Koechlin, past-president of the QAC, blamed the problem on limited interests within the groups represented.

"Communication has always been a problem in an enterprise that involves a lot of people with diversified interests," he said.

"What the QAC is doing in the community is not always obvious. We want to try to establish that the QAC is responsible for bringing some cultural events to the community."

Showbiz Shorts

PARIS (Reuter) — American singer Ike Turner, on a tour here with his wife Tina, was robbed of $34,945 in a recording studio at suburban Joinville Le Pont, police said Tuesday.

Turner's impresario, Augustin Gerard of Bollywood, Calif., said the money was in a case which disappeared from Turner's dressing room Monday while the singer was recording.

MELBOURNE, Australia (AFP) — Hundreds of teen-age girls broke down and cried Tuesday night as lead guitarist Stewart (Woody) Wood of Scottish rock group The Bay City Rollers fainted during a sellout Melbourne concert.

Wood was carried off the stage by a security guard but recovered after five minutes and continued playing with the rest of the group. Guards had to drag hysterical young fans away from the front of the stage.

Earlier, a 16-year-old girl locked herself in the trunk of a taxi hoping to be driven past police guards to see the pop group at their hotel.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Cher and ex-husband Sonny Bono, who ended their marriage as well as their popular television variety show last season, may be headed for a new series together.

Jay Bernstein, a publicist for Bono, declined comment on reports the entertainer was negotiating with CBS for a new series with his former wife, possibly as early as February.

"I do know what's going on, but I'm not at liberty to say," Bernstein said. "No one will make any comment on anything until it can be done properly. One way or another, something is imminent in the next three days."

Cher was married to rock music star Gregg Allman on June 30, three days after her divorce from Bono. Days later she filed for divorce from Allman but withdrew the petition in August.

Then, last month, Allman filed a petition at Macon, Ga., saying the couple was separated again and asking that the marriage be dissolved.

Both Sonny and Cher went on with separate variety shows at the start of the fall season. His was cancelled while her — although still on the air — has suffered declining ratings.

Tree Towers

LONDON (CP) — The River Thames will be lit up this year by the tallest Christmas tree in Europe and probably the world. It will dwarf both the Trafalgar Square tree and New York's Rockefeller Centre tree. The giant 86-foot Norwegian spruce, donated by Reed International will be erected near County Hall, south of the Thames, and will be the focus of a £34-million appeal for the restoration of the Canterbury Cathedral.

Morning Sickness Usually Disappears

By GEORGE C. THOMPSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am in the early stages of my first pregnancy. The problem is I can't keep any foods down, big odd or solid.

I have been losing weight—15 pounds on a week. Will this go away? If so, how soon?—S. F.

This "morning sickness" usually disappears in a few weeks, and it probably will have by the time you read this.

There is speculation the phenomenon is linked to a decrease in hydrochloric acid in the stomach, which occurs in pregnancy. This disturbs the digestion of food producing a queasy, fussy feeling.

"Morning sickness" is just a convenient term because its occurrence is most common upon waking. Often the symptoms end by noon and the woman feels quite well until the next morning. This cycle may go on with the nausea occurring at mid-day and recuperating the next mid-day.

Often small, frequent feedings of carbohydrates will control the problem. Eating a cracker before arising and avoiding excessive fluids can help.

Your weight loss is quite high. Usual weight gain is less of up to 20 or more pounds is seen in the average-sized woman before the children are brought under control, and this usually happens with the first three months.

During this period you should be taking vitamin supplements and your doctor should be monitored to detect any anemia that may result.

There are medications available to ease the nausea, but the last rule is to avoid medications, especially during the early months of pregnancy, whenever possible.

Only in a few rare cases does this problem become severe enough to warrant hospitalization. As I said earlier, by the time you read this it will probably be only an unpleasant memory, or be forgotten altogether.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: When one is allergic to the dye used for an intravenous pyelogram is there any other comparable test to determine if the kidneys are healthy?—Mrs. B. B. G.

In pyelography, a contrast medium (the "dye") is injected intravenously. Then subsequent x-rays show the rate of excretion from the kidneys. There may be reactions to the material beyond the expected transitory sensation of warmth and a salty taste. Reactions can be serious, hence the precaution of testing for allergy in the material.

It is possible in some cases to use the retrograde method. In this the material is introduced by catheter through the urethra. Apparently physicians have ruled out this method or it would have been considered.

Simple x-ray will show the presence of large stones. More elaborate methods of radiologic examination that do not involve the dyes to which you are allergic.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a lovely 12-year-old granddaughter who refuses to wear shoes. She wears only sandals. She will not listen to advice that it is unhealthy and bad for her health. I am convinced that she is ruining her feet. Could you give me your view on this?—Mrs. I. H. K.

According to Dr Irvin O. Kovalenko, former president of the American Podiatry Association, barefoot is best for the feet, grandmother. Healthy feet can do well in almost any type of footwear as long as the fit is good, says Dr. Kanel.

SIDE GLANCES — by Gill Fox

"Well, for one thing, you asked him Shirley if she was one of the Andrews Sisters"

Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

For Monday, Dec. 4

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful today lest you alienate one who's been helpful. When this person agreed to come aboard, he thought his interests would be protected, too.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't be upset today if everyone fails to agree with your ideas, suggestions and ideas. Don't forge better conclusions.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20) You can expect a reasonable return today from that which you've earned the hard way. Is there the get-rich-quick scheme?

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Try to be understanding today with the immediate family as you are with persons who mean far less to you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're very effective today so long as you're working on a labor of love. If it's an obligation, you're likely to try to palm it off.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today you're somewhat prone to take financial risks. Steer clear of sharp strangers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) If you're looking for something for the home or family today, buy it. Bonanzas could be costly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 22) As long as you know the motives behind your actions today don't be too concerned about what others may think. You can explain later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you're prudent in managing your resources today, you'll choose not to be stuck. However, be alert. You have an eye to overspend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It's important that you negotiate business deals early in the day. Later, people will be wrapped up in their own problems.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't dilly-dally around the office today. The boss has some duties he'd like you to perform hours if you hang around.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Keep demands on friends and loved ones today within reasonable limits. Their tolerance goes only so far.

Researchers Hitch Ride To Arctic

BOMBAY (CP) — Balan Nair, a truck-driver from the southern state of Kerala, has gone west to a Persian Gulf sheikhdom in search of work.

"I spent all my savings on making preparations," Nair, 40, said. The rail journey to Bombay, the fee paid to the employment agency, the expense involved in getting a passport in order and the air fare came to more than $3,500."

But when Nair landed in the Arab sheikhdom of Muscat, he found there was no job waiting for him. He was deported by a bogus travel agency.

Now he has no money to go back to Kerala, Nair agreed to be a carrier of smuggled goods between Muscat and Bombay.

The Indian police have started a crackdown on bogus travel agencies luring gullible young men and women. Several people have been arrested and fled-charges have been framed.

According to one estimate, nearly 10,000 Indians from some 18-Indian states have been cheated by a network of sham employment agencies in the last six years alone.

Many families which hoped to get rich quick have been ruined.

The Chopra Travel Agency in Bombay specialized in jobs for "ambitious, intelligent and friendly Arab countries."

One nurse from Bangalore, capital of Karnataka state, was reportedly told that "you can return to India for good in six years with a saving of at least $30,000."

The nurse paid the agent $2,000 as "processing fees." When she found there was no application for her on a ship which was supposed to take her to Muscat she complained to the police.

The agent was arrested and he died during the trial.

Ismail Noor Mahomed of Indian Overseas Employment Service now is spending a two-year prison sentence for having duped a number of job-seekers.

Three major cases have been under investigation by Bombay police, and one of the cases has been described as sensational-involves Dr. M. B. Ansari who described himself as "secretary of the Indo-United Arab Emirates Friendship Society" in Sharjah and the "personal friend" of many Arab sheikhs.

The "doctor" is said to have cheated nearly 50 persons out thousands of dollars on the pretext of getting them jobs in Arab sheikhdoms.

Some Arabs are also involved in the fraud. One of them was Salim Abdul Alfadli—came to Bombay from Dubai with offers of jobs for "talented young Indians."

Alfadli now has been deported after spending a year in prison.

Bed Sores Reduced

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A new type of hospital bed that costs $13,000 is said to prevent pressure sores and will be studied at St. Joseph's Hospital here. Known as the low-pressure bed system, the bed has five inflations, each adjustable to a patient's body contours. Even the temperature of the air in the bed may be adjusted to the patient's needs. The bed, one of the first of its kind in Canada, will be placed in the hospital's burns unit.

Climates Change

TORONTO (CP) — Climatic extremes of warm, cold, drought and dry are going to occur over the next few decades, Patrick McTaggart-Cowan, former executive director of the Canada Council of Canada, said at a meeting. He was critical of a trend in Canada to place its concern agricultural land out of production while ignoring the farmland further north which is more susceptible to climatic change.

FUR-TRADED TRAVELS

In one of the greatest explorations of all time fur-trader Simon Fraser travelled the Eskimale Fraser River from its source in the Rocky Mountains to its mouth on the Pacific in 1806.

Newfoundland Election Maritime Highlight

HALIFAX (CP) — A Newfoundland election, several political developments and changes in the continuing struggle for economic and industrial growth in the region will be the highlight of events in Nova Scotia were the main highlights of 1975 in Atlantic Canada.

The voting in Newfoundland next Conservative Premier Frank Moores back into power with a slightly reduced majority and former Liberal Premier Joseph Smallwood returned to the legislative arena at the head of a party of his supporters known as the Liberal Reform Party.

Liberal leader Ed Roberts, frustrated in his second bid to form a government since he was defeated by Smallwood as party leader, blamed the Tory win squarely on Mr. Smallwood, whose last-minute entry into the campaign is said split the Liberal vote. The Liberals, under Roberts, remain the official opposition.

The new Moores government, which is handful of cabinet ministers detained in the Sept. 25 riots, faces a year-end task common to others in the region.

This was one of translating into provincial programs and projects the federal government's restraint program in the face of the most serious slump and unemployment problem in the country.

Government attempts in 1975 to stretch existing dollars and bring new ones into the region produced federal bookaches and plenty of headlines but few apparent successes.

Some of the industrial projects in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Newfoundland ran into trouble, bringing some problems at the heads of government, past and present, which helped set them up.

The Bricklin Canada Ltd. car plant in New Brunswick, which employed 700, appeared near death after a provincial Crown corporation, the Conservative government of Richard Hatfield and the federal government.

Creditors forced the operation into receivership and the assets were put up for sale after Mr. Hatfield and Ottawa announced that there would be no more government financial assistance unless a private interest could be found to share some of the load.

In Newfoundland, Mr. Moores and Premier Tom Peckford of that province announced that they would be no more government financial assistance unless a private interest could be found to share some of the load.

In Newfoundland, Mr. Moores announced that they would be no more government financial assistance unless a private interest could be found to share some of the load.

In Newfoundland, Mr. Moores announced that they would be no more government financial assistance unless a private interest could be found to share some of the load.

Newfoundland has $41 million invested in the province, secured by a second mortgage. The money comes from private sources. A British private investment agency holds a $10-million first mortgage.

Nova Scotia's Liberal government of Premier Gerald Regan is still wrestling with the problem of whether to rebuild the provincially-owned Sydney Steel Corp. (Sysco) plant or set up a new steel mill at Cebarus on Cape Breton Island.

Charges that some provinces borrow regarding Sysco were hollow, excessive and, wasteful continued to come from the opposition, which repeated its stands for full public disclosure of past and present decisions involving Sysco, as well as government intentions regarding its future.

Two of the four provinces in the region made major moves in complicated planning and administrative areas but with no immediate development reports from opponents.

The Nova Scotia government announced its back down before harsh criticism from local governments and others concerning a municipal reform program.

The program arose from a 1971 royal commission recommendation that the province assume greater taxing authority and use the new revenue to provide standard, province - wide health, education, housing, and welfare programs.

A legislative package was introduced in the spring to achieve some of these aims but Nova Scotia municipal leaders and others charged that the government was moving too quickly and demanded consultation and threatening to reduce local governments to advisory bodies with no political punch.

The climax came at the annual meeting of the Union of Nova Scotia Municipalities when Liberal Premier Gerald Regan said in an announced Jan. 1 deadline for passage of the legislation would be lifted and consultations could continue throughout the winter among municipal officials.

His announcement, one day after Municipal Affairs Minister Fraser Mooney spoke to the meeting and insisting on such a move, brought allegations the premier had undercut his minister.

In Prince Edward Island, Liberal Premier Alex Campbell signed a five-year federal-provincial agreement, the second phase of the 15-year PEI Development Plan.

Among the financial provisions, there is $67 million in the program for construction of a submarine power cable to link the Island with mainland energy supplies and help relieve its total reliance on oil-fired thermal power generating plants.

A policy shift was noted in the second phase of the development strategy, involving federal investment in a huge sewerage treatment construction by 1977 and to substitute existing programs from other federal departments rather than from regional economic expansion (DREE), federal signatory to the two phases.

As evidence of the change, it was noted that federal money is provided for only two years of the five-year program.

Two provincial byelections in PEI sent one Conservative and one Liberal to the legislature, representing seats previously held by the Liberals.

Hansard May Have 'Ms . . . ed'

TORONTO (CP) — Marion Boyden (NDP—Toronto-Beaches-Woodbine) said Tuesday she wants to be referred to as Ms in Hansard, not Mrs.

She told Speaker Russell Rowe that women member s are designated in Hansard, the official printed record of legislature proceedings, according to marital status.

"I am told by the editorial board (of Hansard) that it requires a ruling from the Speaker to permit me to be designated as Ms, if I so wish, she said.

Mr. Rowe said he has looked into the matter and there are certain problems that have delayed a ruling. He did not elaborate.

Margaret Birch, secretary for social development, said: "I would like to indicate there is no way that I would agree to being designated as Ms."

Recommends Increase

TORONTO (CP) — The governing council of the Ontario Medical Association (OMA) has recommended that the provincial government will co-ordinate their attacks on the mercury problem in the Wabigoon and English River systems in northwestern Ontario.

Education TV

TORONTO (CP) — Administrators of Queensway General Hospital say the hospital soon will become the first in Canada to offer closed-circuit educational television for patients.

Hilda Hawkins, community relations officer, said that after about a year of planning, the first of 300 television sets were being installed Tuesday by a rental firm.

Talks Stalled

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Frank Miller told the legislature Tuesday that he is waiting for clarification of the federal anti-inflation guidelines before continuing rate negotiations with doctors. On the question of doctors' fees, Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis says the government is treating the professional people "with care and generosity," compared to treatment of other workers.

Turns Down Request

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government again turned down an NDP request Tuesday that a special committee of the house be established to investigate the layoff of almost 1,000 workers at Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd. Floyd Laughren (NDP—Nickel Belt) said the company did not bargain in good faith during recent contract negotiations. Labor Minister Dr. Bette Stephenson said the company has complied with the Employment Standards Act.

May Lose Job

OTTAWA (CP) — Tom Cosliff (PC—Leeds) said Tuesday that the chief steward at Prime Minister Trudeau's official residence may have to give up his job because it has been designated as requiring a bilingual person.

Begins Vigil

OTTAWA (CP) — A month-long silent vigil began outside the Soviet Embassy on Tuesday for seven female members of Toronto's Ukrainian community. The women, dressed in grey prison smocks, said they are protesting the Soviet imprisonment of six Ukrainian women who are said to be serving terms of from four to eight years for their political beliefs. The Toronto group says it hopes the vigil will prompt the Canadian government to seek the prisoners' release.

Will Contribute

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government and Canadian manufacturers will join with a major European clothing retailer next fall in paying for a $1-million promotion of Canadian clothing. Jean Chrose, the trade department announced Tuesday. The government share will be $400,000. The department said it hopes the campaign will improve the export potential of the $ 2.3 billion Canadian clothing firms, located primarily in Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia. Clothing exports in 1974 totalled $130 million, up from $13 million in the mid-1960s.

Violi Headed Quebec Mafia at Convention

MONTREAL (CP) — Paolo Violi, described in earlier testimony as the new "Godfather" of Montreal's criminal family, headed a "Quebec delegation" to a Mafia leadership convention in New York City in late 1972, the Quebec police commission inquiry into organized crime was told Tuesday.

Two FBI investigators were brought to the stand Tuesday to portray what chief inquiry counsel Helene Paul described as the link between the "Violi-Cotroni" families here and the "Giuseppe (Joe) Bonnano" family of New York City.

Taking the stand moments after Violi was sentenced to a year in jail for refusing to testify at the inquiry, FBI special agent Shaun Rafferty told how a surveillance team picked up Violi's trail at Kennedy Airport and followed him to the meeting at the American Hotel.

Mr. Rafferty, who investigated the activities of organized crime in the New York area for more than five years, said the meeting was held to elect a successor to "a Bonnano family boss, Natale 'Joe Diamond' Evola, who died on Aug. 30, 1972."

The special agent testified those attending the meeting along with Violi included prominent members of the New York family such as Nick (The Gisse) Marangello and Joe Bastellato.

The agent said Violi, accompanied by Joe DiMarie, Raymond Dehjardins and Robert Theoret, attended the meeting and returned to Montreal Nov. 12, aboard an Air Canada flight.

Earlier, the 43-year-old Violi was ordered jailed for contempt after telling Judge Jean Dutil, inquiry chairman, that "I don't refuse to testify, but I have absolutely nothing to say to this court."

The stocky witness declared he wouldn't answer any questions because "this court doesn't provide me with any protection."

Responding to the charge by Violi's lawyer, Maurice Hebert, that his client should be exempted from testifying because the legality of the inquiry is being challenged before the Supreme Court of Canada, Judge Dutil said: "We feel the law establishing this commission is valid until it has been declared invalid."

The inquiry continues today.

CFIB Urges More Control

TORONTO (CP) — John Bullock, president of the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, said Tuesday the Ontario government should propose to restrict shopping at nights as well as on Sundays and holidays.

The provincial government should withdraw proposed legislation closing large retail stores on Sunday and holidays and instead should present proposals regulating night shopping also, he said in a news release.

Mr. Bullock said that at a private meeting with Premier Davis, the premier said the province may be broken into various zones to give flexibility in setting hours for store operations.

Proposals also should bring growth of new shopping malls and department stores under control, Mr. Bullock said.

Canadian Wine Industry Trys to Improve Its Image

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian wine industry has improved its products and now is trying to do the same for its reputation, says James Grievo.

The chairman of Chateau-Gai Wines Ltd. and Chateau Cartier Ltd., both subsidiaries of John Labatt Ltd. of London, Ont., says Canadian wines can match the taste and quality of most imported varieties.

"We still have the reputation that we're unable to compete with foreign wines but on a price-value basis we are often superior to imports," he said in an interview.

"We could compete much more effectively if people would give up the idea that imported brands are better. It just isn't so any more."

In an effort to gain greater acceptance of Canadian wines, he said Chateau Cartier and Chateau-Gai set up "premium" wine standards last March. The Ontario Wine Council, representing 13 wineries, is expected to announce standards for the provincial industry early next year.

Mr. Grieve said the standards assure that varietal wines—those named after the variety of grapes from which they were made—meet stringent production, labelling and marketing requirements.

Another part of the program was to encourage domestic wineries to shift from using North American labrusca grapes to European vinifera grapes, considered superior for table wines.

However, Mr. Grieve said the change to vinifera varieties is a slow process because it takes about five years from the time a vineyard is planted until the grapes can be used.

Another snag that a decade of growth, sales of Canadian wines declined during the year ended March, 1974, while foreign wines sales continued to increase. Imported wines controlled 29 per cent of the Canadian market in 1974 compared with 25 per cent in 1970.

Mr. Grieve said entering domestic wines in international competitions is one way the industry can prove to the public that Canadian wines are better than their reputation.

Shell Will Justify Oil Price Increase

HALIFAX (CP) — William Daniel, president of Shell Canada Ltd., said Tuesday his company is prepared to justify product price increases before a federal price control board if the board is responsive to the capital requirements of the industry.

"The Canadian energy picture is bleak and I think controls would make it even worse," Mr. Daniel said in an interview. "We would, however, go along with them if they did not further impair our ability to recover our costs."

He said that one of the "most critical" unresolved issues in the industry is the breakdown in shared revenue between the industry and the federal government.

"All too often people assume that a price increase means we're getting more money, in fact all the extra money," he said. "But the fact is, we get only a very small part of it while the rest is consumed in government taxes and other costs of that sort."

Mr. Daniel said the industry's position on provincial price controls is that they have slowed "vital exploration."

"Actually, exploration has declined for a variety of reasons, principally, because revenue sharing has sent many drilling rigs out of the country and the effects of inflation have made our costs astronomical."

Commons Turns Attention To Housing Legislation

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons will turn its attention to housing today after an expected third-reading vote on legislation to put the anti-inflation program into full operation.

The opposition parties Tuesday hammered at the anti-inflation program and repeated their promises to vote against it. But the government holds 140 seats in the 264-seat Commons and is expected to easily carry the vote.

After that, it needs only Senate approval and royal assent to become law.

Coming before the Commons after the anti-inflation bill is legislation to implement housing measures announced Nov. 3. It will broaden the Assisted Home Ownership Plan (AHOP) to lower interest rates and increase payments to builders of subsidized rental units, among other changes.

Claude Wagner (PC—St. Hyacinthe) predicted he selected wage and price controls imposed Oct. 14 will be "a very bare skeleton" and failure."

He agreed that the restraints program is "in line with broad public opinion at this time." But he said the government already has discredited itself as far as bringing in controls.

The Liberal party opposed controls during the 1974 election, when the Conservatives were advocating a 90-day price freeze followed by 18 months of reducing controls. Now the government members have made "a total about-turn."

He said the program should be shortened to 18 months. A Conservative amendment to reduce it already has been defeated.

New Democratic Party members attacked the anti-inflation board, claiming it violated the federal program with a ruling Friday that affects Metropolitan Toronto high school teachers.

The board ruled a 28.5-per-cent pay increase offered the teachers by the Toronto board of education was excessive. It advised they resume bargaining.

Toronto elementary school teachers accepted a 28.5-per-cent raise earlier in the year and David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) said the ruling destroys a 11-year history of parity in settlements given the elementary and high school teachers.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said during the Commons question period that he did not intend to comment on every board ruling.

Mr. Orlikow also pointed to reports that show large profit increases for the 19 chartered banks during the three months ended Oct. 31. Industry profits rose about 87.5 per cent in the latest quarter from a year earlier.

"Does the minister (of finance) expect when it's so obvious there is no equity in this program that workers will accept it?", he asked. Wage rises would be held to a basic 10 per cent increase by the anti-inflation program.

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent said the bill does "absolutely nothing" to control the "excessive profit levels" of the chartered banks.

Psychiatrists Outline Bizarre Fantasy World of Robert Poulin

OTTAWA (CP) — The bizarre inner world of fantasy that Robert Poulin turned into a horror of rape, murder and suicide unfolded before his parents, teachers, friends and classmates during a three-day inquest this week.

The five-member jury presided over by Dr. H. B. Cossam, Ontario's chief coroner, was expected to announce its verdict today following the close of testimony Wednesday.

Recommendations were expected to include gun controls, the availability of sex-oriented literature, psychiatric tests for young people applying to enter the militia and on school monitoring of student attendance.

"Here I am! I'm well-known now!" was the kind of plea Poulin was screaming in his mind Oct. 27 when he kicked open the door of Classroom 71 of St. Pius X high school and pumped pellets from a sawed-off shotgun at his 29 classmates.

That was how Dr. J. D. Atcheson, a senior psychiatrist at Toronto's Clarke Institute of Psychiatry, described 18-year-old Poulin. He was one of about 40 witnesses at the inquest into Poulin's death and that of Kim Ribbel, 17, whose name was underlined in a page of Poulin's neatly-typed diary.

The body of Miss Ribbel, whose mother said must have gone to Poulin's home that day to avoid "hurting his feelings," was found still handcuffed to the ends of his bed where she had been sexually assaulted, stabbed 11 times, drenched in gasoline and set afire.

Poulin's academic pursuits, plans to make a military career, his excellent record at jobs delivering newspapers and pizza and his conformity to a religious system "contrary to disguise his inner loneliness," Dr. Atcheson said in his report.

"Again and again Robert gave evidence of his struggle against complete withdrawal into increasingly intense bizarre sexual fantasies," Dr. Atcheson said.

The young man's indexed ratings of articles in magazines such as Playboy and his diary, containing plots to rape girls, rob strangers, murder his parents, burn down his home and commit suicide, was "Poulin's attempt to bring his chaotic thought process into order."

The doctor said Poulin no longer appreciated the full implications of such behaviours and the reality and worth of his victims. After the "sadistic, destructive" side of his personality finally turned the planet, cheerful side that many witnesses, including his parents, say they saw.

Dr. Atcheson said his diagnosis of Poulin's personality as "schizoid type with sadistic and perverse features," does not imply that his family or friends could have recognized the problems.

Testimony indicated that Miss Rabot accepted Poulin's invitation to his home Monday morning, Oct. 27, and even if she had the chance to scream, Poulin's mother upstairs in the kitchen would not have heard a sound from his cement-walled basement bedroom crammed with sexual literature and boxes of war games.

Tired in Toyland

Ken Cook, special events co-ordinator for the Students' Association of Loyalist College (SALC), catches some well-earned shuteye late Wednesday while surrounded by almost 2,700 pounds worth of toys donated to SALC's annual three-day repairable toy drive. The toys, the largest haul by SALC ever, will be turned over to the Belleville Firefighters' Association for distribution to Belleville area needy families at Christmas.

Indonesians Kill Hostage, as Others Storm Consulate

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Indonesian holding a Dutch train shot another one of their hostages today as six of their countrymen stormed the Indonesian consulate building in Amsterdam, officials said.

Authorities said the shooting in the hijacked train near Bedum, in northern Holland, occurred during a lull in negotiations with a mediator selected by the gunmen.

They said the mediator, a South Moluccan resident of the Netherlands, had just left the train when a man was pushed to the door and was shot. He fell to the track and was believed dead.

The Indonesians then called the mediator on a field telephone, apparently to try to get the negotiations going again. Dutch officials said. The hijackers killed the train engineer and another man when they seized the train Tuesday and threatened to shoot their hostages one by one today unless their demands were met.

The Indonesians aboard the train and those who seized the consulate in downtown Amsterdam were South Moluccan separatists, who seek independence for the South Moluccan islands in the Indonesian archipelago.

Police said members of the consulate staff fled from the building as the gunmen shot their way inside. It was not immediately known whether all personnel escaped.

Witnesses at a nearby hotel said three men escaped from the second floor of the building by climbing down a rope. One of the men was reported wounded when the gunmen opened fire.

Armed police sealed off the area around the consulate building.

The gunmen stormed the building at 12:40 p.m. (6:40 a.m. EST) and took control of the consulate, police said.

The young Indonesians aboard the train demanded a bus to take them and an unspecified number of hostages to Amsterdam's Schiphol Airport and a plane to the Persian Gulf sheikdom of Dubai, a undisclosed destination.

Air Raids Prompt PLO Appearance Before UN

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization apparently is going to appear before the UN Security Council a month early because of the big Israeli air raids on Palestinian camps in Lebanon this week.

The council scheduled a meeting today to take up a Lebanese charge of aggression against Israel because of the attacks Tuesday in which the Lebanese police said about 100 persons were killed and more than 150 wounded.

The PLO was scheduled to join in council debate on the Arab-Israeli conflict for the first time on Jan. 13. But Egypt, in seconding Lebanon's request for debate on the Israeli raid, proposed that the guerrilla command participate now.

Diplomats said it appeared certain the Palestinians would appear before the council but the meeting was postponed Wednesday night by a dispute over the procedure for the invitation.

A PLO spokesman at UN headquarters said his organization would not accept an invitation issued under Rule 39, which provides for inviting persons with information of interest to the council. He said the PLO would recognized as a full party to the Middle East question a ruling granted it last year by the General Assembly.

Quinte Area Postmasters Say They Need Salary Increase

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Belleville, Trenton and Brighton postmasters feel because their staffs have received pay increases, their own salaries should also be reviewed and increased.

Although postmasters may not be members of a union, the Canadian Public Service Alliance does act as "a bargaining agent" for postmasters. The alliance contract will expire Dec. 31 and local spokesmen believe negotiations are proceeding which could mean pay increases for postmasters.

Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said Wednesday he hopes to settle the wage problems of some postmasters whose salaries now are lower than those postal workers they supervise.

The three local postmasters said they do not fit into this category of earning less than their staffs.

Area Postmaster Roy Walwright said today he believe our salaries should be reviewed. If everyone else gets a salary increase, there's no reason why postmasters shouldn't get a salary increase."

Trenton Postmaster Bell Dafoe said money is always a problem and that everybody "could always use more money." He said he was hopeful the public service alliance will gain some increase for post office management.

Wilf Pound, postmaster in Brighton, said he earns moderately more than what some of his staff will make following the contract settlement.

"I would think our department will look after this matter" he said.

Asked if he felt a review of postmasters' salaries is likely, he said "it should be automatic. It always has been in the past."

Postmaster-General Mackasey said postmasters' staff are not permitted to bargain for salaries. "There is an historic relationship between the wages of employees and supervising officers. I hope this matter will be settled shortly."

According to the Area Postmaster Wainwright, postmasters earn in a range of $15,000 to $15,000 a year "just slightly more than will be earned by staff."

Because of seniority, most inside workers are earning the union's top rate which will give them an annual salary of approximately $13,000 calculated on a 40-hour week week at $6.25 an hour.

News Briefs

UIC Payments Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — The Unemployment Insurance Commission paid out a total of $2.464 billion in unemployment benefits during the first nine months of the year, up 47 per cent from $1.672 billion paid over the same period last year, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

Davis Wins $1,000

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Davis, who won $1,000 in a lottery operated by the Ontario Association for the Mentally Retarded, says he will give a $1,000 cheque to the Brampton-Caledon Association for the Retarded in his riding of Brampton.

Coffee Price May Rise

TORONTO (CP) Most restaurants still charge 25 cents a cup for coffee despite warnings that the 30-cent cup would become standard after a July frost in Brazil damaged that country's coffee crop, a spokesman for the Canadian Restaurant Association said Wednesday.

Explosion Levels Homes

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — An early-morning explosion levelled a house and damaged a number of neighboring buildings today in nearby Millbrook, fire officials said. Occupants of the house were not home at the time and no injuries were reported in the blast, which apparently was caused by propane gas. The explosion occurred on Distillery Road, the community's main street. Firemen said a house next door was extensively damaged as was the community arena.

Strike Threat Eases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The threat of a country-wide rail strike in the United States eased today as bargainers for four shopcraft unions agreed to keep talking as long as progress was made at the negotiating table. The unions agreed to let their 6 a.m. strike deadline pass today while federal mediators worked through a second night trying to resolve three remaining contract disputes.

Wants Normal Relations

PEKING (AP) — President Ford said tonight that the United States remains committed "to complete the normalization of relations" with China. China's acting premier, avoiding any reference in the tangly subject of U.S.-Soviet detente that he had attacked Monday, replied that contacts between Ford and the Chinese leaders have helped "to increase mutual understanding."

Loyalist Toy Drive Sets Record Donations

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

The Students' Association of Loyalist College (SALC) enjoyed its most successful annual three-day toy drive on record, totalling 2,700 pounds of donated toys when the campaign closed at 6 p.m. Wednesday, says Ken Cook, SALC special events co-ordinator.

The drive was to collect repairable toys for the Belleville Firefighters' Association which will distribute them near Christmas to needy families in the Belleville area.

Mr. Cook said Wednesday was a flurry of activity as student volunteers using two Loyalist vans and their own vehicles collected almost 1,500 pounds of donated toys.

In addition, SALC's Santa Claus has a busy schedule fulfilling almost 40 appointments to pick up toys at home of parents with young children, he said.

The pre-Christmas visits by St. Nicholas were a popular innovation to create further interest in this year's drive and will probably be repeated next year, he indicated.

Pepin Urges Rough Justice

TORONTO (CP) — Jean-Luc Pepin said Wednesday that the anti-inflation review board will "use as sternness of rough justice" in the fight against inflation.

Mr. Pepin, chairman of the recently-formed board, told about 425 businessmen at a conference sponsored by the Financial Post that he does not think such an approach can be avoided.

"As a nation, we are schizophrenic and ambivalent about inflation," the former federal cabinet minister said. "We want the board to be tough on others—but soft on us.

"That just isn't good enough. Everyone has a bit of suffering to do."

However, he said he expects that the anti-inflation legislation before the Commons will be subject to "fairly early amendment when needed."

Hees Only PC to Back Liberal Guidelines

BY HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

George Hees, MP Prince Edward-Hastings, was the only Liberals on Wednesday as the government's legislation to put its anti-inflation program into operation passed the Commons by a close vote of 111 to 96.

Mr. Hees was the only Progressive Conservative to speak in favor of the bill during third-reading debate.

In a recent speech in Sidney Township to Quinte area Conservatives, Mr. Hees called for support of the government's program. He added it is not perfect but the only anti-inflation scheme presented. Therefore Canadians should get behind it in their own best interest.

Conservatives, New Democrats and Social Credit MPs opposed the legislation.

The bill now goes to the Senate for approval after which it receives formal royal consent.

Museum to Stage Yuletide Potpourri for Residents

BY AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

Glanmore House will give its third annual Christmas present to the people of Hastings County next week-a combination of buggy rides, music, theatre and pageantry.

Al Zabas

The potpourri, staged in a museum decorated with Victorian Yuletide trimmings, is aimed at capturing the feeling of Christmas as it existed prior to the turn of this century.

Museum curator Marion Lewis said Wednesday the scheduled events are closely based on exactly the traditional Victorian Christmas celebrations.

And all are planned for the time of day when people are able to attend.

Christmas activities will begin and end with free buggy rides for children in front of the museum. This Sunday between 2 and 4 p.m. and Monday, Dec. 13, Deeb, a mare owned by Nancy Allis of Consecon, will pull a buggy on loan to Glanmore from the Amelsberg Museum.

The Eastern Ontario String Quartet will appear Monday at 7 p.m. and Tuesday, the Tabernacle United Church Junior Choir will be carrolling from 7:30 p.m., when all other weekday events begin.

Wednesday several puppet shows will be held between Thursday, by Christmas selections performed by the Belleville Theatre Guild.

Music boxes, from a collection owned by city resident Frank Foley, will be on display in the museum drawing room Friday.

This Sunday, following the buggy rides, a sip of egg nog can be had (4 to 6 p.m.) at a party co-ordinated by the Hastings County Historical Society.

The Weather

Synopsis: Snow moving rapidly eastwards, will be out of the province by midday, although some flurry activity will persist near the shores of the Great Lakes. Trend towards milder temperatures expected, accompanied by mostly cloudy skies by day with some fog developing at night.

Growing Demand

Clipping started Wednesday at Guy's and Cali's operated by hairdresser Carmen Guerrera to meet growing demands by men for hair styling, coloring, curling and permanents. Hairdressers Bob Pursey and Jane Hoekstra served first customers.

Show Goes on Despite Illness to Key Actor

In true theatrical tradition, the show went on at the Pinnacle Playhouse Wednesday night, although one of the leading players was ill and had to be replaced.

An ear infection kept Steve Bone from playing his role of Alfred, one of the convicts in the comedy My Three Angels. With one rehearsal behind him, Bill Culp went on stage in Steve's role.

Although he performed with script in hand, Mr. Culp took on the role so completely that the audience soon forgot it was a last-minute change.

Mr. Culp, a former theatre arts teacher and now a director and playwright, will continue in the role until Mr. Bone recovers so that the play will run as planned until Saturday, December 6.

Doreen Ilchter of the Belleville Theatre Guild, said Wednesday night was only the second time in 11 years that such a crisis has happened at the theatre. She said the guild's is most grateful to Mr. Culp for his expert assistance.

Stylist Opens Second Salon for Guys & Gals

Belleville hairdresser Carmen Guerrera has decided to meet demand by providing a hairdressing salon for men and women.

Owner of Carmen's Beauty Salon, 200 Front St., he officially opened his new shop Wednesday.

Called Guys and Gals, it's on Bridge St. between Front and Pinnacle Streets.

Mr. Guerrera, who has been a hairdresser in Belleville for about 10 years, said he opened the new store because of the large number of men coming into the beauty salon to get their hair styled.

He said he couldn't accommodate them at his Front Street beauty salon as it is established as a women's place and some female customers wouldn't like a lot of men coming in.

Men are spending increasing amounts of money on their hair, said Mr. Guerrera, and in the long run it's cheaper for a man to have his hair properly styled once every five or six weeks rather than visiting a barber once every two weeks.

Chamber Elects New Executive

Belleville Chamber of Commerce board of directors met Wednesday to elect excutives for 1976.

Keith Allison, of Shoptite Stores, replaces George Thompson of Bell Canada as president. First vice-president is Harold Edey. Second vice-president is Fred Smith with Larry Soden as treasurer.

Directors decided to meet in early January to prepare a presentation for submission to the city dealing with the proposed minimum standards bylaw.

Trenton PUC May Expropriate Required Lot

TRENTON — The Trenton Public Utilities Commission may expropriate a piece of land that has halted all development near the town's western limit, a commission spokesman said Wednesday.

James McDonald, PUC chairman, has instructed the utilities manager to see if the commission can legally expropriate the land without the direct approval of the town council, which has already vetoed to start proceedings to obtain the land.

The 80 by 120-foot of land, needed for a proposed electrical substation, is owned by a developer whose project is one of five sub-divisions currently being delayed. For more than three years the developer and the PUC have been in negotiations involving the land. No progress has been made.

Last month, Doug Manlow, commission manager said town council had been approached, but had refused to become involved in the controversy. An expropriation request was rejected, Mr. Manlow said.

Town council was approached because PUC lawyers had advised the commission that the expropriation proceedings would be stronger if presented to the courts as a joint action.

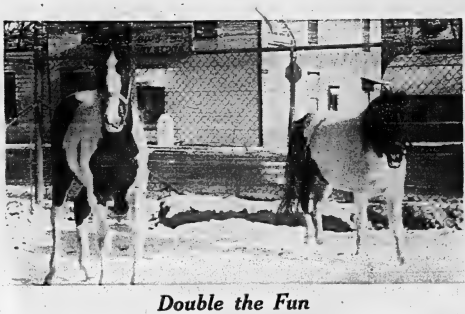
The PUC contends it needs the particular site on north side of Dundas St. West, for a substation and that placing it elsewhere would be too expensive.

"We are exploring the possibility of pursuing the expropriation ourselves because it is time the matter was settled and development resumed," said Mr. MacDonald.

According to the bylaw governing the PUC it is legal for the commission to proceed with expropriation / said Mr. Manlow.

"The issue is not whether it is legal, but rather it is a question of whether our lawyer feels the case is strong enough to take to court and if the commission members decide to follow it through," said Mr. Manlow.

In addition to five subdivisions being delayed, the PUC was informed that two highrises and a shopping plaza are also being held up until the sub-station is built and adequate facilities can be guaranteed to the area.



Double the Fun

Horse play in the first snowfall of December is twice as much fun when there are two colts to share in the games. Maggie Mugrian, a Pinto pony Wednesday enjoyed a snow frolick in Picton with her stablemate Sundown, a Paint filly who, at six months of age, was romping in the white stuff for the first time.

Craft Shop Opens

Old Stone House to Sell Area Works

PICTON — The "Old Stone House", a craft shop operated by Ruth Denton, will open Dec. 11 at Warbs's Corners west of Picton.

Mrs. Denton said Wednesday her shop will include pieces of Canadian pine, wrought-iron work, ceramics, pottery, cards and candles.

The gift shop is located in the stone farm house where Mrs. Denton resides. It will remain open the year around.

Store hours are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, except Tuesdays and Wednesdays, when the boutique is closed.

She noted Wednesday that she hopes to sell one-of-a-kind pieces of pottery and ceramics, and other unusual gifts.

In addition to the stock that she will obtain for sale, she is seeking consignment merchandise from area craftsmen and hobbyists.

She said that she hopes to organize workshops at the Old Stone House to permit the public to watch local craftsmen at work.

"Anything handmade is very important," she stressed, referring to her stock.

As her shop becomes established Mrs. Denton expects to introduce leather goods and macrame work in addition to quilts.

The Old Stone House is located on a grant of land that is 150 years old.

Mrs. Denton said the farm house itself probably was built about 125 years ago with stone drawn from Point Anne.

Chamber Will Buy Booklets

PICTON — The Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce has agreed to purchase 700 booklets on county historical sites when they are re-printed by the Prince Edward Historical Society.

First published in 1966, the 33-page booklets indicate the location of local landmarks and contain maps of the county.

The Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce took part in the original publication of the booklets. Recently, a representative of the historical society met with chamber members to discuss re-prints.

A member of the historical society Ray Shortt, said that 3,000 copies of the booklet will be printed and will sell for $1.

PICTON — Orientation sessions start this month for "friends of the Museum", a group of volunteers affiliated with the Prince Edward County museum here.

Curator James Cooding said this week he will lecture during a series of orientation sessions covering various phases of museum collections.

About 41 persons have purchased memberships in the museum organization at $1 per year which allows them to participate in the Friends of the Museum program.

After instruction from Mr. Gooding, the volunteers will be prepared to serve as tour guides.

The sales desk is expected to become their responsibility also.

Mr. Gooding said the first orientation session will be held Monday, Dec. 8 at the Prince Edward County Museum.

Vandals Damage Two Homes

TWEED — Unknown vandals wrought $3,000 worth of damage at two new bungalows on St. Joseph's St. here sometime late Tuesday or early Wednesday.

Tweed Police Chief Barry Wallace said Wednesday the buildings, owned by Percy Shearer of Toronto, are vacant.

He said all screens were removed and smashed, all doors broken, and the water turned on. There was almost a foot of water in the basement of one house when police were notified Wednesday, he added.

He said entry was gained by breaking a window at one bungalow and forcing a door at the other.

As Might Be Expected Ottawa's 'Attack on Inflation' Contains Loopholes

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA — The government frets that not everybody everywhere is taking its "Attack on Inflation" seriously.

That is the formal name of the government game — it is right there on the cover of the White Paper under the wraps and price guidelines — "Attack on Inflation."

And a lot of people seem to feel that the feds don't really mean it, that the fat cats in Fat City have not got theirheart in it.

So these increasing numbers of Pudding Tayseying Thomases are arguing for exemption or except on grounds of special circumstances.

And guess who's showing them how?

The very people who drew up the guidelines.

The federal Treasury Board.

Last mid-October when Treasury Board President Jean Chretien tabled the federal White Paper, "Attack on Inflation," in the House of Commons, it was right there, in black and white before your very eyes that government directives would be issued . . .

. . . prohibiting normal replacement of airline fleets, the use of first class air travel, and suspending normal schedules for replacement of departmental automobiles.

Clear, simple?

Yeah, maybe, except for use of that tricky word "normal."

So what is "normal" in the cost of government air travel?

Well, last year, the bill totalled $29.2 million for 178,429 individual trips.

And how is it adding up so far this year?

For the first three months of the federal financial year the bottom line reads $18.8 million for 99,518 trips.

That is for the first quarter of the year, April, May and June, so to project it for the full 12 months it comes out to $43.9 million for 238,072 trips.

That is $13.8 million and 67,654 trips more.

Some saving so far.

But to be fair, it is only a projection of the first quarter over the full year and the "Attack on Inflation" could cut the projected increase.

Except that the government doesn't know how much was spent on first class air travel.

Not to nit-pick that Treasury Board sent a letter to all departmental deputy ministers telling them that "any use of first class air travel is to be avoided."

Treasury Board itself admits it doesn't know how much it spent on first class fares, and neither, it confesses, does any other department because it nobody ever asked before.

Making the constraints of "avoidance" even more woolly is, that on second thought, Treasury Board has decided the ban on first class air travel — if anyone knew how much it cost — is not absolute.

For Deputy Treasury Board Secretary Bruce MacDonald, in writing to all his fellow deputies, has consoled them that "exceptions of this nature which are important to the ongoing effectiveness of programs are to be excluded."

What a loophole.

For heaven's there a deputy with soul so dead who never to himself said — and coupled "Treasury Board for every task" sick, and more — that his program is important?

If it is unimportant it is a waste.

Now what about "prohibiting normal replacement of fleets and airs" in the tropical gardens the feds call offices?

A little "sort" there, too.

"Normal" is a beautiful word. The "Attack on Inflation" here is being taken to mean that where a department moved to new groves of greenery — and they move all the time — and doesn't want to take its "old style" wood or steel furniture, it doesn't have to. It can change to new modular design. But if it already has the mod stuff, it's stuck with it. And this is multi-million-dollar ticket item.

"Suspension," as the directive reads," of normal replacement of departmental automobiles!"

Same deal. The old "normal" gimmick.

Replacement, as has been the custom, after 60,000 or 80,000 miles, barring major crackups.

Well, that's how the cats who skim the cream in Fat City are mounting the "Attack on Inflation."

Uniform Hours Issue

Independent retailing — can it survive in Ontario?

In the current controversy over whether the Government should impose uniform store hours, an official of independent business sees wide open store hours as placing an intolerable strain on the independent retailer.

According to James R. Conrad, director of policy and research for the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, it would mean working up to 80 hours a week for independent retailers, with little or no family life. And this while the public at large and the trends of the day are leaning more and more to a shorter work-week. Mr. Conrad has a strong argument too in suggesting that any further decline in small independent business would lead to "increased concentrations of economic, political, and social power," with a commensurate decline in the quality of life and even the stability of rural life.

There might be a case for saying independents enjoy the challenge, along with the long hours. It's their life, but it's one thing to give them free rein in competition with all and sundry, and another to create a serious imbalance in the retail trading picture which could favor only the big companies and chains.

Many do work such hours, or have employees to work shifts, but should they be obliged to do so to stay in business let along make a living? Mr. Conrad thinks not, and many would agree.

The independent busniffs official has communicated his views to the select committee of the legislature, and it will be interesting to see what transpires. His submissions should carry some weight in whatever final decision is reached.

Health 'Marketing'

Columnist Vincent Egan has made reference of late to the initiatives of what he calls our "social engineers."

He is referring in a general way to the bureaucracy and the often stunning hand of government in our affairs.

Meanwhile, Belleville General Hospital executive director Phillip Rickard has raised a similar term but one which might have more precise significance in one vital area — the health of society.

Mr. Rickard suggests that "social marketing," or what he describes as greater expertise in marketing ideas, in this sphere, could benefit the country generally.

It is fairly clear to most Canadians that faulty nutrition and alcoholism are having a distinctly adverse effect on their health. But they tend to adopt a head-in-the-sand attitude when it comes to reforming their lifestyle.

The hospital executive, however, puts put his finger on the problem and articulated it for us all.

His message, in short, is that in addition to the wearing of seatbelts, as a means of saving lives, improved nutrition and less alcohol intake could also save lives and health dollars. Moreover, getting the message across to the public must be one of the concerns of health officials.

School's Job Project

Oliver Wilson is a 10-year-old black youngster in Chicago. He and his classmates slowdown. A project recently which was in the spirit of Christmas. And with a difference.

It had to do with work, not for themselves but for their older fathers and brothers and sisters out of work or laid off because of economic slowdown. So they wrote letters accordingly to plants in the city.

An executive of an optical plant was so impressed by the youngster's touching letter that he found work for a 19-year-old black, as requested. It was a letter which had shown understanding and perception of the older people's problems finding jobs which was beyond the writer's years.

Indeed, the class initiative at last report had resulted in 50 jobs being found for people in the school neighborhood.

Unemployment's Toll

Low Income and 'Mobile Homes'

Brassford Expositor

The so-called mobile home may be coming into its own as the only type of housing within the reach of many people with lower earnings.

Factory housing in all major urban centres in Canada is at present in short supply, and due to remain scarce. The scarcity may even be worsened, as some provinces, like Ontario, decides to implement rent controls.

In the Kitchener area, at least two major subdivisions are in the planning stages of planning, and Kitchener city council's planning committee wants to discuss legislative requirements for mobile developments with local builders.

Most of these mobile homes, of course, are a far cry from the original concept of a house-trailer, which was intended to be towed behind a car to carry some convenience with them on vacation trips.

The subdivision-type homes are pulled from the factory to a permanent foundation, connected to such municipal services as sanitary sewers, watermains, hydro lines, and natural gas supplies, where these are available. After this initial move, their mobility is likely to end, as many owners install small porches around the homes, and even plant ivy to grow on the walls.

Near Sarnie, north of Toronto, 1,000-square-foot mobile homes sell for about $17,000, with deluxe three-bedroom models complete with fireplaces, now for up to $28,000. In addition, the owners pay less than $100 a month for the land, plus the varying amounts for maintaining roads, streets, sewers and grounds for common use.

Admittedly, land costs there are probably much lower than in Kitchener or Brantford, but even with land considered, some savings on conventional construction seem likely. The Barrie subdivision is for retired persons only, so there is no need for additional school costs.

There may well be numerous applications for such mobile home developments in or near Belleville, perhaps not in the time when housing is direly needed by many, and economic considerations demand a reduction in housing costs, but sometime another box of stock is placed on the shelf, regardless of when that box will be obtained.

Just as an example of my own experience. On Saturday, Nov. 22, just four days before there was $1.58 lb. I have a can so marked with a paper sticker. A layer of cans under these were also given a sticker.

Today, I looked, just for my own interest, to see what price was marked $2.27.

Now I am sure, is that what is the usual practice on all merchandise?

Another instance today, I wanted to purchase a bottle of ever, that the food would spread out its effects, it only to maximize its own profits.

—The Group of Ten (the largest developed countries) agree neither to set a floor price for gold nor to increase their total stock of gold for two years following implementation of the agreement.

Taken together, these terms are regarded as a victory for the U.S. in maintaining its economic leadership and preserving the status of the dollar as a major reserve asset and ceiling commodity.

France, as usual, sees things in a different light.

Its finance minister contends that gold must be the primary reserve asset. He has said that the Agreement on Gold will give central banks more freedom to buy gold.

The French and the Americans are at odds on the issue of a return to an international system of fixed exchange rates as well.

France wants to go back to fixed rates—no doubt because that would permit the maintenance of a relatively undervalued franc.

It's also expected that France, and some other European countries, will set an unofficial floor price at which their central banks will buy gold offered to them.

Such positions have more to do with short-term politics—the politics of the dollar and the franc—than with the long-term role of gold in world commerce.

In the latter sense, gold has been diminished by the IMF agreement and, in fact, there are other factors working in support of the dollar—such as the inherent tendency of the member-countries of the OPEC, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, to peg oil with the surplus money they receive from their oil sales to currencies around the world.

The gold forces may be on top at the moment, but it would be rash to dismiss gold as a barbaric relic of the past just yet.

Bible Digest

by H. B. DEAN

". . . Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples. And he said unto them, When ye pray, say, Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth. Give us day by day our daily bread. And forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." Luke 11: 1-4.

It should be clear to the church by now that a great deal of paper work and planned program should give way to a down to earth, in earnest prayer life.

Mark-ups on Food Items

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

We are all very much aware of the unending increase in prices for practically all commodities. We need to record price increases as we did not during World War 11 — to keep ourselves in check when what are not holding the line but deliberately raising prices at the time another box of stock is placed on the shelf, regardless of when that box will be obtained.

Just as an example of my own experience. On Saturday, Nov. 22, just four days before there was $1.58 lb. I have a can so marked with a paper sticker. A layer of cans under these were also given a sticker.

Today, I looked, just for my own interest, to see what price was marked $2.27.

Now I am sure, is that what is the usual practice on all merchandise?

Another instance today, I wanted to purchase a bottle of 'Realemon' juice. There were two bottles, with green labels, one bottle was a slightly older stock and had been priced with the usual sticker of the store. These stickers had been pulled back, and removed but still clinging to the cap, but not removed, there was still, with a yellow label, were all priced at 49 cents. It was to be about 53 cents for the formerly priced stock, which is the price you should someone would be paying the increased price for a 60 cent item.

In seven days the coffee had been "upped" by 20 per cent. If that isn't spiraling inflation — as the saying firms — I don't know what is.

I am forwarding a copy of this letter to the Anti-Inflation Review Board to acquaint them of this instance and I hope something can be done to stop this flagrant attempt to ignore the voluntary guidelines by the big super-market chain stores.

Newfoundland Premier to Study Norway's Success Story

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

A European economic study of labor developments in the industrialized nations has come up with the frightening figure of 17.5 million people now unemployed in Western Europe, the United States, Canada and Japan.

It's a depression-oriented rather than recession-size figure. And the survey holds out little hope for a better unemployment picture in Western Europe, since a large part of its figure represents the millions of migrant workers who left Spain, Portugal, Italy, Turkey and Greece during the boom years of the European Common Market.

As for Canada, our unemployment, again judging the eight per cent mark, reflects our poor economic performance this year which in terms of growth, hardly moves at all.

And with winter again holding this country in its annual grip, we are reminded, as we are every year, of the high number of unemployed, unemployable and disadvantaged Canadians in a country we consider to be egalitarian and fair.

The fact is Canada is not egalitarian, in spite of the rosy statements of politicians in legislatures, insured high school principals at graduation exercises, bland remarks by big businessmen comparing ourselves with other even more hard-pressed nations.

Small wonder the prime minister withdrew the expression "that fabric" from the Canadian political largon, before it had become fixed in the fabric. It's we — famous expression "what's a million?" entrenched in our thinking, admittedly while Mr. Trudeau did use the expression with verve and over and again, C.D. Howe never did refer to his departmental outlays by saying, "what's a million?"

Hardest hit of all again is Newfoundland (in the grip of an even deeper recession than the rest of the nation).

Its rate has been lifted to a record 10 per cent, largest in the country. Its rate of unemployment is ready to seep over the record-high 20 per cent before this winter is done.

Much of the Smallwood dream of Newfoundland lifting itself up on other people's bootstraps, or, was it their cash and promises? has faded in the ongoing shuffle.

And the high-flying outside entrepreneurs who built pulp mills, oil refineries, power developments and great deal again, are disenchanted with Newfoundland these days.

The social inequalities of the island province where a small clique of entrenched Newfoundlanders stand out from the rest, suggest the colonial society rather than a late 20th century province.

So, Tory Premier Frank Moores will do what other Canadians, mainly of the socialist persuasion have done, he himself off to Scandinavia to look at their models of genuine egalitarianism, especially the Norwegian one.

This is indeed so impressive, as I have polsied out recently in this column, that it is a shame Newfoundland could not borrow from it virtually lock, stock and barrel.

Norway is the most self-sufficient and thriving national society in Europe. The land is as rugged and as sparsely-populated as Newfoundland. And like it, the Norwegians rely mightily on the sea for their food and survival. But unlike Newfoundland, there have been no outside entrepreneurs who worked their wonders and have milked the land of millions.

Norwegians pay a good deal in tax for their workable egalitarianism. But it functions magnificently and where land is concerned the nation has almost full employment. Mr. Moores deserves strong support.

U.S. and France at Odds Over Gold and Dollars

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The drop in the gold-bullion price during the past four weeks confirms the old rule that every action produces a reaction.

Gold has come under selling pressure largely in response to developments that are generally considered favorable—a modest recovery in the U.S. economy, New York city's escape from the threat of bankruptcy, and the consequent strengthening of the U.S. dollar.

From a high of about $183 (U.S.), the world market price is off an ounce of gold fell to a low of $138.75 (U.S.). It recovered to about $146 in early November before sliding back to $138.15 at the beginning of this month.

Apart from the more immediate impact of the improvement in U.S. financial conditions, the gold market has been shaken by the International Monetary Fund's new Agreement on Gold reached at its annual meeting three months ago but still to be implemented at some undetermined date in the future.

The key points of the IMF Agreement on Gold are these:

—Central banks will be allowed to value their gold reserves at free-market prices, rather than at the old fixed price of about $42.22 per ounce.

They would be permitted to sell one-sixth of its own gold reserves, or 50-million ounces, at free-market prices, and will return another one-sixth, equal to its member-countries in proportion to their original subscriptions.

The possibility that the IMF may rule the gold market is no doubt helping to depress the price. The agreement, in fact, seems much more likely, however, that the fund would spread out its effects, if only to maximize its own profits.

—The Group of Ten (the largest developed countries) agree neither to set a floor price for gold nor to increase their total stock of gold for two years following implementation of the agreement.

Taken together, these terms are regarded as a victory for the U.S. in maintaining its economic leadership and preserving the status of the dollar as a major reserve asset and ceiling commodity.

France, as usual, sees things in a different light.

Its finance minister contends that gold must be the primary reserve asset. He has said that the Agreement on Gold will give central banks more freedom to buy gold.

The French and the Americans are at odds on the issue of a return to an international system of fixed exchange rates as well.

France wants to go back to fixed rates—no doubt because that would permit the maintenance of a relatively undervalued franc.

It's also expected that France, and some other European countries, will set an unofficial floor price at which their central banks will buy gold offered to them.

Such positions have more to do with short-term politics—the politics of the dollar and the franc—than with the long-term role of gold in world commerce.

In the latter sense, gold has been diminished by the IMF agreement and, in fact, there are other factors working in support of the dollar—such as the inherent tendency of the member-countries of the OPEC, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, to peg oil with the surplus money they receive from their oil sales to currencies around the world.

The gold forces may be on top at the moment, but it would be rash to dismiss gold as a barbaric relic of the past just yet.

Zoo Fears Bears Fake Pregnancy For Warmth

DETROIT (AP) — Officials at the Detroit Zoo suspect that three polar bears—Big Bertha, Katie and Astrid—are faking pregnancy so they can live in luxury this winter in the zoo's maternity ward.

Bill Austin, a zoo curator, admits he has "great difficulty" in determining which bears are entitled to maternity leave.

The zoo provides private dens with augmented menus for the mommas-to-be and the added comforts "make the maternity dens pretty attractive at this time of year. Some of us suspect they just want to get away from it all."

Because the cubs are only a pound at birth, they do not have much impact on the appearance of a 700-pound adult female. The zookeeper relies on his knowledge of bear behavior to decide which ones are pregnant.

The two keepers' radio centre on the fact the suspected freeloaders previously have enjoyed the maternity style of life. Two other bears in the zoo's maternity wing probably are legitimate occupants, the keepers say.

Students Protest

MONTREAL (CP) — Students at 39 Protestant secondary schools disrupted the start of classes Wednesday to support teachers in their contract negotiations with the Quebec government. The protests were organized by the 20,000-member Central Students Council following a teacher boycott of extra-curricular activities.

Teacher Contract

OTTAWA (CP) — An average pay increase of 27 per cent over one year for high school teachers in nearby Renfrew county still is under consideration by the anti-inflation board, but a reduction could be ordered, a spokesman said Wednesday.

Santa Robbed

AUSTIN, Minn. (AP) — Even Santa's domain is not off limits to thieves. Police report that someone broke into a little red hut at an Austin shopping centre—where Santa Claus usually hears children's pleas for Christmas presents—and made off with a plastic heater and chair valued at $120.

Ambassadors Meet

HONG KONG (Reuter) — South Vietnam and Cyprus have established diplomatic relations at ambassadorial level, the North Vietnam news agency reported Wednesday.

Portrait Sold

LONDON (Reuter) — A portrait of a dancer by Toulouse-Lautrec was sold for $460,000 Wednesday—a world auction record for the French artist. The painting came from the estate of an anonymous Swiss citizen. The bidder also remained anonymous.

Asylum Denied

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The state department has denied political asylum to a group of Bangladesh army officers involved in the recent assassination of the late president Sheikh Mujibur Rahman and other political leaders in that country. Senator Edward Kennedy, on Wednesday, Kennedy said he had learned the army personnel now are in Libya.

Woman Appointed

TORONTO (CP) — Phyllis Whitfield has been appointed women's program co-ordinator for Ontario's colleges of applied arts and technology, the ministry of colleges and universities announced Wednesday. Mrs. Whitfield will visit every college in the province to discuss programs for women, the ministry said. She joined the applied arts and technology branch of the department of education in 1969.

Criticizes Bill

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Pharmacists' Association said Wednesday that the provincial government's proposed legislation dealing with the Sandoz and holiday opening of retail outlets will have a disruptive impact on drug-store service, Association president Alfred Scales said in a news release that the bill is being dealt with in retail-sale stipulations, more than 1,200 drug-store operators and chain pharmacies in the province may be closed Sundays and holidays.

Talks to Re-open

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said Wednesday he will begin negotiation of a Candu nuclear reactor sales agreement with Argentina will start "sometime within the next couple of weeks."

Fanfare Sounded

TORONTO (CP) — A fanfare of trumpets sounded through the legislature Wednesday, heralding the first mail delivery since the postal strike began six weeks ago.

A messenger pushing a cart of mail set a small tape recorder on his load and, with a recording "First Mail from the Outside World," strode through the halls amid the grin of co-workers, MPPs and tourists.

Introduce Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The government intends to introduce a bill early next year containing revisions to the Bank Act and not proceed with it immediately as a way of encouraging public comment on the proposal, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Wednesday.

Bell Consumers Face Much Higher Rates

OTTAWA (CP) — More than five weeks of public hearings into Bell Canada's request for higher rates ended Wednesday with a prediction telephone users will have to pay more or put up with poorer telephone service.

"If the people of Ontario and Quebec wish to have good quality communications service, they are going to have to pay for it," Bell lawyer Ernest Saunders told the Canadian Transport commission. "These are the facts of life."

A three-member commission panel is expected to rule before the end of the month on Bell's request for higher rates that would add $110.3 million in company revenues during 1979.

The proposed increases, which Bell wants to introduce Jan. 1, include 4.5 per cent more for basic monthly residential and business telephone charges and a variety of higher long distance tolls and service charges.

The basic monthly residential rate would increase to $7.35 from $7.10 in Toronto and Montreal and to $6.85 from $6.75 in Ottawa. The rates would be proportionately lower in smaller communities served by Bell across Central and Northern Canada.

Ontario Employees Will Have Compensation Costs Increased

TORONTO (CP) — Michael Starr, chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Board (WCB), said Wednesday that Ontario employers will pay an average increase of 35 per cent for compensation board premiums in 1979.

Mr. Starr told the legislature's standing committee on estimates that the rising cost of benefits has made it necessary to adjust assessment rates.

He said later in an interview that increases will vary according to employers' categories. Some rates will not change while others will be increased by as much as 100 per cent.

The board's expenditures next year will be at least 10 per cent more than this year because of inflation and will increase again if legislation to increase benefits is passed by the legislature, he said.

The committee, studying the board's spending plans, was told that in the first 10 months of this year, the number of accidents reported as work injuries was down by 9.4 per cent over last year.

However, the dollar total of benefits awarded in the first 10 months increased by 29.4 per cent over the same period last year, Mr. Starr said. The total benefit payout will be about $300 million compared with the $361 million paid out in 1978.

Floyd Laughren (NDP Nickel Belt) told the committee the government should establish a ministry of occupational health to deal with injured workers. He said injured workers are being treated unfairly.

The committee held a special no-day session to discuss the board. Earlier in the day, the committee voted to recommend to the legislature today that the time allotted to discuss the board be extended to at least three days.

Mr. Laughren said the board operates under an adversary system with workers require to prove they have been injured and fight for every penny they get.

He said the board should be replaced with a universal social insurance plan which would provide compensation for all people and would be financed at least partly through a levy on employers.

Mitchell Backs Canada's Sale of Arms Abroad

OTTAWA (CP) — Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp told the House Wednesday that much of the military equipment Canada sells abroad is not meant to kill people.

"There are certain types of arms that might be considered arms for a warlike purpose and we do not supply those," Mr. Sharp said. Asked of the things we supply are not intended for the purpose of killing people."

Erik MacQuarrie (PC—Hillsborough) raised the question and said Canada has been the sixth largest seller of arms in the world.

In reply Mr. Sharp was referring to sales of such items as helicopters and small aircraft which are listed as military supplies.

The Liberal house leader said Canada separates buyers of arms into a number of categories. Sales to NATO countries were on a reciprocal basis, for example.

He added:

"We have another category of countries to which we will supply arms of a certain class; we have a number of countries to which we do not sell arms of any kind and this includes countries in the Middle East.

"Then we have some categories that might be termed arms equipment of a rather innocuous nature and perhaps some of the countries receive equipment — navigation of that kind," he said.

A recent written answer from the government to opposition questions tabled in the Commons last July showed Canada had sold military equipment to 73 countries between 1963 and 1974. Sales were made to 41 countries in 1974.

'Cullen Rule' Called Censorship by Press

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's foreign magazine policy is under vigorous attack by the press as an all-party Commons committee starts debate today on the issue of editorial content restrictions.

Editorial writers at newspapers across the country are denouncing as censorship the controversial "Cullen rule" which will require magazines to be 80 per cent different in content from foreign publications.

The magazine policy will also require the publications to be 75 per cent Canadian-owned to qualify for domestic tax status.

Editorial comment has been directed at both the content rule and at Revenue Minister Bud Cullen, who announced the 80-per-cent rule Oct. 3 and warned that the government will introduce legislation to override the courts if Time Canada Ltd. makes a successful court appeal against the rule.

"From what apprehended evil is this expected to deliver us?" the Toronto Globe and Mail asked Nov. 11.

The Montreal Star said Dec. 1:

"We are not talking about strengthening the arts in all their forms in this country: We are beginning to talk about placing barriers in the way of foreign cultures, something that is, of course, not only impossible to do effectively, but something which can only end in the debasement of what we ourselves have, and what we produce."

The Vancouver Sun on Nov. 25 described the legislation as "part of a policy that has evolved into a weird and dangerous combination of vendetta, open thievery, fraud, retroactive taxation and direct interference in government. What Canadians read and watch."

There is a new society in the world today that censors everything it sees," the Vancouver Sun said.

The Vancouver Province asked Oct. 3—If Canadians "really need Ottawa to separate the good homemade from the bad in our reading material."

The Edmonton Journal on Nov. 28 called the content rule "saddening in its free society" and said it constitutes "a punitive ruling directed specifically against Time and Reader's Digest under a bad law."

The Calgary Albertan said Nov. 29 the bill was "economic protectionism" that might help the domestic magazine industry.

The Winnipeg Free Press likened the legislation to a lynching party.

The Ottawa Journal called Mr. Cullen's warning of legislation to override any successful court appeal on the content issue a "breathtaking abuse of power, frightening arrogance."

Shell Slashes Estimates
OTTAWA (CP) — Shell Canada Ltd. said Wednesday it has slashed its estimate of potential gas reserves in the Mackenzie River delta-Beaufort Sea area by 30 per cent to 47 trillion cubic feet from 77 trillion.
It marked the second day in a row that the National Energy Board heard a major oil company make a more pessimistic forecast of the area's potential. Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. cut its estimate by one-quarter to 39 trillion cubic feet in testimony Tuesday.
Shell officials, echoing comments made a day earlier by Gulf, said the estimates had been changed on the basis of additional exploration experience in the North. The earlier, more optimistic forecasts were provided a year ago for a board hearing on natural gas supply and demand.
The sharp change in the estimates drew fire from board chairman Marshall Crowe, who heads the panel hearing the case on conceptual applications by Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. and Foothills Pipelines Ltd. for the right to build a northern pipeline.

Armed Thieves Loot Lebanon During Holiday

BEIRUT (AP) — Armed thieves and hooligans are picking the spoils during a lull in Lebanon's Moslem - Christian war.

Three armed men entered a businessman's apartment in the centre of the so-called "safe" Hamra Street shopping district one hour this week and started leading up valuables.

The maid started screaming. The screams brought guards from the Palestine Research Centre across the corner. The guards opened fire, killing one thief and wounding another. The thieves were Palestinians, too.

That night, a gang knocked down the wall of a Chevrolet agency with a bulldozer. They drove off with 23 cars worth more than $100,000.

The next night, BBC correspondent Chris Drake came home to his apartment in the "safe" seaside Ramche residential district. Shortly afterward, the doorbell rang. Through the peephole he saw the building's doorman with two others. He let them in. Waving a Russian rifle and a Luger pistol, the two strangers shouted "Fetious! fetious!" (Money! money!)

Drake was relieved of $400, and the bandits drove off in a Mercedes sedan.

Security forces are struggling with a wave of looting, hold-ups and thievery, a breakdown of law and order produced by eight months of civil war.

Nearly every man and boy in Lebanon has a weapon. Common criminals pose as political activists when confronted by the police, who are supposed to remain neutral in the civil war between religious and political factions. Swaggering members of the private Christian and Moslem armies feel themselves above the law and succumb to the temptation to loot and steal.

Moslem looters following the advance of Moslem private armies picked clean the contents of valuable apartments and expensive shops of the Qantari district.

Christian militiamen who occupied the Holiday Inn as a fighting post looted the hotel of food, alcohol, drink and television sets. They also punched a hole in a wall and carted off the neighboring First National City Bank's cash dispensers, typewriters and other office equipment.

The police blame much of the stealing on poor Palestinian refugees from the crowded, squalid camps around the city. The organized Palestinian guerrilla groups deny their men are involved, but their names are being used.

A wealthy businessman opened his door to two men who asked for a contribution to the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a leftist guerrilla group. When he asked for their credentials, they pulled out pistols and cleaned out his wallet.

Pantry Remedies Make a Comeback

by Isabel Huggan

Great grandma had a secret. Just before she went out to a church social or a dance at Miller's barn, she would slip into the pantry for a second or two.

Great-grandpa knew there had to be a reason for his wife's behavior, but he never asked. Probably thought it was "some kind of women's business".

It was.

What great-grandma did in the pantry was to reach down the box of baking soda and pat some under each arm. Like every housewife of her time, she knew baking soda had uses outside the kitchen. She knew there was no better way to stay fresh and sweet-smelling through a night of reels and polkas.

Well, great-grandma passed on, and with her went the baking soda idea. Oh, grandma still used it in her ice-box to soak up the odors of half-a-cabbage or old cheese, but she didn't need it for herself. The cosmetic industry had come up with manufactured deodorants that were much nicer.

Powder — solid sticks you could rub on, creams that you smeared, liquid that you dabbed.

By mother's youth, the roll-on deodorant was all the rage, in a tantalizing range of perfumes. As for the baking soda, it stayed in the kitchen. It was far too "common" to use in that era of exotic preparations.

Then came the sprays, in scents just as varied as the roll-ons, but easier to use. And before you knew it, they were being made for men too!

We won't brag, however, before the "natural" moment swept through the styles of the 60s and early 70s, and began to affect cosmetic and hygiene products. The market has since been glutted by concoctions made from natural substances like lemons, avocados, beeswax and parsley.

And just week, an advertisement in a leading U.S. women's magazine caught my eye and made me chuckle.

For the under-arm industry has come full circle, in a move that would surely bring a smile to great-grandma's lips if she were still alive.

The latest, and therefore the greatest, breakthrough in deodorants is a new product that contains — you guessed it — baking soda.

Claiming that this "new" really different, more natural product won't sting, clog or stain, the ad underlines the deodorant's ability to help you "stay odor-free without pulling harsh chemicals on your skin". The final catch-phrase is "a natural solution to a natural problem".

If home remedies really do take over the market, I can foresee a myriad of "honest, straight from the kitchen" beauty and health aids.

We'll be able to buy tooth-paste featuring "Real Salt", skin cleansers with "Real Vinegar" and powders made from "Real Stone-Ground Flour".

And maybe it'll occur to some of us to skip the drug-store and just take care of ourselves in the pantry.

Golden Jubilee Bazaar and Tea Held at Tabernacle United Church

Tabernacle United Church held its annual bazaar and tea Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. this year's theme the church's 50th anniversary. Christmas trees decorated with gold ornaments were featured throughout the church hall.

Rev. Leslie Dean opened the Golden Jubilee event, which was convened by Doris Baldrick and convened by Isabelle Goodfellow. Receiving in the hall were Mrs. Baldrick and Mrs. Goodfellow, Ethel Dean and Georgina Charlton.

Christmas music was provided for the occasion by organist Robert Johnston.

Conveners of the various booths were: Doris Ashley and Vivian Gross, home baking; Mary Coughlan, Laura Lott, Edith Stanton and Gladys Bailley, gifts and crafts; Ruby Way and Gladys Brickman, aprons; Margaret Nelson and Eva Barlow, candy; Doris Simpson and Freda Wilson, decorations; Randolph Nelson, Jack Winkley and Arthur Charlton, men's club table. In charge of the nursery were Linda Walker, Olivia Weese, Faye Grundy and Marlene Jeffs.

Conveners of the tea room were Ethel Horton and Norma Sable, assisted by Treasurers Frank Douglas and Merritt Hackett. Rev. and Mrs. Dean and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Smith were hosts and hostesses for the tea room.

Pouring tea were Mrs. Baldrick, Mrs. Goodfellow, Mrs. Stanton, Mrs. Charlton, Muriel Jeffs, Barbara McKay, Valerie Coons and Myrtle Day.

People and Events

HOLY TRINITY

Christmas decorations and poinsettia plants made Trinity Hall, Shannonville, a festive place for the annual bazaar and tea at Holy Trinity Anglican Church Women which was held Saturday.

Guests were received by guild president Helen Spencer and Doris Johnson.

Francis Little, assisted by Stella Breadman convened the sewing table; Myrtle Vivian with Ruby Juby convened the home baking table.

Leah Reid and Agnes Emmons convened the white elephant table. Tea room convener was Mary McKenzie assisted by Jean Sumis, Velma Cook and Florrie Sager. Servers were Margarite Breadman and Nancy Argenal.

CHRISTIAN WOMEN

A coffee and dessert will be held Wednesday, December 10 at the Four Seasons Hotel by the Belleville Christian Women's Club. Marjorie Lage will speak about decorating Christmas baking. The event, which costs $2.25, begins at 11:30 a.m.

BARBADOS WEDDING

Marion Jean Hart Wessels, and Hamilton Gall were married in October in Barbados. Rev. Leslie George M. Lynch performed the ceremony.

Belleville Students Are Raising Funds For Cancer Society

There's a lot of self respect to be gained in doing something to help someone else.

With this in mind, Alma Wallace initiated a new project with the girls in the Intermediate Girls' Residence at Sir James Whitney School this autumn. The project — raising money for the Canadian Cancer Society.

Assisting Mrs. Wallace have been two residence counsellors: Shirley Parks, who has done most of the organizing, and Marion Lee. They've involved half of the residence's 45 girls between the ages of nine and 14 in an educational program about evasion.

Since October the girls have viewed several films, learned about the research that the Cancer Society is doing in various fields.

"They've been particularly impressed with the literature about the effects of smoking," says Mrs. Parks.

Mrs. Lee adds that the girls have been so horrified by what they've seen that they're actively campaigning to get her to stop smoking.

Although the educational aspect of the program is important to the counsellors, they are more intent on the character-building that is involved.

"We're hoping that the end result will be that the girls will learn extra responsibility, really take pride in their good work. We want them to realize that, handicapped or not, they are able to help others.

"They've been helped by other people, and now they're passing that along," says Mrs. Parks.

The fund-raising will take place for nine days, beginning Thursday, December 4, in Towers Department Store, where the girls will be selling Cancer Society daffodil tags.

"Some of the girls are a little shy about approaching the public this way, but we think it'll be a good test of their confidence," says Mrs. Parks.

Once the girls have collected the money at Towers, and have canvassed Sir James Whitney School, they'll give the proceeds to the Belleville office of the Canadian Cancer Society.

"We're very proud of the way they've taken to this idea," says Mrs. Parks, "and if it's successful, we'll repeat the tagging in the spring."

VON Would Provide Midwife For Having Babies at Home

The Victorian Order of Nurses (VON) is anxious to reactivate an old service: providing a midwife for babies delivered at home.

Sue McNish, director of the Quinte branch of VON said this week the VON has always been involved with helping women deliver their babies at home until recent years.

"Before the VON had been known for pioneering projects and setting standards else could so," she said. "The hospitals have picked up a service we used to provide."

Mrs. McNish said the midwife service is provided regularly in Toronto by the VON. An estimated 1,000 babies are handled every month.

The service is available to women if they have their physician's approval. He must also be present at the delivery.

Mrs. McNish emphasized that the service does not compete with obstetric services provided by hospitals. "We just want to provide another option as to where a women can have her baby," she said.

She said home births were not as expensive as deliveries in a hospital. It costs a minimum of $500 to have a baby in a hospital.

She added there is a psychological advantage for the women giving birth. "We can understand a woman wanting to have her baby at home. Birth is a traumatic experience; having a baby in familiar surroundings is comfort," she said.

There is one trained midwife on the VON staff as well as registered nurses who have obstetrics training.

Mrs. McNish said the VON's renewed interest in the service was due to a change in attitudes. "There is a move towards more natural things and that includes child birth."

Mr. and Mrs. John Vincent McDermott exchanged wedding vows November 1 at 3:30 p.m. in St. Joseph's Church. The bride is the former Margaret Helen Rolland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Rolland. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent J. McDermott, Read. Msgr. John Carley officiated.

50th Anniversary

Trevor and Carmalets Armitage (Nancy) recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in the recreation hall of Holloway Street United Church. Friends and family from a wide area attended the afternoon Open House.

Hugh O'Neil, MPP for Quinte District, presented the couple with a plaque from the Ontario government.

The decorated tea table was presided over by Florence Dawson, Doreen Hudgins, Olive Wallace, Norma Ellerbeck, Kathleen Asselstine and Agnes Bakery. Nieces and nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Armitage acted as waitresses and doormen.

In the evening, family members were entertained at dinner, for which Chuck Potter acted as master of ceremonies. Toasts were given by Virginia Switzer and Marion Stanley.

Holloway Street United Church women provided food for both afternoon and evening.

Social Information For Brides-to-Be

Engagement announcements should be brought to the main desk of The Intelligencer from 8.30 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. Those without photographs cost $4.50, and those with photographs cost $3.70

Wedding notices should be brought to the women's desk upstairs at The Intelligencer, between 8.30 a.m. and 3 p.m. weekdays, or from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturdays. Information about weddings should be set down on wedding forms available from either the main desk or the women's desk, here is no charge for the description of the wedding, but a charge of $4.70 is made for reproduction of a photograph.

Black and white glossy photographs are recommended for the best reproduction in the newspaper. If, however, you have only color photos, bring the negative so that it can be used to make a black and white print.

Ann Landers

Reader Will Lose Her Man If She Follows Her Hunch

Dear Ann Landers: I've read a lot about E.S.P. and I'm positive I have it. I have feelings about things before they happen. For example, I will start thinking about a friend I haven't seen in ages, then I'll run into her the next day. Often I have a feeling the doorbell or telephone will ring, and sure enough it does before I get into the shower. It invariably happens. When I dream about people getting into accidents, it scares me because I know they are slated for bad luck.

This gift has been with me a long time. When I was in school I could tell what people were thinking even before they spoke. Once I read a boy's mind on a bet and slapped his face. He was amazed, but he verified my extra-sensory perception.

I have been receiving strong messages that a certain man who has asked me out only twice would be the ideal husband. I'm 32 and ready to get married. Shall I cut through the game-playing and tell him?—A Girl With Something Extra

Dear Girl: I have only five senses and I'm not too sure about them. But my common sense tells me it wouldn't be smart to lay such a load on a young man after only two dates. So keep quiet, Buttercup, or you'll scare him off.

Dear Ann Landers: I trust you, which is more than I can say for most people these days. I'm getting on in years and have realistic ideas about life and death. I'm a woman who has worked hard, never cared for luxury and lived modestly. To outsiders I appear "comfortable."

I have no family and I want to leave what I have to charity. How can I make sure the money will be used properly?

One reads so much in the newspapers about high-class crooks and swindlers who cheat respectable charities, not to mention the so-called "worthy causes" which are actually schemes dreamed up by fourflushers.

I want the money I leave to help people who can't help themselves. I'd like the names of a few honest places that need funds. If you vouch for them, Ann, that's good enough for me.—M.G. of N.Y.

Dear M.G.: I know of many—but will suggest three. The Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago, 345 East Superior, Chicago, Ill. 60611; The Society for the Rehabilitation of the Facially Disfigured, 550 First Avenue, N.Y. 10016, and The Institute of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation, New York University Medical Center, 400 East 34th Street, N.Y. 10016.

Dear Ann Landers: Is this a sex problem, a health problem or a psychiatric problem?

My husband takes off all his clothes the minute he comes home from work. He walks around stark naked and has even answered the doorbell with a newspaper in front of him.

We have a breezeway that separates the house from the garage. He sits out there nude and reads. Sometimes he goes into the garage naked to work on his car. I'm scared to death the neighbors will see him and call the police.

Our two kids (11 and 14) refuse to bring friends home from school because Dad goes around like this. I wouldn't dream of inviting any women over when he's at home. He says it's his house and he believes in being comfortable. What do you think?—Wife Of Nature Boy

Dear Wife: Sounds like a psychiatric problem to me. But he won't get on clothes he won't go for help, so my advice is to keep the shades down. He can't get arrested as long as he stays in his own home.

I want the money I leave to help people who can't help themselves. I'd like the names of a few honest places that need funds. If you vouch for them, Ann, that's good enough for me.—M.G. of N.Y.

'Young Olympians' Recruited Across Canada

TORONTO (CP) — Capt. James Murray, team leader of Young Olympians of Canada from his post as physical and education officer with the Canadian Armed Forces has a new army.

And it is growing by leaps and bounds from Newfoundland to Vancouver Island as he recruits youngsters ages four to 14 all showing athletic promise.

The 35-year-old has talked to hundreds of children from coast to coast in schools, girl guides, scouts, YMCAs and YWCA recreation parks and centres.

There are strong reasons for his current association with the Montreal Olympic Games. Capt. Murray says we must get to the real and original means of sports competition.

"We must get away from the Olympic movement as a once-in-four-years travel agency for athletes and spectators," he said.

"Bring the whole philosophy down to grass roots, make the Olympics a viable organization relating to the youth of countries participating. Make it relevant to the average citizen."

Capt. Murray knows his Olympics inside out. He was delegation leader for Canada at the Olympic Youth and Student Camp and chairman of the international conference on the future of Olympic Youth Camps at Munich in 1972.

His objectives in shaping a campaign as manager of the Young Olympians of Canada Program are first to attract mass participation.

"Second," he said, "is to promote physical fitness and get back to the meaning of Olympian achievement which is each person reaching his or her own top level of performance."

Western Canada 'Like a Magnet'

EDMONTON (CP)—Rev. Colin Cutteli is the head of a 1,300-year-old church. All Hallows Berkyngechirche by the Tower in England, but says Western Canada draws him like a magnet.

Mr. Cutteli did missionary work in the foothills of the Rockies 35 years ago.

It's a big jump from trekking through the wilderness and baptizing people in lakes to being in charge of a church whose foundation is built on a Roman villa, but Mr. Cutell likes jumping back occasionally to visit the area of his first mission.

He remembers trudging from settlement to settlement in the 1930s and 1940s. In summer he had to contend with muddy roads in which he inevitably got stuck; in winter he used skis.

"I guess I remember the battle of the cold." Those were the times he had to ski from place to place, sometimes getting lost, and "praying how to cope."

Those were also the times when houses were not heated by natural gas and he had to get up at 3 a.m. to put wood in the stove to stay alive.

But his best memory is of the people. "There was more real neighborliness and a desire to help one another."

Times were hard, and instead of receiving money at collection time, Mr. Cutell got eggs, hens or anything else the people could give.

Mr. Cutell went overseas as a chaplain with the Canadian forces during the Second World War, and after the war he did ministry work in London. In 1965 he took over All Hallows.

Ford Says Visit Beneficial

PEKING (AP) — President Ford of the United States said today on the final day of his visit to Peking that his meetings with China's leaders have been "very beneficial and very friendly." State Secretary Henry Kissinger added: "We did here in two days what it took Nixon three to do."

Beginning his third and final working session with First Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, the acting head of the Chinese government, the president said the relationship between the United States and China has been strengthened by his talks with Teng and Chairman Mao Tsetung.

The results "can be measured in the months ahead," he said.

"I agree with that," said Teng.

No details of the talks have been announced, although spokesmen have said they covered the full range of international issues as well as bilateral issue between the Chinese and U.S. government. However, the Chinese are considered certain to have emphasized their distrust of the U.S. policy of detente with the Soviet Union.

There has been no announcement of any specific agreement or proposal discussed, and the announcement Wednesday that the customary final communique will not be issued indicated no new agreements were reached.

"We didn't even try for a communique," said Kissinger. "The situation just didn't lend itself to that."

Kissinger's comparison of Ford's visit with President Nixon's trail-blazing 1972 trip was made as he talked with reporters during a buffet luncheon at the U.S. liaison mission. Earlier in the conversation, he said no comparison should be drawn between the two, and after his observation he gave no evidence of achievements this time comparable to opening of a new era in Chinese-U.S. relations that the Nixon visit produced.

Christmas Around the World

Moira Secondary School's float in Belleville's recent Santa Claus parade, representing aspects of Christmas around the world, included a Swedish tradition in which the oldest girl of a family dresses in a long, white gown and wears a candle-covered wreath on her head. Student Orlea Wood resides in the girl while Steve Demenci (left) portrays the younger brother wearing a pointed hat with stars and Carol Beddie (right) plays her younger sister.

Guidelines Take Away Business Initiative

TORONTO (CH) — John Bull, president of Bovis Corp. Ltd., Toronto, said Wednesday that the federal government's selective wage and price controls may end rewards for individual initiative in large companies.

Speaking to an executive compensation conference, Mr. Bull said the maximum annual increase of $2,000 under the guidelines is ridiculous.

"It will only lead to union-style seniority rules and tenure in management hierarchy," he said.

Mr. Bull questioned whether pension package could be replaced by one "that will properly reward success and initiative and satisfy the new anti-inflation guidelines."

Prince Souphanouvong Elected President of Laotian Congress

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The Laotian People's Congress today elected Prince Souphanouvong, the titular chief of the Pathet Lao movement, to be president of the new People's Democratic Republic of Laos, and Communist party chief Kaysone Phomvihan to head the new government as premier, Vientiane Radio announced.

King Savang Vatthana, whose abdication was announced Wednesday, was named "supreme adviser" to the president, while Prince Souvanna Phouma, the premier for the last 19 years, was appointed "adviser to th government."

Souvanna Phouma, a 74-year-old neutralist and Souphanouvong the 63-year-old "Red Prince" are half brothers and cousins of the dethroned 48-year-old king.

Kaysone a 49-year-old revolutionary with strong ties with North Vietnam, is chairman of the Lao People's Revolutionary party. Its formation was announced in October by the Pathet Lao.

The president presumably will be a figurehead, a status many Western experts believe Souphanouvong has had in the Pathet Lao for years. The power apparently will be exercised by the premier.

Vientiane broadcasts Wednesday announced the creation of the People's Republic, ending the monarchy and the coalition of conservatives, neutralists and Communists which Souvanna Phouma headed. But the Communists took control of the government last spring, driving all leading conservatives into exile, and the premier since then has been powerless.

The broadcast today said Khamtay Siphandon was named deputy premier supreme commander of the Lao liberation armed forces and defence minister.

Phoumi Sivnasnih was named foreign minister and deputy premier, and Phoumi Vongvichit remained as deputy premier but with the added post of minister of education, sports and religious affairs.

The People's Republic will seek closer ties with "Vietnam, Cambodia and other socialist nations" but "will not join with any group of countries," the broadcast said. But with large numbers of North Vietnamese troops in eastern Laos and Kaysone as premier, Hanoi is expected to play a dominant role.

With Mail Strike End UNICEF Plan Program

TORONTO (CP) — Hugh Bartley, director of the UNICEF Christmas Card campaign, said Wednesday that the national mail strike ended "just in time."

"We hope that people realize that we're still selling cards," Mr. Bartley said. He said revenues "is urgently needed to maintain medical care and proper nutrition for children in 115 developing countries."

UNICEF estimated that the mail strike may cut $1 million from card-sale revenue.

Meanwhile, greeting card manufacturers say they hope the end of the postal strike will mean the recovery of their business.

A sales executive at William E. Coutts Co., of Toronto said sales of boxed cards were slow during the strike. The company is "optimistic that with news of the strike being over we'll make a significant recovery. . . ."

Carl buyers for Simpsons Ltd. of Toronto and T. Eaton Co. Ltd. of Toronto said card purchases increased when the postal strike ended Tuesday.

M. B. Opper, president of Carlton Cards Ltd. of Toronto, said he expects that a considerable amount of merchandise will be left over at the retail level.

Learn to Belt-up

EDMONTON (CP) — Next year Alberta will embark on a seat-belt education campaign rather than make their use law, Transport Minister Hugh Horner said. He said legislating the use of seat belts would be difficult to enforce and the province would rather try "persuasive education." The federal government will be fighting part of the education program.

Clinics Spurred

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — A visit to this city by Ontario sports Travelcade might spark a series of ministry of culture and recreation sports clinics here, recreation director Russ Lentinet said. The travelcade presented films, held clinics and displayed printed and visual information on recreational activities. The recreation department is already planning a cross-country skiing clinic.

De Haviland Accuses Union of Backing Out

TORONTO (CP) — De Havilland Aircraft of Canada accused a United Auto Workers negotiating committee Wednesday of backing out of an agreement to end a strike by the company's 1,700 employees.

A union spokesman replied that the charge amounted to "the guilty trying to accuse the innocent." The workers, members of Local 112, UAW, have been on strike since Aug. 25.

In a letter to the employees, the company said the negotiating committee had agreed to limit a provision for a cost-of-living allowance so the settlement would be acceptable to the federal anti-inflation board.

The revised allowance provided for additional raises to workers if the cost of living increased more than eight per cent in the first year of the contract, six per cent in the second year and five per cent in the third year.

Frank Fairchild, chief negotiator for the union committee, said no agreement was made. He said the committee put the company's last offer before the membership without a recommendation.

It was rejected by 57 per cent of the production workers and 61 per cent of those in the skilled trades.

Last Friday the company announced that the board had approved a 15-per-cent increase over one year. It said the board had stated the company's initial offer—20 per cent in the first year, 11 per cent in the second and 10.5 per cent in the third—exceeded federal controls.

The average hourly wage for the workers is $5.41.

Roller Skating

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — The stamina Stratford's young roller skaters have could push Stratford and Area World Aid over its target of $10,000 in its campaign to build a village for 224 abandoned children in Costa Rica. Local junior high and high school students will roller skate in a marathon session to raise funds for the group which is active in Portillo Life, a nationwide project.

12-year-old Held in Jail Over Fine

HAMILTON (CP) — A 13-year-old boy was arrested by regional police and held in a detention centre for five hours Tuesday after his mother forgot to pay the boy's court-ordered fine, the boy's family says.

The boy, arrested at his home while watching television with his family, was served a warrant signed by Judge D. H. Steinberg of family court.

The warrant was issued after the boy failed to appear in court last Thursday along with two other children. He was ordered to pay restitution for damage done last summer at a Coca-Cola plant or be placed in a training school.

85 Toronto Students Seek Classes To Avoid Effects of Metro Strike

The Canadian Press

At least 85 Metropolitan Toronto secondary school students, feeling the academic effects of a strike by their 1,800 teachers are living with relatives, in summer cottages or with friends in other Ontario communities so they can attend classes there until the strike is over.

In Grey County, for example, board of education officials said about 28 Toronto students are attending schools in Owen Sound and nearby Meaford and Thornbury. Many of the students' parents own property in the area or are legally entitled for other reasons to send their children to the schools, a spokesman said.

A spokesman for the Bruce County board of education, also in the Owen Sound area, said 16 Metro Toronto students are enrolled in Chesley, Walkerton and Port Elgin high schools.

They are considered resident students and do not pay tuition fees, he said. However, the board refused entry to three students who wanted to attend Kincardine secondary school because the school could not offer courses that would have met their academic requirements and the students did not have accommodation, he said.

Colleen Reid, 18, a Grade 11 student from the Toronto borough of Scarborough, spends 15 minutes a day riding a school bus to the board's Chesley District high school from her family's farm.

She and her brother, Steven, a Grade 9 student, transferred to the school when Metro teachers went on strike Nov. 12. They return with their mother to Toronto each weekend—Colleen for piano lessons and Steven for hockey games.

David Tack, 18, and three other Toronto Grade 13 students, rented a duplex in Chesley when the teachers went on strike.

He said he feels teachers should have the right to strike but that the Metro board should provide a tutoring system during the strike.

Eric Runacres, director of education for Hastings County, said six Metro students have transferred to schools in Belleville and nearby communities. He said teachers and principals accepted the transfers and do not view the students' actions as a move against Toronto teachers.

In Oshawa, the Durham board of education said 39 Metro students enrolled in area schools pay $87 a month in tuition fees and more will be accepted only if schools can accommodate them.

A spokesman said about 100 students who normally attend Metro schools but live in the Dunbarton area have refused to be accepted in area schools as they wished to transfer.

He said the board has had requests from the striking teachers for supply-teaching positions with the Durham board but said it would be illegal to hire such teachers during the strike.

The Simcoe County board of education, with schools in Orillia, Barrie and Midland, passed a resolution last month to prohibit Toronto students from attending its schools, a board spokesman said.

He said the large number of students who would be eligible to transfer because their parents own summer cottages in the area would disrupt already overcrowded schools.

North Pickering May Be a Commuter Suburb

TORONTO (CP) — North Pickering, a community proposed for a site just east of here, probably will be a commuter suburb, says a report submitted Wednesday to the Metropolitan Toronto planning commission.

Metro Chairman Paul Godfrey said the province will not be able to attract industrial development to the community.

The commission is debating whether the proposed community—expected to have a population of 75,000—can be justified by the province, which has cancelled plans for an airport there.

Paul Cosgrove, mayor of the Toronto borough of Scarborough, said he is concerned about the impact North Pickering will have on his community.

The province recently recommended that future commercial development on the outskirts of Scarborough should be reduced by 20 per cent as proposed commercial in North Pickering will not be affected, he said.

McMurtry Wants Legal Aid Program Explained

TORONTO (CP) — Roy McMurtry, Ontario attorney-general, said Wednesday that although he wants the province to designate more money in the administration of justice, it may not be possible to meet a request by the Law Society of Upper Canada for funds to explain Ontario's legal aid plan to the public.

Mr. McMurtry said in an interview that he recognizes the need for advertising but that the plan already needs another $7 million just to keep it going this year. He said he will approach the request for additional funds with caution.

The plan—to provide free or subsidized legal help to persons unable to afford a lawyer—cost the province $23 million a year. Yet none of the money has ever been spent on advertising, a law society spokesman said.

Last year, the government decreased the legal-aid budget by $150,000. That money would have been used to hire a public information officer and begin advertising, the spokesman said.

The society—governing body of Ontario's 19,228 lawyers—administers the plan.

Miller Says Doctors Demands Too High

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Frank Miller said Wednesday he cannot accept a demand by Ontario doctors for a 35-per-cent fee increase.

He said in an interview that the province has made a counter-offer to the Ontario Medical Association, but refused to disclose the amount.

"The 35 per cent is just not acceptable to either the province or the federal government as I interpret the (wage and price control) guidelines," Mr. Miller said.

He said the guidelines hold wage increases to 10 per cent and stipulate that professionals should not get more than a net increase of $2,600 a year.

He said a raise of up to 15 per cent might be considered.

A problem with the doctor's demand is that "we simply don't have the money in the budget."

Lunching On Eels

TORONTO (CP) — More than 50,000 Americans eels slithered up an experimental eel ladder over a seaway dam at Cornwall, Ont., last summer just as a strong world-wide demand doubled the prices for this delicacy fish. Demand for smoked, jellied and raw eels pushed prices up to 80 cents a pound from an earlier 40 cents. Eels, a popular delicacy in Europe and Japan, have never caught on with North Americans.

SPAC Gets First Look at Zoning Bylaw: Approval Months Away

BY COLIN Brown
Staff Reporter

It has been a year since approval was sought for Belleville's official plan and it will likely be another year before approval is given for the zoning bylaw which puts the still unapproved plan into effect.

Belleville planning committee members got their first glimpse of the restricted area (zoning) bylaw at a meeting of the subordinate planning advisory committee Wednesday.

The 76-page bylaw, termed "the teeth of the official plan" drew few questions from committee members who had little time to scan the document before presentation by consultants.

The absence of some "controversial areas" and the need for extensive public input, "approval of the zoning bylaw will be a long, drawn out procedure," said committee chairman Ald. Joe Cox.

Ald. Cox pointed to sections dealing with rooming houses, foster homes and basement bedrooms, as areas of prime concern that will have to be researched before the committee can be satisfied.

The bylaw does not permit either rooming houses or group foster homes anywhere in the city and also is "very restrictive" towards basement bedrooms, a committee member said.

If passed the document would also include development control over the entire city—a move that brought strong opposition from Belleville downtown business district when a similar bylaw was introduced some months ago.

"It was controversial at that time and it will have to be looked at again," said Ald. Cox.

Quinte Planning Board (QPB) staff were instructed to take the committee's comments into consideration and have reports ready for a special planning meeting of the board.

Ald. Cox during a recess of the three-hour meeting, said he, hoped the bylaw could be approved by the end of 1976.

QPB staff said later the planning staff guessed that once committee members have had more opportunity to read the bylaw, many more questions would arise.

The alderman said he felt the document "forms a basically good bylaw ... by comparing existing city zoning bylaws, with amendments, into one document."

Once the committee is satisfied with the draft document, some form of public distribution will be arranged, followed by public meetings.

The committee discussed alternate methods of holding the public meetings and how the bylaw could be reproduced economically. But a decision was stalled until at least January.

Commenting on the need for the bylaw, Ald. Cox said "it is a very necessary document that will guide the orderly growth of the city."

City in Midst of Talks

Labor Prospects Not Bright

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Results of contract bargaining so far between city hall and its 'white' employees have sparked no enthusiasm from the workers' spokesmen.

"It doesn't look too bright," outlined Bob Cooke after talks Wednesday with city management.

The next meeting in two weeks could be "the crunch affair," he added.

Mr. Cooke is president of Local 167, Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) — bargaining agent for the city's 93 works, parks and arena employees.

It was the second session in recent weeks between both sides as the CUPE local seeks a new one-year agreement to replace the two-year contract that expires at the year's end.

It's one of a string of labor agreements involving essential city services which will run out at the same time: Dec. 31.

Developments in other city contracts now, expiring include:

— City hall civil servants, Don Dalrymple, president of CUPE's Local 146, says so far, there has been only a "preliminary" meeting with management on a proposed one-year contract for city hall department staff. As yet, neither side has "really started to bargain." Next meeting is Dec. 18.

— Police. Negotiations have yet to start with the city's police commission. Detective Don Morgan, president of the Belleville Police Association, says his group is "pretty sure of where we're going" on final settling proposals in a one-year contract bid.

— Public utilities. A two-year contract is running now. Some 80 inside and outside workers in CUPE Local 636 are seeking a one-year agreement. Neil Britton, Belleville Utilities Commission manager says talks so far have been "introductory" and as yet involve no concrete issues.

— Firefighters. Their proposals have yet to be presented to city management, but Bob Andrus, negotiating chairman for the Belleville Firefighters Association, indicates the awaited package hits law of federal anti-inflation guidelines are a consideration. His group awaits specific definitions from the program.

Public transit. So far talks continue with the Canadian Brotherhood of Railroad and General Workers Union. To date, there have been two meetings.

The talks take place against a backdrop of austerity. Aside from the federal anti-inflation program there has been the repeated warning of constraint from the provincial government — a major source and arbiter of municipal funding.

But Mr. Cooke Wednesday night after day-long session with city officials' proposals could be believes disagreement was using the current economic atmosphere in its own advantage.

He said he feels management is "trying to take advantage of the whole psychological effect of economic cutbacks."

Because of this and the recent postal strike which claims "they're hoping public opinion is against the public sector getting a raise of any kind."

Mr. Cooke claimed the attitude of management this time was "completely different" since his CUPE local began bargaining more than 10 years ago.

"They're just asking for the impossible that we, in no way, can accept."

A third meeting is due Dec. 19 and "I expect that will probably be the crunch affair," he said.

The session Wednesday indicates whether or not conciliation is wanted, said Mr. Cooke.

If a conciliator is called in, the local's membership will be asked for a strike vote by union negotiators can go to conciliation already prepared for a legal walkout if such talks failed, he said.

Fatal for Deer

Mike MacDonald, natural resources ministry conservation officer, scans carcasses of deer killed on railroad east of Napanee. The animals — two fawns and a doe — died in separate mishaps with trains, a multiple fatality officials say is unusual in Quinte district.

Crosbie Takes Issue With Bail Reform Act

By CLIFF KENTON
Staff Reporter

If capital punishment is the law, it should be enforced, Belleville Chief Douglas Crosbie said Wednesday.

Chief Crosbie, newly-elected president of the Ontario Association of Police Chiefs, said he is not opposed to rehabilitation of criminals but, "when comes a time when rehabilitation doesn't work."

Speaking at the annual Quinte Artillery Association banquet he said the capital punishment question should "be taken to the people in a referendum".

"We're at war," said Chief Crosbie and government is not protecting us.

Letting prisoners out of jail on day-passes, he said, is like giving them a license to commit crimes.

During this week, said Chief Crosbie, the police department was notified of three persons who went missing while on passes from prison. They are each listed as dangerous.

"We must have more government concern about what is happening to our country," said Chief Crosbie.

Beginning in kindergarten, children must be taught to respect property, he said, referring to the arrest this week of a juvenile for theft in Belleville. The 14-year-old was also wanted on theft charges in Napanee.

CHIEF DOUG. CROSBIE

He said the department has the right to charge the boy for stolen Christmas tree lights.

The bail reform act, he said, is a juvenile's charter and must be reversed."

Chief Crosbie said the act should be changed so the onus is on the alleged person to prove why they should go free rather than the police having to prove why they should not.

The "change in our entire society" said Chief Crosbie has been caused by a lack of parental discipline. "We look to the schools, police and judges today to take care of their children.

"Small wonder younger people are emulating older people who feel might is right."

Chief Crosbie, a member of the Toronto Regiment of the Royal Canadian Artillery and an ex-naval gunner, said veterans should be an example for society through their behavior.

"Rights without responsibilities are wrong," said Chief Crosbie.

Committee Postings Get Review

City council meets Monday to draft appointments to Belleville's civic boards, committees and commissions.

In the meantime, city clerk Earl Hall has asked citizens seeking such appointments to submit their names in his office or to council members.

Council this year is making a more emphatic effort to bring the appointments to public notice. In the past they were relegated to a formal newspaper advertisement.

But recently Mayor Ben Corke said city hall was anxious that as many people as possible be aware of the opportunity for civic service. However, this would also contribute to disappoint some citizens — since there are always too few vacancies compared to the number of applicants, he stressed.

Monday's council meeting will be a caucus session.

Traditionally membership on civic groups is not announced until the first council meeting in January.

Bus Riders Unaffected By Mishap

No Belleville bus passenger have been without bus service because of a bus-car collision late last week that "wiped out the whole front end" of the West Hill - Trenton bus says transit commission manager Lewis McMullin.

The accident, which sent eight people to hospital, four of whom were admitted, caused about $10,000 damage and effected the bus front service.

Mr. McMullin said Wednesday one of three buses the commission keeps on standby was put on the run to replace the damaged bus.

The damaged bus will be transported to Toronto this week where it will be repaired.

"There's too much labor for us to do it," he said.

The commission operates a three-bay garage for its 16 transit buses, two school buses, and three standby vehicles. With one standby bay now undergoing a motor overhaul, one remains in case of any minor breakdown of transit buses on their daily runs.

The damaged bus was in collision with a vehicle and the momentum of the crash sent it into a cement balcony of an apartment at the intersection of Catherine and Yeomans Sts.

Mr. McMullin would not estimate when the transmission would have to be replaced. "It depends on the supply of parts," he could be next spring," he said.

Deer Victims of the Unusual

NAPANEE — Three deer have been accidentally killed east of here in mishaps termed unusual by provincial wildlife officials.

The incidents occurred on the Canadian National Railway tracks, apparently during a warm three nights ago.

Two fawns and a doe were killed by trains after the animals had wandered onto the tracks.

Mishaps, in which deer are killed by vehicles on local highways, are not uncommon. Often the big, game animals are being pursued by dogs when they leap in front of startled drivers, said Jack Stewart, wildlife co-ordinator officer with the natural resources ministry here.

"But it's quite unusual to have deer hit by trains in this district," he said.

Expenditure Cut Means Shortened Duck Season

NAPANEE — Provincial government financial restraints have curbed the enthusiasm of late-season Quinte area duck hunters.

Controlled waterfowl hunting at Prinyer's Cove near Brighton, has been shut down a month early.

An official at the natural resources department's Napanee district office — which supervises wildlife management in the Belleville — Trenton district — confirmed Wednesday financial constraints have made it difficult to staff the area.

Admissions to the shooting zone run around 1,900 during the season, which normally is open from Sept. 29 to Dec. 31.

The area — open to extended, controlled hunting since 1958 — was closed Monday.

Meadowlands and marshlands also have affected pheasant stocking of the ministry's 1,000 acres north of Brighton, off Highway #30.

Some 1,000 pheasants were released in the area this year. The birds are raised at the ministry's Codrington pheasant farm.

Reserve Blaze Destroys Garage and Two Vehicles

DESERONTO — A spark from a welder's torch is the probable cause of a fire on Tyendinaga Reserve Tuesday which destroyed a garage, damaged a nearby house and two cars, says Chief Garnet Maracle of Mohawk Band Fire Department.

Chief Maracle said Wednesday Frank Maracle of RR 1, Deseronto was working in the trunk of a Volve owned by Joe Campbell of Hamilton when he looked up and observed flames inside the vehicle.

He said the garage was not equipped with a fire extinguisher and a nearby garden hose was frozen preventing any preliminary firefighting by Maracle.

Maracle suffered a cut hand in his escape.

Chief Maracle said that by the time his department arrived, the blaze had spread to another car, owned by Ken Sherwood of Deseronto, and had licked through an open window of the car, parked next to the garage, he added.

In addition, a window and clapboard siding on a nearby house were at fire but firemen doused the flames.

Chief Maracle estimated a $3,000 loss in the house, and garage and tools contained within. He said the property, owned by Clarence Maracle of RR 1, Deseronto and located on Slash Rd., carried no fire insurance.

The Volve did not have insurance and Chief Maracle said a ruse was unable to provide damage estimates for either by Maracle.

He said it was the second fire to destroy property there — since his own were outfitted with pocket pagers from Tyendinaga Fire Department.

"We were able to get to both fires within minutes," he enumerated.

Ready for Summer Already!

The weather may be wintry. But that was no discouragement Wednesday at Victoria Park as they poured concrete for base to anchor new fishing pier for next summer's anglers. Project was organized by Ald. Stu Meeks, Belleville Harbor Improvements committee chairman.

Reduced Manpower Puts Strain on Other Firemen, Says Williams

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

City council's refusal to replace a fireman who retired in March, compounded by firemen on sick leave, has placed a strain on the firefighting capability of one fire department shift, says Bill Williams, president of Belleville Local 677 of the Ontario Professional Firefighters' Association.

The firemen have sought arbitration as the means to overturn council's decision earlier this year and return the number of firefighters to 44 men.

Mr. Williams explained Wednesday the current 36-hour day shift is short three men due to the vacant position and the recovery of two men in hospital.

Capt. George Woodhouse, a 28-year veteran who suffered a heart attack while fighting a fire Oct. 31, is recovering at Toronto General Hospital. He was stricken while walking at the rear of 90-92 Victoria Ave., a 101-year-old apartment block extensively damaged in a two-alarm fire.

Belleville council and Local 677 of the Ontario Professional Firefighters' Association (OPFA) at Belleville have gone to arbitration over a vacant firefighting position which council refused to fill following a retirement early this year.

Ed Hethersell, OPFA secretary, told the Intelligencer in a telephone interview from Toronto Wednesday, the provincial ministry of the solicitor general has appointed an arbitrator in the case.

Mr. Hethersell said the arbitrator is Peter Barnacle, a Toronto lawyer and lecturer in law at the University of Toronto. However, a date has not been set for an initial meeting, he added.

Both Wilbur Purcell, city manager and Bill Williams, Local 677 president, said Wednesday they have not received official notification of the appointment.

Mr. Williams related two weeks after council and the firefighters' association failed to reach earlier this year, "council decided in caucus not to replace the man" who retired in March.

He explained a wording in the contract states, "all vacancies have to be filled within 14 days."

Mr. Williams said prior to council's rejection, Chief Lew Culhane of Belleville Fire Department submitted to the city to have the vacant spot filled, from the provincial fire marshal's office, a list of names of prospective arbitrators to council which rejected them out "as the solicitor general had to pick an arbitrator," Mr Williams said.

He elaborated saying council rejected the prospective arbitrators "on the basis that they didn't know any of the three."

When asked to comment, Belleville Mayor Ben Corke would only say, "the matter is still under review. That's the best word I can think of."

Chief Culhane said: "I asked for it (replacement) but council is the one who says we get a man or don't get a man. He declined to comment further.

Mr. Williams said, "we have another man retiring the first of anuary and Council probably won't replace him either. But I don't know their (aldermen's) thoughts on this."

He filled both past and future proceedings on the issue should be publicized "a lot of this stuff should be brought out so the public knows."

Mr. Purcell accepted the application and the panelists were advertised for.

He said following the rejection, "we went through the grievance procedure."

Mr. Williams remarked council went against its own management who recommended the man be replaced.

"They (aldermen) said 'you don't know what you're doing'," he said.

When talks broke down, the firefighters submitted three names of prospective arbitrators to council which rejected them out "as the solicitor general had to pick an arbitrator," Mr Williams said.

"Capt. Woodhouse was a member of the East End volunteer fire hall crew which first responded to the backlands blaze.

Mr. Williams said he understands the diagnosis was that Capt. Woodhouse's attack was "due to smoke inhalation" and suggested that had the crew had a full complement, the veteran would not have been forced to leave such an active role in fighting the fire, and therefore be in the position to inhale the smoke.

He explained a captain's role is usually one of supervision and co-ordination of his crew at a fire, leading a hand whenever required.

"We (the association) felt Capt. Woodhouse was working above and beyond the call of duty," Mr. Williams explained, "you can't damn sure think if Capt. Woodhouse had a full shift, he'd be working today."

Sure Keon's with Saints But So Is John Garrett

Write much of the pre-game ballyhoo will centre on Dave Keon prior to next Tuesday night's visit of Minnesota Fighting Saints to Maple Leaf Gardens for a World Hockey Association match with Toronto. Turon, many fans in this area will be interested in another angle.

Sure, the fact Keon is making his first visit to the Gardens since departing from the National Hockey League Leafs is worthy grist for the mill. And Dave's appearance might even put some paying customers in the seats.

But fans here will be interested in who gets the nod to play goal for the Saints.

John Garrett, who did his minor hockey puck stopping 12 miles up the road in Trenton, before graduating to the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A Peterborough Petes, has been getting much of the Minnesota workload recently.

If my memory isn't playing tricks, seems to me John has had some trying nights at the Gardens. A steady performer during his pro career, Garrett seems to come a cropper at MLG.

Toves did manage to pull off a 4-3 win over Calgary Wednesday night but Tuesday would be a poor time for the club's big shooters to break out with a bang, at least from our point of view.

And if Garrett is between the pipes for Saints, he could be on the spot, to be beaten Toves everyone will say it was to be expected, the way Bauer's skaters have been performing.

On the other hand, should Toves show some life and rattle in enough goals to win, the cry will be, Garden's jinx continues to haunt Garrett.

Either way, it will be good to see Keon in action. Now, if there were just some way we could be sure Minnesota coach Harry Neale will start the Trenton product in goal.

Enough of the WHA and Toves in particular, you say.

Right.

There's hockey of a more pressing nature right on our own doorstep.

Metro Junior B Hockey League action returns to Memorial Arena Friday night and this time, there's a new twist.

Whitby Young Bruins who will be here to match skills with the Bobcats, have finally broken their string of losses.

Tuesday night, the Whitby squad gave new coach Terry Richardson the has replaced Jack Minkey) a bonus by winning their first game of the season after 18 reversals.

And while they probably weren't thinking about Belleville, Young Bruins did Bobcats a favor at the same time. Kingston Voyageurs were the Whitby team's victims, falling 9-6. Voyageurs went into the game just three points back of third place Bobcats in the easier division standings. Thanks to Whitby's unexpected surge, Kingston wasn't able to breathe down Cats' neck.

If our side hopes to wreck Bruins' plans to make it two straight wins, it might be a good idea to keep Whitby's John L. Turner in check. He had four goals in the team's Tuesday win.

Win No. 2 for Whitby! Let's make them look elsewhere for it.

Cats Add Some Muscle

TONY MEAGHER

The Belleville Bobcats take on the Whitby Young Bruins at the Memorial Arena Friday night at 9 p.m. It is the last time the two clubs meet this season and it is the second last time the Cats play at home against a club from their own division.

When the Tabbies play the Bruins, their goal tap to date, in three previous meetings, Belleville has outscored the Whitby squad 25-10 and, needless to say, have won all three games.

The local Metro Junior B team is still looking for its 10th win of the year. After recording nine wins and a tie in their first 10 games, the Cats have been stifled in their last five starts. They have just one tie in those five.

A few changes have been made for Friday's starting lineup.

The locals will be showing a little more muscle at the blue line. Wearing number 24 for the Cats, tomorrow night, will be 20-year-old defenceman Jake Ayotte.

An all-star blue liner with Peterborough last season, Ayotte grabbed his release from Lindsay Senior A's and was signed Wednesday night by the Cats.

Another number to keep an eye on is 18. That one belongs to Tony Meagher. He appears to be getting back into his goal scoring groove. After scoring 12 goals in his first nine games, Meagher was held off the board in four straight starts. However, he has scored once in each of the Cats' last two games and in Belleville's previous three encounters with the Bruins he has four goals.

The Cats will also have their captain, number 14, Wayne Calberry back after serving a two-game suspension.

However, high flying forward Paul Hilley will not be back until the game of December 14 in Bramalea — he is serving a five-game suspension — and John Murphy is officially lost to the team for the remainder of the year — under doctor's orders. It also appears defenceman Dave Allen may be out for the season.

In any case, the Cats are hoping to snap a five game winless streak against Whitby Friday.

Aikens Skips To Win

As the curling season continues to run in high gear, the ladies are getting involved in some very competitive bonspiels.

On the weekend, the Ladies Quinte Cup Bonspiel was played, at the Quinte Curling Club.

"Close" was the key word for the event, as Marion Aikens' rink took the championship by just one end. Runners up, the Betty Kelsey rink, put on a fine show for spectators also.

In all, 12 rinks competed for the Quinte Roofing Company Cup. Two 10-end games were played.

Also with the Aiken's rink were Sylvia Grilli, Sue Armstrong and Maxine Lapierre.

Curling with Kelsey were Myrtle Sallaway, Mary Wormington and Iva Graham.

The one game high for the day was recorded by Madge Cowley's rink of Moyra McMullen, Marg Harvey and Barbara Tumbers.

Rev Quinney presented the trophies on behalf of Quinte Roofing Company.

Nicks Show the Saints Friday Win No Fluke

It was only Friday that Nicholson Catholic College seniors defeated Quinte Saints for the first time in the history of the Bay of Quinte Basketball Association. That victory came in the opening game of the McDonald's Belleville Basketball Classic.

Wednesday in the second senior doubleheader of the 1973-74 campaign, the Nicks opened their regular schedule with a convincing 52-40 win over the same Quinte squad. In the first half of the double header, Belleville Collegiate stopped Centennial Chargers 44-35.

The Nicks first victory over the Saints was a two point squeaker and, after the first two quarters Wednesday, it appeared the clubs would again indulge in a cliffhanger. The half time score was 25-25.

But the Nicks, led by six foot-seven centre Dale Wilson, held a strong edge in scoring in the second half and came out nine points up at the end of the contest.

Wilson popped in 24 points. Forward Jeff Boyle got 14 and guard Dave Holland counted seven for the winners.

The Nicks utilized their tight 3-2 zone defence to hold the 3-2 zone defence to hold the Saints to 40 at the scoreboard. Quinte shooters found the range a little better and their field goal completion percentage was considerably lower than usual.

Brian Hamilton was tops for Quinte with 13. Mike MacDonald got 10 and Steve McCracken was limited to seven.

BCI 44, CSS 31

The Collegians notched a fast break effectively in the first period of the game to rout the home, Centennial squad. Just eight minutes after the opening jump, BCI was in front 28-5. From there, they coasted to the win with strong, outside shooting.

Centre Gord Wright topped a well balanced BCI scoring attack with 13 points. Coach Mike Kirby had 14, and forwards Mitch Hannah and Brian Bell had 13 and 10, respectively.

John Hipwell topped the Chargers with 11 and Dave Long added 10.

Unsung Heroes, Hawks Flying

CHICAGO (AP) — No longer a team of stars and forward lines with glamorous names, Chicago Black Hawks are quietly rolling up a string of accomplishments.

They went through the month of November without a defeat, "something I can never remember doing 10 years I've been here," said coach Billy Reay.

They also are on the verge of setting a club record of consecutive games without a loss.

They extended their unbeaten streak to 15 games when they tied Pittsburgh Penguins 3-3 Wednesday night, matching a record set by the 1966-67 team which went on to win their first National Hockey League championship.

That unbeaten string goes on the line again tonight at Philadelphia, where the Hawks play the powerful Flyers.

A year ago the Hawks were favored to win their division but finished third behind Vancouver Canucks and St. Louis Blues after bowing to Buffalo Sabres in five games of the quarter-finals.

This year they currently hold a healthy lead over Vancouver and St. Louis with a record of sixty four losses against 10 victories and 10 ties.

"We are no longer a bunch of individuals playing for themselves," said Reay. "We are all playing for the club.

"The big difference is the games we were losing last year, we are tying this year.

"The month of November was really something. Even with the ties I'll take another month like it in December. Remember, we've been doing it in spite of having to scrap for points."

Sidelined during the November surge were centre Stan Mikita and defenceman Bill White. Defenceman Phil Russell also missed six games because of an injury.

Helping to counter the injuries was the effective performance of Bobby Sheehan with the addition of goalie Gilles Villemure from the New York Rangers to back up Tony Esposito.

"The difference this year is where we ended last year," said Mikita, who hopes to return to the lineup later this month. "The guys decided to work harder.

"Sheehan hasn't hurt us and Ivan Boldirev is all to a fantastic start. We're getting goals from everyone and not relying on just one or two players. The younger guys have gained confidence and if they make a mistake Espo or Villy step in and make up for it."

Unlike past seasons when Esposito had to do an iron man's job in the nets, this season Reay is not hesitant in resting Esposito.

"Villemure is an excellent goalie and I'm not saying I didn't have confidence in other goalies in the past," said Reay. "But last year we were behind and it seemed every game was a must game. When that happens you must go with what you think is your best."

Scouts Stun Canadiens 6-5

Habs Bring Out the Best in Paiment

By NEIL CAMPBELL
The Canadian Press

The reported $600,000 Kansas City Scouts paid Wilf Paiment to turn professional last season looked like a real investment Wednesday night.

The three goals the 30-year-old winger scored against Montreal helped the Scouts stun the powerful Canadiens 6-5 in a National Hockey League game.

Paiment is the first Kansas City player to score three goals in a single game in the team's two-year history. His feat enabled the Scouts to beat Montreal for the first time in the Missouri team's brief history.

His third goal of the game, set up by Larry Johnston and Guy Charron, turned out to be the winner, giving Kansas City a 6-4 lead.

If Paiment scored the decisive goals, it was the gutsiness of Denis Herron that kept the Scouts in the game. A Kansas City goalie for only 7,638 fans saw the little netminder block 37 shots.

Kansas City's surprising win was nearly fully NHL repeat Wednesday. Washington Capitals, who have the worst record in the league, managed a 4-4 tie with the strong Buffalo Sabres.

Minnesota North Stars, who have the second-worst record, overcame the more successful Los Angeles Kings 4-3 on Jean Ratelle's goal in the third period.

Crusaders' Coach Feels Sting

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

"I'm not going to put up with this much longer." Cleveland coach Johnny Wilson said Wednesday night after the Crusaders dropped a two-goal lead en route to a 5-3 loss to Cincinnati Stingers in a World Hockey Association game.

It was the fourth loss in five games for the Crusaders, but good news for the Stingers who had lost eight straight.

Wilson met with Crusader general manager Jack Vivian after the game to discuss the team's problems.

In Wednesday's only other WHA game, Frank Mahovlich scored twice for Toronto Toros in a 4-3 win over Calgary Cowboys.

Wilson blamed mental errors on defence for the 22 goals Cleveland has given up in its last three games. The Crusaders have scored 16 goals in the same span.

The coach said he thinks the players "should have an opportunity over the Clippers.

"You have highs and lows during a season," said Wilson. "We're experiencing a low right now."

He added that it "might be a Godsend to be in a slump now rather than late in the season.

"I wouldn't want to experience this with 10 days to go in the season, struggling to make the playoffs."

Cincinnati goalie John Kiely gave up two goals in the first period of his first major league start but settled down to keep the Crusaders in check while the Stingers were winning with four third-period goals.

Rick Dudley, Claude Larose, Jacques Locas and Dennis Sobchuck all got in on the Stingers' third-period scoring.

Gene Sobchuck had the other Cincinnati goal. Ron Ward, Paul Shmyr and Richie Leduc scored for Cleveland.

A Calgary crowd of 5,722 fans saw Mahovlich score his second goal with 61 seconds to play to give the Toros the win.

Tom Simpson and Rick Cunningham had the other Toronto goals. Ray Delorenzi, Frank Lacombe and Steve Hull scored for Calgary.

Rookie goalie Dave Talarym, playing his first WHA game, turned in a strong game for the Toros, stopping 31 shots. He was called up by the Toros from Barrie Flyers of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series.

Calgary's Butch Deadmarsh was tossed out of the game by referee Wayne Mundy after persisting in protesting against Mundy's failure to call what he thought should have been a penalty.

Tonight's WHA schedule has New England Whalers at Phoenix Roadrunners, Winnipeg Jets at San Diego Mariners and Cincinnati at Indianapolis Racers.

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — Joe Campagnola scored four goals to pace Chatham Maroons to an 11-3 win over Niagara Falls Flyers in the only Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League game Wednesday.

Bob Simkay, Marc Corbeil and Guy Lachapelle each scored twice for the second place Maroons. Scott McKenzie got the other.

Larry Landon, with two, and Kirk Mckay replied for Niagara Falls.

Chatham took period leads of 4-0 and 5-1 and outshot last-place Niagara Falls 40-41.

Voyageurs Up Lead in North

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nova Scotia Voyageurs increased their lead in the American Hockey League's Northern Division standings Wednesday night, winning their first game in the last six.

Guy Chouinard scored a power-play goal at 8:55 of the overtime period to give the Voyageurs a 5-4 victory over Providence Reds and 22 points in the standings, three points ahead of second-place Rochester Americans.

Chouinard scored on a quick wrist shot from 30-feet out after he had inserting past Providence Pierre Mondou from behind the Providence net.

In the only other scheduled game, Springfield Indians de feated Baltimore Clippers 5-3.

Mike Polich scored two goals for the Voyageurs and Chouinard, Ken Houston and Glen Goldup added one goal each.

Although the Voyageurs outshot the visiting Reds 43-28, Providence lead for the entire game until Chouinard's overtime goal.

The Reds led 2-0 at the end of the first on the strength of Byers' two goals.

In the second period, Babin scored for Providence but the Voyageurs came back with three consecutive goals to tie the score at 3-3. The Reds retained the lead with seconds left in the period on Greg Holst's goal.

The only goal of the third period was Polich's second of the night at 7:07, tying the score at 4-4.

At Springfield, two goals in a nine-second span of the third period lifted the Indians to victory over the Clippers.

Defenceman Jim McElmury scored his second goal of the night at 15:33 in the third period to snap a 3-3 tie. His shot from the right point glanced off Baltimore goalie Dave Hammarstrom's shoulder and dropped across the goal line.

Center Kerry Ketlin made it 5-3 for the Indians when he scored on a two-man break.

The Indians opened the scoring in the first period on McElmury's first goal of the game, taking Billy Inglis' pass near the goal-mouth.

Dennis Giamboi got in Jerry Budlik's rebound to tie the score early in the second period. But Springfield took charge again on goals by Bob Paffhausen and Murray Kunst to go out 5-3.

Giamboi's second goal of the night and another goal by Jack Egers pulled the Clippers even at 3-3 midway in the third period before Springfield put the game away.

The AHL schedule resumes Friday with Nova Scotia at Providence and New Haven at Rochester.

Denver Needs $1.5 Million

DENVER (AP) — The World Hockey Association Denver Spurs will fold by the end of the month if financial help for owner Ivan Mullenix can't be found, The Rocky Mountain News says.

The News said that Mullenix, St. Louis businessman, has been meeting with mayor William McNichols and other city officials for the last 10 days in an effort to devise a solution to the team's financial problems.

The meetings were launched after Mullenix decided not to invest any more of his personal funds in the team, the newspaper said.

Mullenix, who said Wednesday he has spent $4.1 million of his own money and personally guaranteed a loan for $1 million, needs an estimated $1.5 million to allow the team to play out the remainder of the season, the News said.

"Now is the time for a person or persons to come forward if they want it to be saved in Denver," the owner said. "Business enterprises today can't be owned by one individual any more, particularly by someone who doesn't live in the city.

Mullenix said his team has the poorest attendance record of any in the league, with an average of only 2,200 fans at each game in the new McNichols Sports Arena. The league attendance average is almost 8,000, he said.

Beavers On Move

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jere Gillis scored two goals Wednesday night helping Sherbrooke Beavers defeat Chicoutimi Sagueneens 7-3 in a Quebec Major Junior Hockey League game.

The victory enabled the Beavers to increase their first-place lead in the West Division to six points over second-place Montreal Royals.

In another game, Sorel Black Hawks and Shawinigan Dynamos played to a 4-4 tie.

In Sherbrooke, Daniel Chicoine, Fernand Leblanc, Bernard Harbec, Robert Simpson and Ray Roy were the other Sherbrooke goal getters in the game watched by 3,615 fans.

Daniel Dufresne, Robert Leblanc and Maurice Sylvestre were the Chicoutimi marksmen.

The Beavers held a 35-24 edge in shots on goal and took 16 minutes in minor penalties assessed by referee Pierre Gibeau of Montreal.

Penalties were plentiful in the game at Sorel.

Referee Jean-Guy Desrochers assessed 125 minutes in penalties as a result of the first-period melee which broke out at 9:31. Included in the penalty totals were 10 game misconducts and a match penalty as well as 18 majors. Only four minors were assessed during the rest of the game.

Gary Platt's second goal of the night at 18:32 of the third period gave Sorel the tie.

Yvon Blais and Gilles Parenteau were the other Sorel marksmen before 1,189 fans.

Gilles Gelinas scored twice for the Dynamos with singles going to Kevin Kelly and J. M. Vaillancourt.

Sorel outshot Shawinigan 48-41.

Tonight, Hull goes to Cornwall.

Reverse Result

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association has reversed the result of a Senior A game played Nov. 18 between Toronto Marlboros and Toronto Twins, giving the victory to the Flyers.

The decision puts Barrie in first place in the league standings and drops the Twins to second place.

Thunder Bay won the game 5-4 and was awarded four points since league rules. With the reversal, Barrie now has 37 points and the Twins 32.

The league's protest committee ruled that Thunder Bay allowed John Croteau to play while he was under a suspension handed out Nov. 8, said Barry Bellaire, league convenor. Croteau and a Barrie player, Bob Monteith, received game misconducts for off-ice fighting. The offence carries an automatic two-game suspension.

Scallen Sues Hawks

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A $4-million suit has been filed by Thomas Scallen against the National Hockey League's Chicago Black Hawks and their owner, Arthur Wirtz.

Scallen, former president of the NHL's Vancouver Canucks, is a former president of Medical Investment Corp. (Medicor). He seeks to regain control of the firm from the Black Hawks and Wirtz.

In 1973, Scallen was sentenced to four years in jail for theft of $3 million and for issuing a false prospectus while president of Medicor.

In the suit filed in U.S. district court in Minneapolis, Scallen says he has the 600,000 Medicor shares held by Wirtz temporarily returned to Medicor. That would restore Scallen's position as controlling stockholder.

The suit contends the Wirtz shares were bought under false pretenses and in pursuit of a secret plan to obtain absolute control of Medicor. The holdings enabled Wirtz to oust Scallen at the annual meeting last month.

Swiss Come Through

VAL D'ISERE, France (CP) — Bernadette Zurbriggen, one of two Swiss girls favored to succeed retiredr Annemarie Proell-Moser of Austria as women's world cup skiing champion, won the first cup downhill race of the season Tuesday.

She won the event in one minute, 26.07 seconds to beat Irene Epple of West Germany who was timed in 1:26.07. Marie-Therese Nadig, the other favorite to succeed Mrs. Moser as champ, finished third in 1:26.86.

Also in the top 10 was Betsy Clifford of Old Chelsea Que., who finished in seventh place with a time of 1:27.2.

Kathy Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., won 1975 at 1:29.26; Karen Cloutier, Lorraine, Que., was 29th at 1:29.40; Laurie Kreiner of Timmins was 32nd at 1:29.70 and Susan Clifford of Old Chelsea placed 40th at 1:31.54.

Competition continues today with the women's giant slalom.

10 Rough Riders Named to EFC All-star Team

By MEL SUFRIN
CP Sports Editor

For the second time in five years a Notre Dame graduate has been named Eastern Football Conference all-star quarterback in his rookie season.

Tom Clements, the 21-year-old who topped the East in passing as he led Ottawa Rough Riders to a first-place finish, is the 1975 choice.

He duplicates the feat of Joe Theismann who came out of the same college in 1971 and led Toronto Argonauts to a first-place finish.

The only major difference is that while the former became the Grey Cup final that year, losing to Calgary Stampeders, the Rough Riders failed to make it past the Eastern final, being beaten by Montreal Alouettes.

A couple of guys who rushed for more than 1,000 yards and an ordinary superstar who set a record for running back punts are the running backs on the 1975 team, named by the Football Reporters of Canada.

Art green of Ottawa Rough Riders, who led the East in rushing with 1,188 yards on 258 carries, and Doyle Orange of Hamilton, second with 1,055 yards on 205 rushes, provide the power while Johnny Rodgers of Montreal, who ran back punts for 811 yards in the 14 games, is the threat.

Tony Gabriel of Ottawa, the leading pass receiver in the conference with 73 catches for 1,115 yards, finds himself in an unaccustomed position. He's one of two wide receivers, the other being Terry Evanshen of Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Peter Dalla Riva of Montreal was named all-star tight end, the position at which Gabriel plays and the spot at which he was previously named to the team in 1973 and 1974 when he was with the Tiger-Cats.

Ottawa has the dominant force on the team, naming 10 players—five on offence and five on defence—while the Alouettes, who went to the Grey Cup where they were beaten 9-8 by Edmonton Eskimos, put nine men on the squad—five on offence and four on defence.

The reps had one player on offence and three on defence while Evanshen was the only Tiger-Cat.

Clements, along with Guard Dave Braggins and centre Wayne Conrad, both of Montreal, was a near-unanimous choice for the offensive team while Toronto's Jim Corrigall at defensive end and Montreal's Glen Weir at tackle were near-unanimous picks for the defence.

Veteran of the team is Jerry Campbell, Ottawa' middle linebacker, named for the seventh time in eight seasons. His only miss since 1968 was 1971.

The longevity of defensive players is reflected in the fact that six of the 12 on defence were picked for at least two third time while only four offensive players have as many as two previous nominations.

Corrigall made the squad in 1971, '73 and '73, outside linebacker Mike Widger of Montreal was picked for the fifth time since 1970, defensive back Dick Adams of Ottawa was named for the fourth consecutive year, defensive back Woodward and Montreal's Dickie Harris were named for the third time.

Granville Liggins of Toronto was named to the defensive back position for the first time but he was a member of several all-star teams in the West with Calgary Stampeders before being traded to the Argos.

Junior Ah You of Montreal was chosen as defensive end for the second straight year and Mark Korroso of Ottawa made it a middle linebacker for the first time. Other first-time choices are defensive backs Larry Uteck of Toronto and Wayne Tosh of Ottawa.

Three of the players previously named the best in the East were included in the all-star lineup. Corrigall had been picked the top defensive player in the EFC, Braggins, Montreal guard, had been named best offensive lineman, and Clements had been chosen rookie of the year. The only award winner missing from the team is Tom Foley, Ottawa linebacker, named the East's top Canadian.

Tom Schuette of the Rough Riders is the other guard and Jeff Turcotte of Ottawa and Ben Yochum of Montreal the offensive tackles. Yochum for the third consecutive year.

Clements, who connected in 144 of 322 passes for 2,013 yards and a 57.1 percentage, captured the No. 1 quarterback job with the Rough Riders from Condredge Holloway, the rookie from the University of Tennessee.

Although he lacked the running ability of Holloway, he displayed the sort of poise that prompted Ottawa general manager Frank Clair to say he has the potential to become the best quarterback ever in the Canadian Football League.

Speaking of coaches, that he doesn't follow Theismann's example and leave for the National Football League after a few seasons, Theismann now is third-string quarterback with Washington Redskins.

Nastase Rolling

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Ilie Nastase of Romania outderelled Italy's Adriano Panatta, 7-6, 7-6, 6-0, Wednesday and continued his comeback in the $100,000 Masters tennis tournament.

Nastase began the week by being disqualified in a match against Arthur Ashe of the United States, but he still has a chance of reaching the semi-finals under a complicated set of rules at this round-robin event.

Ashe plays Manuel Orantes of Spain in the final match of the White Group today. If Ashe wins, he and Nastase will go into the semi-finals. If Orantes wins, both Ashe and Orantes will go through.

Guillermo Vilas of Argentina and Bjorn Borg of Sweden, each with two victories in three matches, will go into the semi-finals. They play each other Thursday.

NICKS — Brian and Brenda (nee Kitchen) are pleased to announce the safe arrival of their son, Daniel Patrick, at the Belleville General Hospital on December 1, 1975, weighing 8 lbs., 10 ozs. Proud grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Nicks of Dr. Ahoy and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd S.

In Memoriam

HALBOW — In loving memory of my dear husband, Ernest Halbow, who passed away in the hospital bed to heavenly rest.
God took you home to be His guest, your work on earth was done and well done.
With farewells left unspoken you quietly slipped away.
Your suffering much, in silence, your pain we could not see.
You fought with courage to the very end.
It's hard to have to stay with us but God wanted you to win.
Your memory we will bring home and keep with us.
Until we meet with you back again to rejoice all that pain.
If you could have spoken before you left us.
I know the words we would have together.
This life for me is very sad,
I loved you and to me you were the best.
Now I am left to mourn your loss.
And love and memories are all I have.
Oh you who have a mother, love and cherish her.
You will not know the heartache till you have lost her.
Sadly missed by wife Ethel, daughter Jan, son-in-law Ken, grandchildren Lori and Kevin, and all the family.

KEPPY — In loving memory of a dear father, Tex Agnew, who passed away December 4, 1974.
God gave me a wonderful father,
I loved him dearly, I miss him so,
But I'll remember the days we shared together,
Until I go.
The troubled hot heart of pure gold,
He sleeps a new star in heaven.
Two blue eyes turned to grey,
A smile that will rest on his face for aye.
Dear father, dear sister of mine,
Thank God mother's waiting over there.

HARRISON — In memory of a dear friend, Gisela, who passed away Dec. 5, 1974.
Only a memory of bygone days.
A smile, a look, a word we say.
A cherished thought, a memory dear,
Comes just what should have been.
Sadly missed by Jean and Bill.

ANDERSON — In loving memory of Mother Sadie and Father Arthur Anderson who passed away Dec. 4, 1971.
A golden gate closed upon
A year's sad history,
With farewells left unspoken,
And memories slipped away.
Sadly missed by daughter Lois, Gary and Verne and family.

CARDS OF THANKS

We would like to thank our relatives, neighbors and friends, also the staff of Ward 3 of the Belleville General Hospital for their kindness and sympathy and Funeral Home for the special care at the time of the loss of our dear mother, also to Rosh Caplan Dean of the Lecture Hall for the beautiful service and to the choir of Bridge Street United Church for the use of it during bereavement, our sincere thanks.
— The family of Cecile Fox

ELSIN — We wish to thank all those relatives, friends and neighbors who called at the funeral home, sent cards and donations or called by telephone during the illness and death of our father, Elsin Wellington, also Rev. Ken Hall, Dr. Ahoy, Dr. Mowbray's Funeral Home and Mr. Skinner.
— Mr. and Mrs. Clarence High, Barry, Dianne and Clinton.

The family of the late Sherry Dawson would like to express their sincere thanks to relatives, friends and neighbours for their kindness and sympathy in their hour of bereavement. Special thanks to the ladies who provided the lunch, Rev. Ken Hall, Dr. Ahoy, Dr. Mowbray, Mr. Skinner, Mr. Thompson and also Thompson Funeral Home.

On behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Cross and family, Rosella, I would like to thank those who helped in collecting for their bereavement. For cash, gifts and cards received on this happy occasion.
— Mr. and Mrs. Irving Cross Family.

ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. Malcom McNeill of Sydney wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Sandra Holly to Carl Arthur, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Yeakley, R.R. 5, Belleville. Wedding to take place December 20, in Trinity United Church, Newmarket.

Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

Friday, Dec. 5

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's good to be optimistic, but today you overdo it a bit and stamp "Mission Accomplished" on projects just begun.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be careful today about telling little white lies. You'll have to fib again to cover your tracks. Things will balloon out of all proportion.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If at all possible, try not to advise friends regarding their financial affairs today. It could create duplicate matters.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A strong ego helps, but you probably will not be the popular today. It may only serve to bring others off.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you feel a Leo sluggish today, it's because you've been too lazy to exercise. A brisk walk could help.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Overindulgence is the main temptation you have to guard against today. Keep the old waistline in mind.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't spring any uninvited guests on your spouse today. The last thing that's desired is entertaining a houseful of people.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It's better to talk face-to-face with someone you've lied to or misled. Wish you'd done that?

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't pamper your yen to be extravagant. Back away from anything that even appears to be of an expensive nature today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19) Above all, don't put on airs today in order to impress anyone today. If they don't accept you as you truly are, it will be their loss.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You have a tendency today to embellish the truth. When you're trying to make others take notice, it may have the opposite effect.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Shy away from a pal who feels that what you have is his as well. He'd be the first to back off if the roles were reversed.

Eskimo Carvers Have Bone to Pick With U.S. Over Whalebone Embargo

OTTAWA (CP) — Julien Bellviveau, an Eskimo sculptor and president of Canadian Arctic Producers, has a few bones to pick.

Mr. Bellveau picks whalebones when he carves the kind of sculptures that are sold by Canadian Arctic Producers, a wholesale art dealership now controlled by the Eskimo cooperatives after five years in business.

Figuratively speaking, Mr. Bellveau has a bone to pick with the government of the United States, which ratified in 1976 the Endangered Species Act, resulting in an embargo on cheetah furs, leopard skins and whalebones.

The embargo is ironic because Eskimo whalebone sculptures are made from whalebones and lized remains of whales killed centuries ago. Fresh whalebone is green and it rots. Before it can be made into carving tools, whalebone must be bleached and dried for years.

Even bones from the 19th century, when whalers from Scotland and America hunted in the Arctic seas, are not prized by collectors.

Truly precious as a carving material is ivory, which is entertained in a baneful of people.

3.2 Million Young People Flooding Canadian Bars

By GERARD McNEIL

Influenced by the growing use of illicit drugs, the provinces began lowering the legal drinking age in 1970. One beneficiary has been the nation's brewers who are annually slugging out 45 million gallons more beer and ale than they did five years ago.

Much of it evidently is gurgling down the throats of the 3.2 million teen-agers. One televised beer commercial tells youngsters their first beer may not taste so good, but give the stuff time.

Other commercials portray beer drinkers swimming, water skiing, fishing, but never drowning. An Opportunities for Youth study found alcohol a factor in one-third of the country's drownings.

While the Le Dain federal commission on non-medical use of drugs was identifying alcohol as "our most widespread drug dependence problem," the last of the provinces was lowering the minimum legal drinking age from 21.

British Columbia and Saskatchewan led the way in 1970. Manitoba, Alberta, Ontario and Quebec dropped their minimums in 1971. Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick followed in 1972 and Nova Scotia was the last to join the trend in 1973.

Now many high-school students in Halifax hunch at nearby taverns. As in Vancouver, some of the taverns are also used to buy and sell drugs.

The legal minimum is 18 in the three Prairie provinces. Ontario, Quebec and Prince Edward Island and 19 in the other four provinces. But just as 18-year-olds used to pass for 21 to buy liquor, 18-year-olds pass for 19 now.

One of them was Paul Demchuk, 18, driver of a car in which he and four other students were killed Aug. 17 near Dauphin, Man. Pursued by RCMP, Demchuk drove at speeds up to 115 miles an hour before his car catapulted out of control.

His blood alcohol level was .13, compared with the legal limit of .08.

The Manitoba Liquor Control Commission, in a campaign aimed at adults as well as teenagers, has warned that civil lawsuits can be brought against those supplying liquor that results in accidents. This applies not only to bartenders who allow a drunken patron to stagger off, but also at private parties.

"The impetus will be towards mothers and wives starting civil actions against bars, and hosts who serve men who get drunk and go out and get killed," commission chairman J. Frank Syms of Winnipeg said.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press left no doubt that teens more and more will be involved in accidents as a result of drinking.

In Alberta traffic deaths among 16-to 19-year-olds went up nearly eight-fold, to 23 from three, in the three months after the legal drinking age was lowered to 18.

A 1970 survey of Metropolitan Toronto schools found 46 per cent of students in Grades 7 to 13 admitted drinking. The percentage went to 74 four years later after the age limit was lowered to 18.

In Newfoundland, not only did 95 per cent of students replying to a questionnaire admit drinking, 27 per cent said they drove while doing so. Their average age was 15.5 years.

In Ontario, the number of impaired drivers aged 16 to 19 picked up in 1972 tripled 1970 figures.

"Parents are happy their children are 'only drinking' and not taking drugs," said Renaid Chabot, spokesman for a Montreal alcoholism treatment group.

"This attitude is wrong because 'only drinking' is as bad or sometimes worse than taking drugs. It has many long-term effects.

"Drinking tends to change the pattern of a person's life more than smoking a joint does."

Halifax social worker Michael Crowell said it is hard to come up with an alternative to a tavern but alternatives are needed. He said liquor advertising seduces youth.

"As long as there is advertising, and children are indoctrinated to it, it's going to be the thing to do."

It has all been a boon for the brewers and distillers, who only a few years ago saw a gloomy future as youth seemed to turn to soft drugs such as marijuana. Marijuana was outlawed early in the century.

The people who sold the culture's oldest drug, alcohol, were as alarmed as parents at the emergence of a competitor. Lowering the legal drinking age not only made illegal soft drugs less attractive, it made beer, promoted by advertising, more attractive.

See Kenya For Only $69

OTTAWA (CP) — For $69 the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) will let your child experience Kenya, Malaysia and Algeria.

How? Through a multi-media kit designed for public schools called Spotlight on Developement.

"Basically we're trying to get Canadian kids to realise that there is more than our culture around and try to make them aware of the similarities, rather than the differences," said Jim White.

The young, energetic head of CIDA's audio-visual services, who spent three years pulling together the kit, hopes that it will make children more aware of their responsibilities as members of the richer part of the world.

"If we plug our kids into other cultures at a young age, by the time they grow up they will have an appreciation of life elsewhere and perhaps, with luck, they will actively participate in the development process, maybe by serving overseas, or by giving time and money to voluntary agencies engaged in development assistance programs abroad."

The kit, which includes among other things four film strips with cassette tape narration, shows children the lives of other children of a different race, religion and values. They hear the language spoken and the sounds of the country concerned.

"I hope the children will begin to realize that although something is different, it is not necessarily wrong. You'd be surprised how much kids can learn about their own country, their own environment, when they start asking questions about life in another country."

The kit also includes a teacher's guide, a pop-up globe, a cookbook with simple recipes from developing countries, a songbook with everything from a Nigerian lullaby to an Italian folksong and, several children's stories from around the world.

"Shake 'Em Up Comics" presents the adventures of Billy Buyer in Africa, and Mr. White hopes this new addition to the kit will help dispel some misconceptions children have.

Although only five copies of the comic book come with the kit, more are available free to schools from CIDA upon request.

The National Film Board and UNICEF Canada also participated in the project, and UNICEF is arranging for classes of children who use the kit to become pen-pals with their counterparts in developing countries.

"The children will be encouraged to exchange letters and cultural media — things like stamps, coins, 45 rpm records, newspapers, post cards — in an attempt to make the study of international development an experience," Mr. White said.

The kit will probably be in use for the next 10 years, he predicted. He hopes to add a film strip on a Latin American country and one on how foreigners see Canadian culture.

Mr. White said between $100,000 and $150,000 was spent over the last three years developing the kit, and its price just covers the cost of materials.

A French version, Coup d'oeil sur le développement international, will soon be available.

Exchange Mail

WINNIPEG (CP) — Insurance agents have set up their own mail delivery system that will involve every kind of mail, says Tom Adlard, president of the Insurance Agents' Association of Manitoba. He said the purpose of the system is to overcome uneasiness of policy holders who, as their policies are renewed, want copies of their own. Delivery of mail is another reason for the system.

Sinclair Says Concern In Media Not Needed

TORONTO (CP) — Gordon Sinclair's creased features appear on the screen and the old curmudgeon snarls: "Violence in the media is a lot of bunk."

"What about Shakespeare, Macbeth?" Sinc rasps on. "Can you imagine opera without violence? The idea that we should be a bunch of sanity-panties is nonsense. Violence is a part of life and you're not going to stamp it out."

The movie—showing sadistic TV scenes and screaming newspaper headlines—is shown at the opening of public sittings of the Ontario government's royal commission on violence in the communications industry headed by Judy LaMarsh, lawyer, broadcaster and former Liberal federal cabinet minister.

Miss LaMarsh and her colleagues — newspaper columnist Scott Young and family court judge Lucien Beaulieu—are conducting what is believed to be the world's first in-depth inquiry into the affects, particularly on the young, of violence portrayed over the whole range of media.

"We're trying," the chairman says, "to do a job that will stand for all Canada, and, for the forseeable future, for anyone who's interested around the world."

But so far a large part of the interest has centred on the $732,000 estimated cost of the commission, especially in the light of the fact that the provincial government has no jurisdiction over broadcasting, where most of any ill-affects from violence are supposed to emanate.

Miss LaMarsh gets $250 per working day, Mr. Young $180, Judge Beaulieu receives his $34,000-a-year judicial salary.

Two full-time researchers get $150 a day each, or about $39,000 a year.

During the Ontario general election campaign in September, Liberal Leader Robert Nixon promised that the first thing he would do if he became premier would be to fold the LaMarsh commission.

NDP Leader Stephen Lewis called its establishment an election ploy by the Progressive Conservative government of William Davis, and called the researchers' pay "a quite wanton use of public money."

"Peanuts," Miss LaMarsh sneers about her daily pay. "I get twice that for a television show I do once a week. Most people who know me wonder why I'm working for so little."

The commission intends to take a hard look at all facets of communication — TV, movies, the theatre, books, periodicals, comics, records and others — and is allowing itself about 1½ years in do the job.

Appointed last May, it spent several months on snadework and began public hearings in October; in all, there will be sittings in 36 communities, stretching until about mid-1976. The report is expected around the end of 1976.

While the commissioners take submissions from the public, the research staff under Kenneth Merchant, 30, who did a similar job for an Ontario legislature committee on cultural and economic nationalism, is assessing research done elsewhere and undertaking new studies.

It is sizing up the picture in more than 20 countries, a number of which—including France, Sweden and Mexico—have acted to put curbs on television violence.

Particular attention is being paid in the United States, because of the great volume of U.S. material that flows across the border on the airwaves, through cable TV and on programs sold to Canadian stations.

A recent U.S. development is getting special study—a Congress - inspired movie between the Federal Communications Commission and the TV networks to limit violence in what is regarded as "family time" between 7 p.m. and 9 p.m.

Mr. Merchant is not impressed with the results to date, and even less so because the thinking here is that the children-watching period runs more like 4-9 p.m.

The literature on the subject of media violence and its effect on people's lives is surprisingly large. The research staff has gathered together more than 2,600 books and articles.

So far, virtually all submissions from the public have dealt with TV violence, though William L. Lovell, a retired school inspector on Manitoulin Island, said that among the factors contributing to increased crime is "the generally low moral tone of radio, TV and the printed word."

A shocker for the commission was the claim of other Manitoulin residents that a wave of seven suicides of young Indians was touched off by a suicide scene in The Young Centurions, shown last December.

Loretta Pelletier said the first suicide came a week after the showing and five more followed "almost one a month." The seventh occurred in November.

Coroner Jack Bailey told the commission he is making a special investigation of the suicides.

James McGrath, Progressive Conservative MP for St. John's East, drew the commission's attention in the March, 1974, death of a 13-year-old Calgary boy, found hanged by a clothesline.

The inquest coroner said in his report he was of the opinion the boy was trying to emulate a TV program showing how a character could survive the act of hanging.

Mr. McGrath, who has introduced a bill in the Commons to force the Canadian Radio-Television Commission to set guidelines concerning the portrayal of sex and violence on TV, said that "our society is fostering violence by its heavy pre-occupation with violence on the stage, film and especially TV."

The MP produced some eye-opening statistics from the U.S. which he cited as relevant to Canada because of the heavy flow of American programs across the border:

—By the time a child has reached Grade 8, he has watched the violent assault or destruction of almost 1,800 persons on TV.

—A child may see in his 90 minutes on TV as much violence as most adults experience in a lifetime.

—In the 1974-75 season, 82 per cent of all children's programs were "dense with violence" compared with 17 per cent for 20 years earlier.

He also quoted a New York psychologist as saying: "The more violence and aggression a youngster sees on TV, the more aggressive he is likely to be in his own attitudes and behavior."

dr. McGrath urged that the Ontario government press the federal government to bring in regulations under the Broadcasting Act to restrict the import and the use on cable TV of violent foreign programs.

A number of student groups have initiated their own studies on TV violence and placed the results before the commission. One consisted of 66 Grade 10 students at Laura Secord secondary school in St. Catharines.

Their survey showed that in 194 instances of TV violence, only 11 aggressors were punished with the result that "the lesson learned by the viewer is that he may use violence to get what he wants without fear of punishment."

The students recommended that, in view of the difficulties involved in parental censorship of the family set, the federal government should use a form of censorship involving guidelines on how violence is to be treated.

Suitable lawful punishment should be seen to be imposed on aggressors. Extreme violence should not be shown as farcical, since this tends to portray it as acceptable by society.

Clowns Abound

Dozens of clowns abounded in Belleville's recent Santa Claus parade. This one was part of a mock fire engine entry. The engine would stop periodically along the route while its several clown occupants would leap off and walk along the crowds. And without warning, they would throw a pail of confetti at unsuspecting spectators, much to the delight of the youngsters.

Saved from Scrap Heap And Still Going Strong

LUNENBURG, N.S. (CP) — At 31 years of age, the N. V. Vema is one of the oldest of oceanographic ships afloat but her captain says she is a finer vessel now than when she was saved from the scrap heap 17 years ago and still has a life expectancy of 13 years.

The Vema has been used as an oceanographic ship ever since the Lamont-Doherty Geological Observatory of Columbia University in New York purchased her in 1955.

"They have done nothing except to improve her year by year and today they have developed a vessel that is versatile in every manner and extremely seaworthy," Captain Henry C. Kohler, her Lunenburg-born skipper since 1957, said during a recent visit here. "She's rather short on creature comforts but she's very long on data gathering. And this is really why we exist."

She was built in 1923 at Copenhagen for the Hatton family of Woolworth fame, using such good materials that after more than half a century the Vema "is just as sound as when she was built, actually more sound due to the care and money that has been put into her."

The 202-foot vessel, displacing 900 tons, was sold by the Hattons in 1932 because she was too small for the family's social activities. She was purchased by an American who renamed her by combining his first two initials with his wife's first two initials to come up with the name Vema.

Later, she became a United States merchant marine training ship and in 1949 she was sold to a scrap dealer.

In 1953 Captain Louis Kennedy found the Vema in a States Island scrapyard and purchased her. "Mostly I think he loved her lines," said Captain Kohler.

Captain Kennedy chartered the vessel to the Lamont Geological Observatory and three months later the observatory bought her.

The Vema has a reputation for surpassing all records for oceanographic ships. She will pass her millionth mile of oceanographic work this year.

At the time of her purchase the Vema's crew was entirely from this province, and Captain Kohler said he is pleased that "from that day forward the director and his successor have insisted on having a Nova Scotian crew" with a few Newfoundlanders included for balance.

The ship carries a sailing crew of 10 and a scientific team of 15 students, technicians, senior professors and research scientists.

The Vema explores all the world's major oceans, spending at least 220 days a year at sea and sometimes 265 days.

Her research is mainly in the field of marine geophysics, especially seismic refraction work and studies of ocean sediments.

Much of the information is of great value to oil companies. Captain Kohler said. In 1954 the Vema did the original seismic survey of the Sable Island area, where a natural gas discovery was made in 1970.

Professor Claims Airline Hurt By Decisions

VANCOUVER (CP) — Air Canada, the country's federally-owned airline, is being hurt by political decisions, says a University of British Columbia professor.

Dr. Karl Ruppenthal, director of the university's centre for transportation studies, said in an interview the degree of political interference in Air Canada's operation is incredible.

"Symptomatic of this interference is the decision to defer out maintenance work to Winnipeg against the advice of management which has sought a centralized operation in Montreal," he said.

Dr. Ruppenthal, a pilot for Trans World Airlines for 26 years, also said management personnel should be selected on the basis of their ability and not for political reasons.

"Management should be set clear goals and then left unhindered to achieve them," he said. "If objectives are not met, those responsible for failure should be sent packing."

Dr. Ruppenthal said CP Air, on the other hand, "has a good understanding of its markets and of the limitations placed upon it by competition and government. It is forecasting a loss this year, but is the long run should be able to take advantage of any improvement in the general situation."

Canada's Auto Makers Achieve High Sales

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada's Big Four auto makers have achieved all-time high sales levels for November, continuing a 1975 boom in the Canadian industry.

Led by Ontario where a sales rebate, due to expire Dec. 31, has stimulated sales, the companies sold 76,686 cars in November, and 22,617 trucks.

Ford sold 18,879, North American-built passenger cars last month, up 4.3 per cent from the previous high of 17,825, set in 1973, and seven per cent above November, 1974.

General Motors of Canada Ltd.'s November car sales of 27,399 exceeded the previous monthly record by 34 per cent and were 73 per cent ahead of last year's 21,570 units.

Chrysler of Canada Ltd. said retail deliveries of 17,066 cars during November were up 41.3 per cent over the 12,391 cars delivered in the same month last year, and were 13.3 per cent higher than the previous record of 15,570 delivered in November, 1972.

American Motors had retail sales of 2,951 cars for the month, the highest November in the company's history.

In the United States, November car sales posted their sharpest year-to-year percentage gain since 1971. They rose 35 per cent above the previous November, when the industry was in a recession slump.

French Businessman Will Visit Canada

LYON, France (CP) — A delegation of French businessmen and financiers will visit Canada in 1976, Don Jamieson, Canada's minister of industry, trade and commerce, announced Wednesday.

Jamieson made the announcement at a meeting of French industrialists in this manufacturing centre 300 miles southeast of Paris. Accompanied by Gerard Pelletier, Canada's ambassador to France, Jamieson attended the meeting to explain Canada's foreign investment policy.

Jamieson said the French delegation will inspect Canadian sites for future factories and investigate possibilities for joint ventures. The Canadian delegation wants to attract foreign investment.

5 Artists Withdraw Art Exhibit Work

By SUE McCONNELL
Staff Reporter

Five internationally known artists have withdrawn their work from the Belleville Biennial Art Show at Corby Public Library, leaving the work of only 19 artists on display.

Spokesman for the group Peter Costello said the work was withdrawn because of an unworthy presentation.

Mr. Costello said when the artists arrived for the preview Wednesday night the art was still in crates. He said there were only rough wooden boxes designed to bestead to display the pottery pieces.

Artists Harian Howe, Gordon and Audrey Davies and Lis and Peter Costello withdrew most of their pottery, almost 30 pieces, after the exhibition opened Wednesday night.

The five Belleville area artists produced work for the show that was a combination of several months of work.

Sole organizer of the exhibition, Dave Brocksidy, blamed the disorganization on a lack of funds and "know-how".

Mr. Brocksidy said Thursday he did not know he would need help in arranging the art during the planning stages of the show.

The exhibition features approximately 19 artists internationally known with paintings, photography, sculpture and pen and ink sketches on display.

Mr. Brocksidy, also a potter, said he hoped this first show would become a tradition in Belleville.

"This is purely a professional show — it's stronger than the usual piece of art you see in Belleville at any one time," he said.

Mr. Brocksidy added that should another show be planned he will make an application for a Canada Council grant and "do it properly."

The show will continue at Corby Public Library until Dec. 20 in the Upper and Lower galleries.

Kennel Club Will Protest Pure-breds Rate Increase

BY SUE McCONNELL
Staff Reporter

The Belleville and District Kennel Club (BDKC) plans to draft a letter to City Council requesting the proposed increase in rates for owners of pure-bred dog kennels be lowered, president Lee Marks said Thursday.

Mr. Marks said the letter will be drafted at a board of directors meeting Tuesday.

The BDKC will propose $15 as the increase instead of $25 as per the council, Mr. Marks said in $18.

City Council approved a draft Monday night of a new ordinance that will increase the cost of keeping dogs.

The increase in costs is the largest single increase for kennel owners.

Mr. Mark said he assumed council was taking action on a complaint received about dogs making a disturbance.

"The high price is hitting the kennel people as if they were at fault with the noise."

Mr. Mark, who also operates a kennel of three golden Retrievers, said he was first surprised at the increase of rates.

The individual dog owner might think it's steep but maybe they will close their dogs off the streets," he said.

Proposed Licence Fees Not Really New: Purcell

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Writer

Dog licence fees proposed for a new city ordinance aren't changed much after all.

However, the Belleville and District Kennel Club is planning to protest the proposed bylaw that would move than double kennel fees.

Monday, city council was asked to consider a bylaw draft setting out new licence fees. It amended schedules passed in 1972.

Since the council meeting, however, city hall officials discovered a 1974 amendment which had been somehow overlooked, and modification set down fees currently charged — which mostly are the same as those in the draft bylaw.

Essentially, the only new fees in the proposal, says city manager Wilbur Purcell, are $25 charge for kennels — up from $10 — and $13 for each additional female dog in a household up $4.

Ford Says U.S. A Pacific Nation

JAKARTA (AP) — President Ford said today the United States regards itself as a Pacific nation and "we are firmly committed to peace and security in Southeast Asia throughout Asia."

Speaking at a state banquet given by Indonesian President Suharto in Merdeka Presidential Palace, Ford said, "We see our own progress and prosperity linked with the vast populations, the dynamic economies, the abundant resources and the rich cultures of this great region.

"No area of the world is more important to us than Asia."

A high-spirited crowd estimated by police at 100,000 lined the road from Jakarta airport into town to welcome Ford on arrival from Peking. It was in sharp contrast to the almost total absence of interested spectators in the Chinese capital.

En route to Jakarta, a senior U.S. official told reporters the most important benefits derived from the Peking summit were the triangulation of diplomacy—the balancing of relations with China and the United States.

The official, who declined to be identified, sketched what diplomatic officials are assessing impact of U.S.-China policy. It is based on "parallelism" and seeks to establish the points on which both sides see eye to eye, especially in discouraging Soviet expansionism.

Ford said the United States has a continuing interest in Indonesian security and well-being, as well as "a common concern for the right of every nation to pursue its destiny on its own independent and sovereign course."

Holland Stands Firm with Terrorists

AMSTERDAM (AP) — The Dutch government showed no signs today of yielding to demands of South Moluccan nationalists holding more than 60 hostages in the Indonesian consulate in Amsterdam aboard a stranded train in northern Holland.

More than 150 police security terrorists held an estimated 40 captives, including 11 children. Sharpshooters were perched on buildings around the consulate as the siege entered its second day.

At Delfzijl, 90 miles to the north, 600 troops and 45 armored cars reinforced police and troops surrounding a fourcoach local train in which the terrorists held 30 hostages. The gunmen have killed three hostages since hijacking the train Sunday.

There was no possibility the Dutch government would endanger its good political and commercial relations with Indonesia by agreeing to the political demands of the terrorists, and the Indonesian government is certain to support the Dutch in all demands for South Moluccan independence as it has all other nationalist attempts in its farflung archipelago.

The terrorists are exiles or sons of exiles from the South Moluccs Islands in the Indonesian archipelago. The South Moluccas were part of the pre-war Dutch East Indies and became part of Indonesia when the Dutch gave their vast island empire independence in 1949. Thousands of the islanders fled to Holland when the Jakarta government took over after an unsuccessful rebellion in 1950, and there now are about 40,000 South Moluccans in the country.

The train hijackers issued a new set of demands Thursday, which in addition to safe passage out of the country included admission by the Dutch government that "great injustice" has been done to the South Moluccan people and a Dutch initiative for United Nations mediation of South Moluccan demands for independence.

Premier Joop den Uyl and senior cabinet members met through the night in the Hague (wie acts of terror. Den Uyl said earlier prospects for a quick solution were "very somber." The government proclaimed a full alert of all royal marine and state police units in the country.

The consulate building in Amsterdam also housed an Indonesian school, and 16 children were there when the terrorists stormed into the building in force Thursday. Shortly afterwards they released five children in exchange for a portable television set, a transistor radio and a bull horn.

Later they said they would release another three children if a "cursed mediator was brought to the consulate. The police countered with a demand that all the youngsters be freed, and the hijackers did not reply.

Officials said a number of mediation attempts by prominent South Moluccan officials did not persuade the train hijackers to surrender. Their victims included the engineer and a passenger who were slain shortly after the takeover, and a third man who Thursday after the government refused to give the terrorists a plane passage out of the country.

Strike Support

Walkout On Teacher Plan

TORONTO (CP) — Officials of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation (OSSTF) said Thursday that a walkout by Ontario's 34,000 secondary school teachers in support their striking colleagues in Metropolitan Toronto could be considered today by the OSSTF executive council.

John Mesi, vice-president of the London district, said the council meeting "is to decide whether we will strike."

James Forester, OSSTF president, said the meeting will not be recommending a walkout- "not immediately." He said talk of a walkout is speculation at this point.

Jodie Carty, Hastings division president of the OSSTF, said today an executive meeting has been called Saturday for all division presidents and this usually means "something big is in the works."

However, she said she hopes a mass walkout will not be necessary and that another form of strike support can be found. Mrs. Carty said secondary school teachers in Hastings County want to stay within legal bounds. A walkout is unlawful and would be illegal.

Mrs. Carty said the anti-inflation board's position on the contract talks is the contentious issue and the OSSTF has not yet decided how to deal with this stand.

A province-wide walkout occurred Dec. 12, 1972, when about 25,000 high school and elementary teachers marched on Queen's Park in the legal right to strike.

Only secondary school teachers in Metro Toronto, Kent County and Kirkland Lake have taken a strike vote. Kent teachers set a strike for Monday, but no date has been set in Kirkland Lake.

Metro Toronto's 8,000 high school teachers have been on strike since Nov. 12, closing 135 schools.

The federal anti-inflation board ruled last week that the Metro Toronto board's offer of a 30.5-per-cent increase over two years was in excess of federal wage guidelines. The teachers are seeking 42.9 per cent.

Negotiations in the Metro Toronto strike are to resume today after the appointment Wednesday of three mediators. Contract talks broke off two days before the strike started.

Gordon Cressy, chairman of the Toronto board of education, says he continues to keep his communication with teachers open by talking to picketing teachers in front of the board's offices. He said he hopes they will help to rebuild the school system when the teachers' strike is over.

Jury Hands Down Tough Conclusions

OTTAWA (CP) — Stricter attendance rules at schools and restricted use of firearms in Canada and the abolition of "pornographic material" in Ontario were among the recommendations of a coroner's jury which Thursday after a four-day inquest into the death of two high school students.

Jury foreman Andre Dexlardins read the jury's comments and nearly every recommendation by H. B. Cotsam, Ontario's chief coroner, had singled out as worthy of "tough recommendations."

It deliberated nearly six hours on bizarre and gruesome evidence from about 40 witnesses, including students, teachers, parents, police, psychiatrists, and experts on the militia, rifles and weapons at the inquest into the deaths of Robert Poulin, 16, and Kim Bedner, 17.

Poulin murdered Miss Rabot in his house Oct. 27 just a few hours before spending six classmates—one fatally—and turning a shotgun in his own head, the jury said.

Crown 13 student Mark Hough, 18, died Monday from injuries in his head. Others to leave the first witness, Stuart Poulin, testified about his son's quiet manner, his desire for privacy, his fascination with war games and his preoccupation with fantasy sex.

The jury recommended that no attendance system be established that would require school authorities to notify the parents of any student more than 30 minutes late for class.

It also recommended on a random basis," student lockers should be searched and all acts of violence by students or teachers should be reported to the provincial education department, the jury said.

The jury recommendation to ban "pornographic material" included "anything showing or representing the genital parts of the human body."

Allmand Refuses Sky Shop Questions

OTTAWA (CP) — The government was pressed Thursday to say whether there was a link between the Sky Shop investigations and others in Quebec and Ontario as plans were laid before the House.

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said he could not answer questions about connections between the Sky Shop affair, which involves village investigations, allegations about customs seizures at Mirabel Airport and other investigations.

"I can't say that publicly," he told Conservative MP (PC—Central Nova).

He told Eldon Woollams (PC—Calgary North) he did not know whether there was an investigation at Mirabel concerning allegations about contraction fraud. But he would inquire.

Three Teamsters Named In Hoffa Disappearance

DETROIT (AP) — A Justice Department task force has named three New Jersey Teamsters, one with alleged Mafia ties, as responsible for the abduction-murder of James Hoffa, the former union boss who vanished July 30.

Salvatore Briguglio, 47, of Paramus, N.J., his brother, Gabriel of Saddle Brook, N.J., and Thomas Andretta, 38, of Hasbrouck Heights, were named by the informant and have been ordered to appear in a police lineup on Saturday before a second unidentified witness, who has told the government he saw Hoffa abducted.

The informant who will view the police lineup says he does not know the names of those who committed the crime but would recognize them if he saw them again, the government said.

Authorities in New Jersey say Salvatore Briguglio and Andretta have ties to the Mafia family of the late Vito Genovese.

Robert Orr, head of the U.S. Organized Crime Strike Force in Detroit, refused to say existence of both informants at a court hearing Thursday involving the appearance of the New Jersey trio before a federal grand jury. The jury is investigating the Hoffa disappearance from the parking lot of a restaurant in suburban Detroit on July 30.

Orr said the government will seek a grant of immunity for Stephen Andretta, brother of Thomas, who allegedly heard threats made against Hoffa.

Teamsters source said Stephen Andretta is one of a number of persons who overheard conspiracy may be would kill Hoffa if Hoffa tried to return to the Teamsters leadership.

It was unclear from One's evidence hearing regarding the police lineup whether the first informant who named the trio was the one who revealed had actually seen Hoffa abducted or merely had second-hand knowledge.

Britain Changes Detention Trial Law

BELFAST (Reuter) — British today ended detention without trial in Northern Ireland, bowing to mounting republican guerrilla suspects.

The announcement was made by Northern Ireland Secretary Merlyn Rees who said he had ordered release orders today for 72 people held in the Maze prison camp near Belfast.

The minister said 66 of the 72 in detention orders against the 66 of the 72 in detention orders against the others have been revoked. But they would continue to serve detention sentences imposed by the courts.

In his statement, Rees, the administrator of the British-run province, said detention without trial now has gone.

Many people of both sides of the divided Protestant and Catholic communities had been held in detention, Rees said. But he warned: "It is my responsibility to see that it does not return."

Draft Bylaw Criticized

A draft proposal of a Belleville zoning bylaw drew criticism as being "too restrictive" by a member of the city's planning committee Wednesday.

Margaret Orr criticized the bylaw strongly when it was discussed in part by consultants that the document would not allow boarding houses or group foster homes in any city zone.

The bylaw was presented for the first time Wednesday at a meeting of the subordinate planning advisory committee.

The planner explained these categories were excluded from the bylaw because there is no corresponding zone or outlines in the already complete official plan.

The zoning bylaw serves only to enforce geographic areas within the city according to what type of development may locate in various sectors.

Commenting on the commission, Mrs. Orr said it is "ridiculous" and Mayor Ben Corke called for further staff comment for the next meeting saying the question of rooming houses and group homes is "vital to the community."

Committee chairman Joe Cox said in many respects, the 76-page draft bylaw resembles a controversial building standards bylaw "but steps will be taken to guard against duplication."

"Any article will be removed from the minimum standards bylaw that has been duplicated in the draft zoning bylaw," said the alderman.

Ald. Cox said "I don't feel there will be that strong a reaction to the zoning bylaw," as has been the case with the standards bylaw.

On the other hand, Mayor Corke said during an interview, "it will be very interesting to see how the public reacts to the guidelines in the two documents."

The bylaw — if passed in its present form — would ban the construction of bedrooms where more than half of the room's height is below ground level. "Many homes in Belleville — including my own — have such bedrooms in basements and I can't agree with the section relating to this at all," said Ald. Cox.

Ministry Examining Costs Of Extending Water Services

By AL EARAS
Staff Reporter

FRANKFORD — Construction of a water main from Frankford west to Pitcher's Sideroad, where many households now are living with undrinkable water, will cost at least $40,000, says a provincial environmental ministry official.

Gordon Thom, an industrial abatement section officer, said from Kingston Thursday that the ministry's current estimate is only a "ball park figure" and cannot be relied upon.

However, it is the first to be made by the ministry, pushed over the last few weeks by homeowners clustered around Pitcher's Sideroad who have been living with polluted wells for over three months.

In an interview Thursday, Mr. Thom cautioned that the estimate is not precise, partly because the cost of necessary hydrants and valves in the line has not been included.

Costs covered are those of the six-inch main, the digging of a trench along Hastings County Rd. 5, and the laying of pipe along a half to three-quarters-mile section of roadway.

It also doesn't include the "couple hundred bucks" fee a service connection from a house to the residential main, said Mr. Thom.

Ministry officials in the Kingston office worked Thursday to establish a firmer price for the water line construction — an estimate requested by homeowners who see a main from Frankford facilities as a possible answer to their water shortage problem.

Additional information is still needed from the ministry's Toronto offices before a better picture is obtained.

Mr. Thom said he expects that, by next Tuesday, the ministry will be able to inform homeowners what the range in construction costs will be.

A precise figure is not obtainable without hiring an engineer to survey and draft construction plans.

However, the ministry's work in arriving at a cost may be futile.

Both Frankford, from which water would be taken, and other environment ministry officials have said there is not likely to be enough water available to serve the nine homes.

Frankford, and the ministry which owns the village's water production facilities, must agree to give water to the Pitcher's Sideroad area residents.

If a water main is extended, the homeowners would be asked to pay capital and operating costs through their Sidney Township tax rolls.

Warkworth Inmates Get Message Across

By JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

WARKWORTH — Santa Claus went to prison Thursday night, bringing with him his companions Holiday Cheer and Season's Greetings.

Inmates at Warkworth Medium Security institute presented to visitors a Christmas pageant.

For more than two hours the entertainers sang, danced and acted for the audience of 200, making them laugh and just as often making them think.

As humorous as the show was at times, the underlying theme was Christmas away from home and how difficult it can be sometimes. Travelling salesman know how it is to be away at holiday time, service people and many others also can relate to the feeling, but if the inmates gave any gifts to their audience, it was the simple realization of how fortunate they were that they were returning to their homes and families after the show.

"It was the best audience response we ever got from an opening night crowd," said one of the performers. "But the show that was the best was yesterday (Wednesday) afternoon when the handicapped kids came," he said.

Two bands, some individual singing talent, comic actors and the master of ceremonies pressalled a tapestry of events that while not always professional, was entertaining because of its infectious enthusiasm.

More than two months went on the show, limited by short preparation time (it had restricted rehearsal to two days, but it didn't reflect in the performance.

Some of the older members of the audience may have reacted to the loud music, (it is sometimes used because of its infectious enthusiasm. More than two months went on the show, limited by short preparation time (it had restricted rehearsal to two days, but it didn't reflect in the performance.

Prison Pageant

Surrounded by the colors and symbols of Christmas, inmates at the Warkworth Medium Security institute staged their annual Christmas pageant before an audience of 200 Thursday. Theme of the variety show was the good fortune of those who are able to be home for Christmas.

For Popular County Author 'Every Ship Has a Story'

By MARG. HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Marine historian Bill Metcalfe who says he has never sailed "even a raft" was at Picton Public Library Thursday for an author's party promoting his latest book, Marine Memories.

Mr. Metcalfe, a resident of Black River near Milford, said his interest in Prince Edward's seafaring men began when he lived at Point Traverse many years ago.

He said conversations with fishermen there as well as marine captains and other sailors really developed a fascination with ships and sailing.

Ten years ago his first book, Canvas and Steam on Quinte Waters was published through the Prince Edward Historical Society and a sequel with the same title was printed in 1968.

Mr. Metcalfe noted that with publication of his first book he received hundreds of calls and letters from readers with information to contribute concerning early sailing days in the Bay of Quinte area.

The book sold 1,000 copies and a second revised edition sold 2,000 copies.

"The first book went in six weeks and it is now a collector's item," observed its author.

The second edition also sold out quickly with copies of the book going to readers across Canada.

Mr. Metcalfe commented that in recent months there has been a strong upsurge of interest in his first two books although it now is almost impossible to obtain copies.

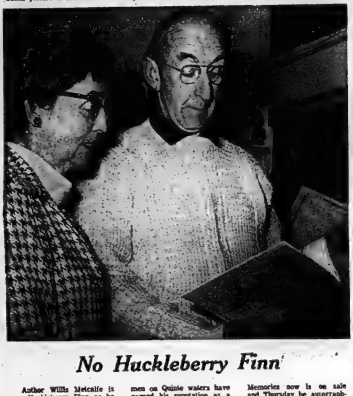
It is third publication, Marine Memories now is on sale in local book stores and the Prince Edward County museum and features an introduction by Commador James Plomer, retired.

The cover of the book was designed by well-known artist William Kettlewell of Black River.

Mr. Metcalfe said the stories contained in Marine Memories are set in the eastern end of Lake Ontario. Some date back to the 1780's and others to 1812 while several more concern modern vessels.

"You never let up on the research," remarked Mr. Prince Edward's Marine Museum in South Marysburg Township.

In his book Canvas and Steam Mr. Metcalfe observed in the preface "We believe that every ship has a story and listening to the stories so gathered from old and young sailors, captains and engineers they make fiction dull in comparison."



Youth Pleads Guilty To Break-in Charges

PICTON — A Picton youth has pleaded guilty to two charges of break, enter and theft in provincial court here and will be sentenced Jan. 7, 1976.

Richard Deschamp, 17, of 94 Main Street, Picton pleaded guilty Wednesday to a break-in at the Picton Medical Centre and the theft of $24 and to a break-in at Metro Cleaners here where $12 was taken.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following call for assistance during the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. today:

1.44 p.m. Thursday, false alarm at Quinte Hotel.

Four Months For Assault

PICTON — A Picton man Wednesday was convicted of common assault in provincial court here and sentenced to four months in jail and to one year's probation.

John M. Chapman, 20, of 72 Main Street was convicted in connection with the assault of a Picton woman on Bowery Street last July.

Police say a woman was dragged from her car which was parked near Bill's Dairy Store but she managed to kick her assailant and escape.

Suspect In Court

PICTON—A Bloomfield man was to appear in court here today for a bail hearing after being charged in connection with break-ins at three downtown stores.

Martin Cornoyer, 17, of Main Street, Bloomfield is charged with break-ins at the Picton Medical Centre, Metro Cleaners and the Globe Bowl-O-Drome. He is also charged with an attempted break-in at the Second Time Around shop, taken. Both incidents occurred in October.

He has also pleaded guilty to an attempted break-in at the Second Time Around Ship on Main Street here.

No Huckleberry Finn'

Author Willis Metcalfe is no Huckleberry Finn as he says he has never sailed "even a raft" but his fascinating stories of the ships and men on Quinte waters have earned his reputation as a sea buff. Mr. Metcalfe and Prince Edward County writer's third book, Marine Memories now is on sale and Thursday he autographed a copy for Ada Wilkinson of the County Book and

Fender-bender Totals $1,200

TRENTON — A two-car collision in a parking lot in the Town Centre Thursday afternoon has resulted in an estimated total damage of $1,200 town police report.

A westbound car, driven by Gordon David Thompson, 39, of 149 Queen St., Trenton, was in collision with a northbound vehicle driven by Lawrence Adams, 28, of RR 5 Trenton, police said.

Police estimate damage to the left front fender of the Thompson vehicle at $600 and an equal amount to the right front fender of the Adams car.

There were no injuries.

The Church Militant and World Council's Commitment to Liberationists

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

What do you think of the politicized church, that is a church more concerned with a revolutionary world where social inequalities are removed by liberation movements, than a bourgeois one where inequalities are removed more slowly and more awkwardly by traditional governments?

And in all this, what do you think of a church which prefers to use the gospel more in radical terms rather than basically religious ones?

If these questions have stopped you after a long way from the comfortable and back-patting operations of your church bazaar to help the needy, or the annual Christmas pinch at your pocket book for missionary funds?

It doesn't it should. The fifth assembly of the World Council of Churches under way right now in an 18-day meeting in Nairobi, Kenya, is again deeply-involved in its role, is old and assist the Third World liberation movements.

Its fourth such assembly at Uppsala, Sweden, in 1968, made the decision to move from traditional world church roles to one of assistance to revolutionary movements in Africa.

The World Council has sold its stocks in multi-national companies it considers to be exploiters of man in the emerging world.

To be specific in Canadian terms, that includes Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd., because of its role in Namibia best empty but minerals-rich territory still administered by South Africa, Brascan Ltd., in Brazil, ruled by army generals, Gulf Oil because it has rich holdings in the new and strife-torn republic of Angola and so forth.

The more genuine "social gospel" we had accepted previously because it didn't really bother us too much, has been expanded to mean direct aid and assistance to a world-wide exploited man, not just to the hard-pressed Indians and Eskimos of Canadian far-north communities.

At the same time there has been a revival of old-fashioned spiritual values in the churches, Catholic as well as Protestant, and a feeling of return to religious meaning of Christ's messages rather than a politicized one.

The pontor concept of Christ with an automatic weapon over his shoulder which one sees in Castro's Cuba or in the extreme left African churches, is not as bizarre as it reads here.

The militant Christian who once believed his militancy was only spiritual, never political, now believes his can work in and with revolutionary societies.

The committed Christian man of the Gospel say some Cuban Christians can also be the image of the "new Cuban man" of Fidel.

The World Council of Churches meeting in Kenya has observers who are Moslems, Jews, Sikhs and Buddhist. Genuine ecumenism is also part of the Council's pitch.

If you are cynical about the brotherhood of man concept working, the World Council of Churches is not.

Legend of Santa Claus

A ten-year-old Belleville youngster asks a question that has tickled the thinking processes of countless boys and girls down the years.

"Dear Mr. Editor," writes Teddy Baragar, "I'm ten years old, and have just seen a program that almost convinced me that there is a Santa Claus. I really do wonder, IS THERE OR ISN'T there a Santa Claus . . .?"

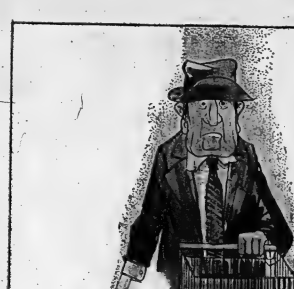
That's the word from Teddy, as he wrote it, and here's our considered opinion: At the age of ten or thereabouts young people have reached a certain stage of maturity, when the existence or otherwise of Santa Claus and other human phenomena may be questioned.

The short answer for those of inquisitive years is that there IS and there ISN'T, and the final answer is what each chooses to believe in his own mind. Whichever answer is arrived at thus, it in no way detracts from the traditions or beliefs commonly held and observed by people of all ages at this festive time. For those of Teddy's age though, it is simply a stage in the evolution of the psyche which casts Santa Claus in a different light. Either way, there will still be gifts on Christmas morning.

If there are younger brothers or sisters in Teddy's household who believe with Francis Church that "Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus," their viewpoint should be respected. In time, Santa Claus will assume a different aspect for them too.

The world would be a lesser place without its elements of mystery and fantasy, which come to us through the celebration of the birth of the Christ child nearly 2,000 years ago, through other traditions such as, in Britain, pantomime, through legend and in the pages of literature.

Through it all, reality and fantasy are intertwined — and who would have it otherwise?



Crudities of Dissent

A 25-year-old teacher still working in Toronto told an interviewer he was unable to support the strike, adding: "I can't imagine myself walking a picket line with an Eat-at-Joe's sandwich board on my back."

A great many others can though, as they tout their slogans one way or another on the picket line or on Parliament Hill.

Sad to observe too that this young man, his sentiments in the right place in so many ways (he said he found it hard to equate what he gave and received in his profession with a paycheque) and his striking colleagues had one indecorous element in common.

That is, their demeaning of the English language. Thus he labels his fellow teachers' defiance of the Prime Minister's personal call for restraint with a crude descriptive, while on The Hill in Ottawa a teacher delegation is ridiculing Finance Minister Macdonald with chants in similar vein.

The mob mentality again, and this from a group which has charge of the rising generation in the classroom.

Such language of course has been ingrained from away back, indeed is flung around with scarcely any consciousness of it being even used — by young and old — but wouldn't we have a better society if it could be taught out the window, never to be heard again, from teachers or anyone else?

Tossed out the window in much the same way as another cancer Prime Minister Trudeau was talking about, and which is what basically this is all about, when he said: "... A unique historical occasion is permitted to us to get off the treadmill of a material society running after its tail."

And amen to that!

Food from Recycled Sludge But What About Cadmium?

United Church Editorial

In Australia, an enterprising cattle-farm manager decided to factly recycles into food itself the sludge produced by the city of Melbourne (pop. 2,300,000).

This is the sludge that feeds the land that grows the grass that fattens the Herefords that puts steak on Australias dinner table.

At a study day held recently in Burlington, Ont., Dr. McPherson described to 30 environmental scientists how on the 27,000 acre Werribee Farm just outside Melbourne the local board of work raises cattle and sheep on sludge — fertilized grass a two and-a-half million dollar a year operation.

The sludge goes directly onto the land without requiring costly treatment. But . . . is the meat produced fit for human consumption? "Certainly", says Mr. McPherson, showing color slides of fat-marbled T-bone steaks to reinforce his opinion.

But what about cadmium in the sludge? Environmental scientists know there is cadmium in human waste and strongly suspect it's a threat to health. Might not cadmium be taken up by the grass and concentrated in the beef?

"We're beginning to look at that", says Mr. McPherson, adding wistfully, "In the early times, everything went on the land and nobody was worried."

Still, if sludge-fed cattle should catch on in Canada in a big way, one can only hope the Australian studies will give a green light on the effects of cadmium on humans.

As it stands, some Canadian farmers simply take septic tanks and spread the human waste on their fields as a huge saving on fertiliser. Perhaps we should not leave it to the Australians to find out about the cadmium.

The Lord's message to the church is simply to "come back" from our wanderings, get off the religious routine bit, and get on with the message that man is a sinner and Jesus is the Saviour and without Him there is no redemption. Only in this is there hope for the church and hlp for the world.

Speed Cut Disadvantages Hit Trucks and Vacationers While Gas Costs Will Climb

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs

Thomson News Service

Behind all the sound and fury about energy during the past couple of years, a pattern of mammoth price increases has been emerging.

It's becoming clearer, as time goes by, that energy consumers are going to be socked repeatedly with big new inflationary price hikes at least once a year.

Take gasoline, for example. Pump prices have doubled within the last few years. The Canada-wide average for regular grade is about 86 cents a gallon—ranging up to 81 in monopoly locations (limited-access highways) or isolated areas.

And the marketing of low-priced oil one of Canada's three biggest integrated oil companies warned the other day that the price would probably rise five to seven cents in each of the next five years.

That estimate could put the average gasoline price by unleaded areas as high as $1.20 a gallon by the early 1980s.

Don't get the idea I'm harsh on the greed of the oil industry—although profits are indeed ample, and the oil men's excuse that they need higher prices and profits to pay for exploration, that's equivalent to telling the size of the truck fleet overnight, reducing the productivity and earnings of commercial travellers, of all kinds, and diminishing the handiest time available to families that must travel great distances to visit relatives.

Time, as well as energy, has a certain value for all people—not just for cabinet ministers and provincial premiers in their government airplanes and limousines.

The speed-limit reductions represent an arbitrary increase in the cost of living, in pursuit of a marginal saving of a form of energy that's not in short supply.

Canadians are still waiting for a realistic national energy policy that will emphasize innovation, continued development, prudent, practical, reasonable pricing and self-sufficiency.

A lot of communities have a starling problem, and these birds seldom come peacefully. They are hard to scatter, he adds, and efforts to get rid of them are often met by cat and gunfire.

In its latest edition, the magazine Natural History quotes a British starling expert as saying researchers "in the effectiveness of taped distress calls in dispersing the birds:" . . . the piercing sound, like that of a drill on metal, has no more effect on starlings than the sound of truck motors or jet engines. Furthermore, the starling's tolerance of the call increases, human tolerance reaches a breaking point." They are maddening birds.

Perhaps a band thought up by the bumbling Bye Bye Blackbird, the starlings would take the hint.

Capital Area a Corner of Affluence That Is Unequalled

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Correspondent

"Fat City" — You couldn't spend a better if you had a better authority than Douglas Fullerton that is the capital of Ottawa-Hull. It on their backs, the National Capital is "Fat City."

He should know.

For he helped feed and fatten it as Chairman of the National Capital Commission.

This Commission is a sort of federal super-government that usually has the final word in running the Siamese-twin national capital of Ottawa-Hull. It created for Prime Minister Trudeau.

The Commission is also its sugar daddy, spending an annual average $40 million to do for Ottawa-Hull what other cities do for themselves.

It takes a staff of 1,800 to do it.

The country's constitution, to read the British North America Act which remains valid still, says that Ottawa, Ontario, is the National Capital.

But the Prime Minister, building his new imperium, decreed that it should be, as he phrased it, "a truly bilingual National Capital."

So without reference to Parliament or the people, the Commission quietly declared that the Capital spun the Ottawa River, taking in both the Ontario and Quebec sides, both Ottawa and Hull.

And the polite and privileged residents quietly accepted it.

There were no objections from over the horizon in the world outside which Fat City regards as the Boondocks.

Then it became Ottawa-Hull, National Capital of Canada.

Douglas Fullerton, who for years was bigger than the mayors, more important than the premiers of Ontario and Quebec, and answered only to the Prime Minister, presided he was, in a professional bureaucratic.

He has been one of the feds, has worked in the service of the provincials, too, and comes up not only as a bureaucratic necessary, but one of a kind.

He speaks his mind and never mind the diplomacy.

Back he came the other day to testify at a Parliamentary Committee that is trying to make sense out of the administration of the National Capital Region, an exercise in futility that has been re-doing through the last years since Confederation.

And back he came with his own name for the place he so regally ruled, Fat City.

Fresh in from out there — he had been working on his treat — he came to report to the Committee on the views most taxpayers in the Boonies have of Fat City.

He will: "The city with the highest pay in the country, with an inflation of benefits reserved upon it by Canadians everywhere, with a privileged class of bureaucrats in charge that knows nothing about what is going on in the rest of the country and cares less."

He warned the parliamentarians that the taxpayers "out there" regard Fat City as the ring-a-ding-pleasure-palace of "the enemy."

Lest the peasants revolt, he advised the 23 Members of Parliament and Senators on the Committee that the best preventative measure might be dispersal of the princes and potentates of the imperium across the unknown country.

Let "the enemy" infiltrate the ranks of the resented taxpayers, get to know something about what's going on out there, under the pressures of self-preservation, be cars a little.

It was a classic Fullerton performance.

He spoke his mind.

And he didn't give a damn on whose bonder toolsies he caught fire.

Did you know something?

Most members of the Committee have been here too long, snugly secured in the federal government city, and will probably shrug it off as the annoying whimperings of a contraversial eccentric.

After all, what business is it of Mahon Bay or Ponce Coupe to wonder about what makes Fat City tick?

CP News Roundup

Stephenson Pressed For Strike Settlement

TORONTO (CP) — Labor Minister Bette Stephenson should use the authority of her office to obtain a settlement in the pulp and paper strike in Ontario, Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis said Thursday.

The NDP leader told the legislature during an emergency debate on the strike that Dr. Stephenson should use her "immense moral authority" to bring both sides back to the bargaining table.

The legislature's regular business was suspended to permit the debate on a motion by Mel Bervet NDP—Welland), who said 11,000 workers have been on strike for up to five months.

All three parties agreed to the debate.

Mr. Lewis said the strike is ugly and officials of the companies involved are guilty of bad-faith bargaining. He said that from November, 1974, to November, 1975, the companies made no offer to increase for the Canadian Paperworkers Union.

Jobs Go Begging

OTTAWA (CP) — An average of 69,000 jobs went begging during the three-month period August-October, a 45-per-cent drop from the average 52,000 job vacancies during the same period last year, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

Two Resign

LONDON (Reuter) — Two ministers in Prime Minister Wilson's government resigned Thursday. Lord Balogh, 70, a minister of state for energy, decided to retire because of age. Lord Kennet, a minister in the industry department, resigned to become chairman of the British Aerospace Board.

Won't Divert Funds

TORONTO (CP) — Robert Welch, provincial minister of culture and recreation, refused Thursday to allow funds from the Wintario lottery to be diverted to help set up educational television outlets in Northern Ontario. William Ferrier (NDP—Cochrane South) asked the minister to use the funds to help the Ontario Educational Communications Authority (OECA) set up more northern outlets.

Plants Stay Open

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. said Thursday it is cancelling plans for temporary shutdowns of five car plants in January, including the one at Oakville, Ont. Ford said that because no increasing sales, it has decided to add 22,500 vehicles to its North American production schedules for January.

300 Released

WEST BERLIN (Reuter) — The West German government has purchased the release of 300 political prisoners from East German jails during the last few weeks, the Working Committee August 13, a private refugee organization, said Thursday. The group, whose name commemorates the 1961 East-West Berlin border closure, said their arrival in the West brings the total of East and West German prisoners freed by them under a secret 1960 deal with East Berlin to 6,000.

Negotiations Begin

TORONTO (CP) — Negotiations between Ontario's doctors and the province might resume next week, Health Minister Frank Miller said Thursday outside the house.

Mr. Miller denied a charge by Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis in the house that negotiations had broken down. He told Mr. Lewis that talks have been delayed until certain points in the federal government's selective wage and price controls are clarified.

Dies of Cancer

TORONTO (CP) — Gerhard W. Kennedy, 63, fashion designer, golf champion, filmmaker and husband of broadcaster Betty Kennedy, died Thursday of cancer. Mr. Kennedy did research in the 1930s on suntan clothing for the department of national defence. He was the Manitoba open golf champion in 1943. As vice-president of Kennedy Horizons Ltd. he produced educational films.

Trapped in Chimney

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Firefighters said Thursday they used a resuscitator to revive a man they rescued from the chimney of a local television store. A fire department spokesman said the man fell 40 feet down the chimney and they had to break open the bottom part to free him. Police said Peter Corrigan, 18, of Peterborough has been charged with attempted break and enter.

Explosive Sniffer

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — A Waterloo firm says it has come up with a device which is able to sniff out explosives hidden on people and in packages, vehicles or buildings.

The firm, Marsland Engineering Ltd., calls the device the "sniffer," although it is formally called the Explosives Security.

Group Appointed

TORONTO (CP) — Leo Bernier, Ontario resources minister, announced Thursday the appointment of a mineral aggregate working group to assess the Ontario government on future policies in central Ontario. He said forecasts of the mineral supply suggest that sand and gravel from existing licensed areas will have been exhausted by the end of the century. The 15-member group is to report to the government by July, 1976.

OFL to Support Limits on Store Hours

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Federation of Labor (OFL) Thursday announced its support of the government's bill to limit Sunday retailing but asked that stricter measures be added to the proposals.

OFL's president David Archer, speaking before a select committee studying the bill, said the proposal to limit the type and size of Sunday retail operations is commendable, but suggested changes to make it more stringent.

As the bill stands, retail stores serving tourist areas would be given certain exemptions, but the OFL brief said such exceptions should be minimal.

The labor organization, which represents about 800,000 union members in the province, said the bill should also give the province power to set uniform hours and limit night shopping.

The OFL position was echoed in a brief presented by a group of retailers, business organizations and religious bodies called the ad hoc committee on Sunday retail selling.

The committee's brief, presented by Michael Allport of Miracle Food Mart Ltd., also called for tighter restrictions on the type and size of business exempted from the provisions of the bill.

The bill would exempt small retail stores of less than 2,600 square feet employing three or fewer persons. The brief suggested that the committee consider reducing the 2,400-square-foot provision.

Rent Bill May Apply to Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's rent-review bill appears to respond to the situation in Metropolitan Toronto and not the rest of the province, the select committee studying the legislation was told Thursday.

Peter Barnes, a spokesman for the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Ottawa, said Ottawa apartment owners are frightened by the problems posed by the legislation which in some cases "threatens their very existence."

While there must be policies to deal with accommodation for the disadvantaged, it is important that everyone pays their fair share of shelter costs, he said.

The ideal rent-review program must be reasonable and of short duration in order to prevent future housing shortages, restriction of choice and the mobility of tenants.

Guideline Regulations Now Required by Provinces

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday the government will have completed the regulations that will show how selective wage and price controls imposed Oct. 14 will be applied.

Federal and provincial officials met Thursday to try to agree on details. Without the regulations, most of the provinces say they cannot commit themselves to follow the federal program.

But a survey of the 10 provinces shows general support for the federal initiative against inflation. It also shows that in many cases the provinces have firmly committed themselves to spending restraint while Ottawa is trying to decide how to cut its spending.

One of the provinces that has shown some doubt about the length of the proposed 36-year wage-price restraint program is Ontario. In getting the federal plan into operation, A month and a half ago, before it was announced, the government for the federal government to administer the law", he suggested.

Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough says he favors an 18-month after Ontario public sector, with the option for an Ontario board to be set up after that.

At the last federal-provincial finance ministers' conference here Nov. 28, Mr. McKeough's complaint was the delay in getting the federal plan into time had come to "get it crack-and receive royal assent, making it law, before the end of next week.

One of the big hurdles was passed on Wednesday when the legislation to put the program into full operation received final approval in the Commons. It is expected to clear the Senate July 28.

Virtually all the provinces will join Quebec and British Columbia in implementing rent controls as part of the over-all inflation fight. Ontario proposes to hold annual rent increases to 8 per cent, retroactive to

Anti-inflation Board Will Spend $500,000 on Ads

OTTAWA (CP) — The anti-inflation board will spend about $500,000 on an advertising campaign to promote its selected wage and price controls.

The board plans to use MacLaren Advertising Agency of Toronto for part of the $500,000 publicity, government sources said Thursday. The Liberal Party of Canada is one of Maclaren's major accounts.

New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent mentioned the $500,000 figure for advertising the regulations in the Commons.

In a motion that failed to receive the required unanimous consent from all parties, he asked for details of the advertising campaign and the agencies that would be given contracts.

Government sources confirmed later that the half-million-dollar figure was "about in line." A full-page ad in each of the major daily newspapers across the country costs about $37,000 a day.

The campaign will publicize the still-uncompleted details of the program.

MPs Call for Ottawa, Quebec Olympic Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Two Progressive Conservative MPs Thursday called on the government to discuss with Montreal and the Quebec government the possibility of supplying federal funds to the $1-billion Montreal Olympics.

Roch LaSalle (Joliette) said in the Commons that it is unfair to expect only Quebec taxpayers to pay for the Games, which will bring honor to Canada as a whole.

Mr. LaSalle's motion was seconded by Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West).

But Liberal MPs denied the unanimous consent needed to discuss the motion.

The federal government has repeatedly refused to provide extra funds for Games, expected to have a $600-million deficit. It already is paying for some security and broadcast installation costs as well as backing the Olympic coin and stamp programs.

CITY OF BELLEVILLE — LOCAL IMPROVEMENT NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE THAT:

1. The Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville intends to construct as a local improvement the following sanitary sewers, complete with private drain connections, and intends to specially assess a part of the cost upon the land abutting the work and the balance against the Corporation at large as follows:

STREET	FROM	TO	ESTIMATED COST	CORPORATION'S SHARE	OWNERS' SHARE	ESTIMATED COST PER FOOT FRONTAGE	ESTIMATED ANNUAL COST PER FOOT FRONTAGE
Victoria Ave.	Ann Street	Easterly approx. 75 feet
	Albert Street	Westerly approx. 166 ft.
	A point about 130 feet west of Foster Ave.	Westerly approx. 80 feet	$40,000.00	$20,581.04	$19,418.96	$21.64	$3.01
	Chatham Street	Westerly approx. 113 ft.
	Lingham Street	Easterly approx. 38 feet
	Bleecker Avenue	Westerly approx. 190 ft.

EXAMPLE: Lot with 50 ft. frontage would be assessed as follows:
50 ft. x $21.64 = $1,082.00
If paid over a period of 15 years at 11% per annum, the annual cost would be:
50 ft. x $3.01 = $150.50.

Private Drain Connections
Estimated Cost Per Private Drain Connection $666.67
Estimated Equal Annual Instalments for 15 years per private drain connection ..... $ 92.71

2. The Special Assessment is to be paid in 15 annual instalments.

3. Application will be made by the Corporation to the Ontario Municipal Board for its approval of the undertaking of the said work and any owner may, within 21 days after the first publication of the Notice, file with the Clerk of the municipality his objection to the said work being undertaken.

4. The said Board may approve the said work being undertaken, but before doing so may appoint a time and place when any objection to the said work will be considered.

ALPHA DELTA KAPPA

The Lamda Chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa, a sorority for women educators, met at Bridge Street United Church recently for their November meeting conducted by President Pearl McCurdy.

Helen Calnan presented an altruistic report for consideration prepared by Dorothy Blakely, Linda Burns and Helen Calnan. The report suggested the provision of personal and monetary assistance for Pre-Schoolers Program at Bridge Street United Church, a nursing home, Quinte Arts Council, Rotary Festival, Loyalist College Bursary, Registration person for CGIT camp, First Adventure Program, Subscription of the Kappa to McArthur College of Education, Kingston and Gladmore Volunteer Service.

Anne Colbourne presented the ADK program for the year.

Faye Burnett discussed expansion plans and an expansion tea was planned for December.

Grace Purtill, Gladys Sloe, Grace Anderson and Helen Calnan reminisced "Highlights of Yesteryear" covering 130 years, the combined total of their teaching experience. Their presentation was peppered with humorous anecdotes.

Faye Burnett thanked the hostess Barbara Cooke, Bonnie Steele, June Reid and Laura Fisher for the delightful evening.

ART SHOW

The Belleville Biennial Art show opened December 4 at the Corby Public Library, Pinnacle Street. The show, which will be open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., will continue to December 20.

Holy Rosary Bazaar: A Family Occasion

The Catholic Women's League of Holy Rosary Church sponsored their annual pre-Christmas bazaar Wednesday evening.

The event took place in the auditorium of Georges Vanier Separate School, decorated especially for the occasion.

Santa Claus was the "surprise" visitor at the bazaar, which was well attended by children and their parents.

One of the special features for the children was the "Touch and Take" organized by Theresa Hogan and the children of Holy Rosary Separate School.

Convener of the bazaar was Kay Dober. She was assisted by Margaret Watters who sold tickets.

Conveners of the various booths were: Irene Smith and Veronica Harrigan, home baking; Gertrude Solder, candy; Donna Hogan, Betty Ann McGrath and Juanita Corrigan, the country store; Shirley Cain and Rita Munroe, sewing and handmade clothing; Greta Cole, Tina O'Sullivan, Ann Campbell and Rita Halpin, the Christmas boutique table, featuring handmade candles.

Margaret Biazette was in charge of selling hot dogs, and Doris Lapinette and Arlene LeGuff were in charge of the tea room.

Nicole Donatucci took care of the children's room.

Raffled during the evening were a handmade afghan, a rocking chair, a macrame hanging and household goods.

ATTENTION!

Infant's and Children's Services in co-operation with Sun Valley Motor Inn, Belleville, Ontario, require immediately:

- In Room Sitters
- Out of Room Sitters in Their Own Home

Must be responsible, neat in appearance, fond of children.

Candlelight Tea

Winnifred McDowell pours tea for Jean Brown at the Candlelight Dessert Tea held by the St. George Anglican Church Women in Trenton Wednesday evening, December 3. The event was held in the John Street Parish House, and also included a Christmas bazaar featuring needlecraft, crafts and homebaking prepared by the ACW.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Marshall

Marshall — Gorman

Eastminster United Church was the scene of the November 1 wedding of Donna Marie Gorman of Ottawa and Leonard Marshall.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Travers Gorman of Trenton and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Marshall of Cardiff.

Rev. Alexander McDowell officiated.

Given in marriage by Francis Gorman, the bride wore a white satin gown and carried a bouquet of daisies.

Doris LeBlanc was maid of honor, assisted by Laurie Gorman and Brenda Ventura.

Groomsman Ken Hamilton was assisted by ushers Timmy Gorman and Dana Gorman.

A reception was held at CFB Trenton.

Following a wedding trip to Niagara Falls, the couple resides in Ottawa.

Books By And About Women

JESUS AND WOMAN
An Existing Discovery of What He Offered Her
—By Lisa Sergio

Lisa Sergio, a brilliant radio commentator and lecturer, casts woman in a primary role in the various episodes of Bible women based on Gospel Citations. Through these portraits she shows that Jesus did speak to these enlightened women in a special way, for at that time they were regarded as legal chattels. Jesus fought publicity for the equality of women. He also influenced the Gospel narrators to break with the old tradition and treat woman as an equal. Ms. Sergio felt that Jesus' support of woman was considered by his enemies a revolutionary act that contributed to his death.

Women did not receive the gift of tongues as did the male disciples whose task was one of "outreach" to go into the world to build a society based on Jesus' teachings. Woman's role was one of "inreach" and by personal encounter, with Him, to understand their own special gifts as an effective instrument for restoring or building the moral and social foundations.

Lisa Sergio's thesis is that the distinctive gifts of both men and women with their intellectual and psychological differences are of equal importance. She believes that only if woman works with man in harmonious partnership can she fully play her part in making the world capable of survival.

This book is available in the Corby Public Library.

MICHAEL F. COUGHLIN, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Coughlin, recently received his B.A. degree (Psychology) at the fall convocation of Queen's University, Kingston. Michael is a graduate of Nicholson Catholic College and is teaching at Our Lady of Fatima Separate School.

50th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. William Gillespie of Roslin held an Open House Sunday, November 28 in St. Paul's Anglican Church to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary. Over 300 guests, many from out of town, attended the afternoon event.

William, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Gillespie of Roslin, and Ethel, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Adam Reid of Roslin, were married on November 18, 1925, by Rev. H.R. Petten in St. Paul's Rectory.

Many gifts, flowers and cards were received by Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie including congratulations from Jules Leger, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, Leader of the Opposition Robert Stanfield and Premier William Davis. A plaque from the Ontario government was presented by Clarke Rollins MPP, and Jack Ellis MP.

In the evening, Mr. and Mrs Gillespie entertained a few relatives and friends in their home.

New Pop-psycholo gy Fad: Learning How to Say 'No'

TORONTO (CP)—If you are a shy and dependent, often at the expense of subordinating their own needs to those of others, you may be the kind.

AT is based on the idea that being a shy sheep or a mousy doormat is learned behavior that can be unlearned.

Unlike traditional psychoanalysis which seeks to change behavior by delving into problems from the inside out, AT adherents believe behavior can be changed by working from the outside in.

The idea is that if you can learn to be brave enough to tell some gatecrasher to go to the back of the line, you'll learn to say no to your boss or your spouse if they make unfair demands on you.

Through role-playing in seminars, under-assertive learns more assertive methods for handling real-life situations that frequently cause shy people to cringe with inner qualms.

The technique is not without its critics. What's to keep assertive people from walking all over the rights of others?

Dr. James Jamieson said: "Many people confuse aggression with assertion. To be assertive is to express your feelings with honesty, sincerity, frankness, tact and diplomacy. Being aggressive violates the rights of others."

Uterine Cancer Risk Linked to Estrogen

BOSTON (AP) — Two independent studies published in the New England Journal of Medicine say that using estrogens to relieve the symptoms of menopause may increase the risk of cancer of the uterus by five to seven times.

The researchers said the studies—involving 317 and 94 women respectively—do not establish a definite cause-effect relationship between the use of estrogen and cancer.

However, they said the results indicate a link, and called for more studies.

A research group of doctors at the University of Washington in Seattle compared the records of 317 patients with such cancers with an equal number who had other types of cancer. The study found that women exposed to estrogen therapy had about a five times greater risk of the cancer.

However, the doctors said their study did not consider dosage, type of estrogen used or how long the woman used the hormone.

In another study, two doctors at the Kaiser Permanente Medical Centre in Los Angeles found a five to seven times increased risk factor of the cancer in 89 middle-aged woman on estrogen therapy.

Making Metric Adjustment May Raise Food Prices

OTTAWA (CP) — Grocery retailers want and deserve tax write-offs totalling $9 million to compensate for the costs of adjusting their food-weight scales and their staffs to metric measurements, an industry spokesman told the Commons finance committee Tuesday.

If the retailers do not get the tax concessions, those costs will be added to the price of food, said Alastair J. McKichan, president of the Retail Council of Canada.

Whether or not the federal and provincial governments grant grocery retailers some stores could not carry the cost.

The retailer's argument followed a brief from Jean-Paul Carriere of the Standards Council of Canada urging the government to make an "unequivocal statement" about the dates by which industry is expected to have converted to metric.

The current tarot dates are 1978 and they vary from industry to industry and from company to company, he said.

At least 2,000 standards—sizes of products—have to be converted and companies slow to respond would jeer at the crack of the federal government's whip, he said.

Founder of Church Libraries Dedicated to Collecting Books

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP)—Anita Dalton has helped found 20 libraries in 16 years—all of them church libraries—for seven different denominations.

And another 100 libraries in the Church Library Association, of which she is founder and president, own their origins indirectly to her communicative enthusiasm for books.

Her husband, Spencer Dalton, says "she eats and sleeps books and libraries—she's just completely preoccupied with them."

The library she started in her own Forward Baptist Church 16 years ago, with about 2,000 volumes—one of the largest church libraries in the area.

Mrs. Dalton says "church libraries fill an area in people's reading needs which is largely lacking in a vacuum by other book sources."

Mrs. Dalton's church library circulates more than 300 books on an average Sunday morning. It has grown from a dribble to years ago, because the library had only 100 books then.

Most of those were donated by Mr. Dalton, described by his wife as a "bibliophile," while admitting that she is a "bibliomaniac."

Mrs. Dalton studied library science at University of Toronto prior to her marriage.

Churches in which she has helped start libraries include Baptist, Presbyterian, Mennonite, United, Anglican, Pentecostal and Free Methodist.

Ann Landers

Enlightened Alcoholics Can Handle Parties

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have quit drinking. One of us had a serious problem with alcohol and we both decided to put it out of our lives. Our good friends are aware of this and have expressed their admiration.

This morning I received a real jolt. A "friend" who always leans on us when she's in trouble telephoned to say she is giving a rather large surprise party for a mutual friend but, "I didn't invite you because we'll be serving liquor and wine and the whole bit."

I wonder if she excluded any of diabetics because she is serving a dessert. I had a good cry over the loss of our friendship because it died right there.

Please tell your readers (my former friend is among them) that alcoholism is a disease that can be controlled. We enlightened alcoholics realize it and can handle any invitation very nicely thank you.— Making It

Dear M.I.: I don't want to pour kerosene on a brush fire honey, but I think your "friend" already knew alot. She didn't want to include you for another reason and that was her excuse. The loss of her friendship is nothing to cry about. She's a phony.

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing to you because my husband and I are deeply concerned about our 19-year-old daughter. Molly is terribly obsessed with death and anything connected with it.

The moment the newspaper comes to the house, Molly must see it immediately and check the obituaries. If she reads about the death of a young person she clips it out and puts it in a scrapbook. She has been doing this for at least two years and is now on her second scrapbook.

Molly goes to the cemetery about three times a week to visit the graves of some of her "scrapbook friends" as she calls them. She loves movies about death and went to see "The Exorcist" three times.

She is not a lonely girl and goes out frequently with friends. There is nothing strange about her except this.

Do you believe she should have counseling?—Her Parents

Dear Parents: A 19-year-old who goes to the cemetery three times a week to visit the graves of people she never knew is un-ll questionably in need of professional help. I hope Molly will speak to her school counselor or therapist of your choosing. Your family doctor can direct you.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a switchboard operator in a very large and busy company. Every day accounts me of listening in on her calls. It's always a woman—never a man. This makes me so mad I could chew carpet tacks.

Some of the operators I work with get the same kind of gaff. I hope you will tell your readers who really believe this nonsense that if they stood behind us for fifteen minutes and saw the number of calls we handle, they'd apologize.

Can you imagine anything duller than listening to a lot of garbage about what their kids did over the weekend or what happened at the Smith's party or the Schwartz's Bar Mitzvah? I'd rather read a book.

Professions Confused Over Guidelines

TORONTO (CP) —Members of most professions are confused about federal selective wage and price controls and although many want to adhere to the legislation, none will know how to do so until the government publishes regulations, a spokesman for the Association of Professional Engineers said Thursday.

A. W. Wardell said in an interview that a major concern is that most professionals do not know whether Ontario or the federal government will have chief responsibility for administering the controls.

However, a spokesman for the federal anti-inflation board said regulations to spell out how the controls will work for professionals and others will not be published before Dec. 15.

"That's the best date we have at the moment, assuming that the bill goes through the final reading and receives Senate approval within a week or so," he said.

Meanwhile, professionals are watching for government reaction to a proposal by Ontario's doctors for an average fee increase of 35 per cent.

"Many people are afraid that professionals will be hit hard to make the controls more acceptable to the powerful unions who are opposing the controls," a senior partner in a large accounting firm said.

Frank Miller, Ontario minister of health, said Tuesday in the legislature that the fee increase is not acceptable by his interpretation of the guidelines.

Many professionals are afraid that they will be required to peg their salaries on increased income, another spokesman for the engineers said.

Danson Pledges Funds To Habitat Conference

VANCOUVER (CP) — Barney Danson, urban affairs minister, told city council Thursday that the federal government is prepared to pay up to $500,000 of an anticipated $1-million police bill for the United Nations conference on human settlements (Habitat) scheduled to be held here next year.

After hearing the announcement, one council member who voted last week against holding the conference here indicated he would change his mind and support it. Five other members also said they might change their minds.

Mayor Art Phillips said the federal government already has committed $40,000 of the $500,000 for extra police equipment. The conference is to be held in June, 1976.

Last week's vote to ask the federal government to cancel the conference was supported by 7. Mr. Phillips said the vote was held because council was concerned that anti-Zionist feelings and the announced attendance of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PTO) at Habitat would place a heavy policing commitment on the city.

CPU Accuses Mayors Of Butting Into Strike

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario regional vice-president of the Canadian Paperworkers Union (CPU) said Thursday he decided to call the strike at which 11 Ontario mayors "went after the workers" instead of calling on paper companies when they sought intervention to end the strike which began six months ago.

Tom Curley said a news conference he could not understand why the mayors sought government intervention for the second time this month. He said he understood a first petition was circulated among mayors because they were pleading on behalf of their communities for an end to the strike.

As a result of the petition, the government brought the union and company together Nov. 4 to discuss the strike. Negotiations later broke off.

Mr. Curley said that the companies treated that meeting as "a political requirement," and the mayors should have "stepped the companies hard instead of going after the workers."

Strike May Be Over, But Mail Still Piled Up at Post Office

BY AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

Operation of the post office in Belleville is back to normal today after the 43-day strike by inside workers, but a mail backlog still has not been cleared, says city postmaster Roy Wainwright.

The postmaster said Thursday "We can't catch up until we return to a normal flow."

But when the mail flow—mainly from the larger mail distribution centres in Toronto and Montreal — will return to normal is not known.

Mr. Wainwright said the post office now is "about 15,000 pieces behind on city letters" which represents about half of a shift's work for eight staff. About 40,000 pieces of mail are regularly handled by the night shift.

The backlog, said the postmaster, can be cleared "as long as they don't keep throwing it at us."

Belleville's post office now is receiving mail piled up in larger centres since before- and during-the strike by Canadian Union of Postal Workers members.

Early Thursday, 780 bags unloaded by mail handlers from a tractor-trailer unit from Toronto. Part of it built up in storage during the strike when some CUPW members crossed union picket lines to return to work.

A majority of the bags, said Mr. Wainright, are destined for the 52 post offices in the district that falls under Belleville's jurisdiction.

Belleville — one of the biggest mail distribution centres in eastern Ontario — handles mail for an area from Cobourg to Napanee, and from about Madoc to Prince Edward County.

Belleville's postmaster said his staff is "working on the mail backlog first and will have it processed as soon as pile-ups in Toronto and Montreal are cleaned out.

Even if backlogs are cleared quickly, the post office will shortly face another flood of mail — Christmas cards. If Christmas mail is bad, said Mr. Wainwright, the post office could fall behind in its processing by about 11,000 pieces of mail.

The postmaster said he now has begun to hire seasonal help.

About 12 people began work Thursday, a fraction of the extra 130 workers. Mr. Wainwright says he expects to need before Christmas arrives.

Mohawks At Polls Saturday

TYENDINAGA — Quinte Mohawk voters go to the polls Saturday to elect the band council that will administer local government on this reserve for the next two years.

Voting will be held in the reserve's community centre from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., says Peter Green, electoral returning officer.

There are slightly more than 700 on the voting list from the reserve's total population of about 1,300, estimates Mr. Green.

Some 11 candidates were nominated for four council seats two weeks ago.

Chief William Brant—who has headed council for the past two years—is being opposed for the chieftainship by Willard Hill a former councillor.

Juvenile Returned To School

A 14-year-old Hamilton youth was returned to training school for an indefinite period after he was found guilty of four counts of theft in juvenile court here Wednesday.

The youth, who Belleville police say is also wanted in Hamilton — Wentworth Regional Police in connection with similar thefts in the Hamilton area, is a former training school ward.

He was charged with two counts of theft over $200 and two counts of theft under $200 following his arrest on Front St. by a police officer on foot patrol.

Police say the arrest followed the "till-tap" of $400 from the cash register at Fenina Ladies Wear at 253 Front St.

Police say the other thefts involved money taken from cash registers at Loblaw's on Pinnacle St. (#200), Bata Shoe Stores at 233 Front St. (#39) and two purses from McIntosh Bros. Stores Ltd., at 257 Front St.

Pageant Planned

The staff and students of Sir James Whitney School will present the annual Christmas Pageant — The Nativity, on Dec. 12 and 13 at 8.15 p.m. in the gymnatorium.

The Christmas performance will feature a cast of 42 deaf students, a rhythm band of 30 students and a choir of staff members.

A pantomime, directed by three deaf teachers, will also be presented for the first time this year.

Gun Conviction Brings Probation

A 25-year-old Belleville man was placed on probation for two years and prohibited from having a firmarm for five years by Judge J.L. Clending in provincial court here Thursday.

Lynn Douglas Stratton of 399 MacDonald Ave. appeared for sentencing on a charge of dangerous use of a firearm. He pleaded guilty on Oct. 30.

Belleville police say Stratton was arrested following an investigation into an incident at a city residence on Oct. 5 when they were said a revolving in his living room had discharged a .22 — caliber rifle into his kitchen.

Police say the incident involved a domestic dispute and no one was injured.

Public to Get First Look At Bayfront Study Dec. 15

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The Quinte Bayfront study has been completed.

The conceptual plan for development of waterfront recreation areas now is in possession of the Mate River Conservation Authority (MRCA), which commissioned the study late last year.

Copies of the document were delivered to the MRCA offices Thursday by Ralph Crysler, Toronto consultant who originated the study.

James McLeod, MRCA secretary-treasurer, said the study will be publicly presented at a joint meeting of the authority and the three involved municipalities — Belleville, Sidney and Thurlow townships.

Present plans are to hold the meeting during the week of Dec. 15.

The study area centres on Belleville and involved about 16 miles of Bay of Quinte shoreline across Thurlow to almost Bayside in Sidney.

A basic assignment of the study was to produce public access to the Bay waterfront for various recreational purposes.

Major River shorelines through the city to greenbelt north of College St. was also included.

One of the consultant's aims was to produce a route running the length of the study area for pedestrians and cyclists.

There were various develop-

Trial Continues

The trial of Norman Buxton, 24, of West Hill near Toronto, charged with two counts of false pretences, was to continue in Hastings County Court here today.

Buxton is charged in connection with two incidents in Trenton on Jan. 9 and Jan. 10 this year.

Assistant Crown attorney John Wood and Belleville concluded his case Thursday and two defence witnesses were also heard.

Buxton pleaded not guilty to both counts Tuesday before Judge Russell C. Honey and a 12-member jury was selected.

ments suggested during discussions with local government and community groups as Mr. Crysler was assembling data earlier this year.

The more major of these included: (1) Creation of a marina or yacht basin east of the federal government wharf at the end of South Front St. (2) Development in the Point Anne area of a wetlands conservation zone and recreation-education area tied to local settlement and industrial history. (3) Creation of boating parks, boat-launching sites and beaches along the shoreline.

Cost estimates were to be included in the study. But, Mr. Crysler already has said public funds should not be spent on providing services in competition with private enterprise.

If business can provide a service government should not be involved, the told a meeting in Belleville recently.

Mr. Crysler said the "citizenship of land within the area could also prove a complicating factor. The 16 miles of shoreline runs the gamut of property proprietorships — from industrial to farming to residential to recreational.

In turn, public land is held by various government levels — federal, provincial, federal, municipal, the Belleville Harbor Commission and the MRCA itself.

Gun Control Continues

BY COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

But even Mayor Corke has his doubts.

"I want to have the matter discussed at council but I'm not sure we have enough information yet to convince council that we need such a study" said the mayor.

"It would be a tremendous step forward to have the tracks relocated," said Mayor Corke.

In answer to the township's opposition of being "stuck" with the rail line, Mayor Corke said he had no doubt as to the opposition and that "the only chance we have is if both Canadian Pacific and Canadian National use the same corridor."

The government spokesman said that selling the rail companies in such a manner is an alternative considered in the study.

While Mr. Wiskwarth of the transportation department said he would "almost guarantee" a study would take 18 months for a Belleville approval, he said "there's no harm in submitting something."

Even with the wait, the government is only committed to making land available and has made no commitment to implementation of study conclusions," said Mr. Wiskwarth.

While few members of the planning board devoted much time to the question of relocation — a topic of numerous recent discussions — Belleville Ald. Art Keegan broke at length calling for understanding and assistance from neighboring municipalities in dealing with the problem.

Belleville has the problems connected to a "fast-growing community," said Ald. Keegan during a lengthy address. "See what your councils can come up with to help the city with this problem."

Despite the alderman's plea for township support of the study, both township reeves were quite firm saying help would not likely be available.

"I really wouldn't think my council will go for contributing funds for a study," said Mayor Reeve Casey.

Sidney Reeve Wilman agreed with his Thurlow counterpart saying "we wouldn't have anything to gain by it."

Lights Popular With Vandals

TRENTON — A spokesman for the town police said today there has been a rash of outdoor Christmas lights and decorations stolen during the last week.

He said anyone caught stealing bulbs will be investigated and charged with theft.

Belleville Mayor Ben Corke, a homeowner had approximately 100 bulbs taken from the outside decoration.

Scouter Wants Return To Traditional Goals

Watching a boy scout help an elderly person across the street may become a thing of the past.

Assistant district commissioner of scouts in Belleville, Quinte and Prince Edward, Don Pecheyo, said the scouts are getting away from being "goody goodies" and he wants a change.

Mr. DeClerq, a scouter since 1944, first in Toronto and later in Belleville, is in charge of the Second Belleville Troop at Christ Church.

Mr. DeClerq said his major complaint is with the change in almost every scouting manual.

"The good deed is a failure," he said. "Scouting is not encouraging their troops."

A new program for scouting, introduced a few years ago in Canada, gave the boys more responsibility. Instead of relying on the scouters to decide a program, they made their own, said Mr. DeClerq.

"Now the boys between the ages of 11 and 14 made their programs for three weeks, said Mr. DeClerq, before they ran out of ideas.

"The troops need a little guidance and that's the role of the scouter," he said.

Mr. DeClerq is still the same in scouting — good citizenship, said Mr. DeClerq, but the methods of teaching this vary.

An open house held Monday at Christ Church complete with displays and camping demonstrations was a way of keeping the community in touch with scouting, said Mr. DeClerq.

Construction Start

Groundwork has started in Deseronto on site of the town's first senior citizens' apartments. Over the foundations will rise a 32-unit residential complex for district's elderly folk. A worker adjusts pump as machinery in background continues excavation.

Loyalist Governor Questions Arts Centre Use by Outside Groups

BY ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Rev. J. Maloney of the Loyalist College Board of Governors warned the board Thursday if it desires to adhere to the members area of Hastings County of the proposed Quinte Arts Centre to be located at Loyalist, it must consider the centre's benefits for everyone "and not just the heavily populated areas around Lake Ontario."

Father Maloney, who represents the members area of Hastings County of the board, had asked how Bancroft would benefit from the centre, which is currently being considered as a second phase of a $75,000 feasibility study.

Cost of the community arts centre, a 1,200-seat, flexible-use auditorium available for all types of cultural activity, is estimated at $2.17 million.

A Quinte Arts Centre Task Force (QACTF), composed of both board and Quinte Arts Council representatives, has been formed to administer the study. The consulting firm is Dixon-Bailey Associates Ltd of Toronto.

QACTF chairman Friedl Bellisedt, a Belleville board member, noted small communities are unable to attract high-class cultural entertainment due to the reluctance of top performers to appear before audiences of 400-500 people.

He suggested with the proposed centre to be located at the hub of the four-county area that people from outlying areas will have a shorter distance to view such entertainment.

Enthusiasm about the proposed Quinte Arts Centre to be located at Loyalist College should not be mistaken for a commitment to build the centre, says Will Wilkinson, chairman of the college board of governors.

The $2.17 million centre, a 1,200-seat, flexible-use auditorium available for all types of cultural activity, is the subject of the current second phase of a $75,000 feasibility study. The study is conducted by a Toronto consulting firm, Dixon-Bailey Associates Ltd., and is administered by the Quinte Arts Centre Task Force, composed of representatives of both the board and Quinte Arts Council.

Mr. Wilkinson cautioned the board Thursday there is no intention to proceed with the project "until all facts are known.

"Lets see sound we are committed to this centre, it must be pointed out we are a long way from it," he noted.

Mr. Wilkinson explained neither the actual costs of operation nor a firm construction figure have been determined.

"In these times of restraint, we don't want to get ourselves into a situation where we can't handle it financially," he commented.

Task Force Studying Similar Operations

Quinte Arts Centre Task Force (QACTF) members are venturing into the field to study the operation of cultural facilities aligned with Ontario community centres and universities in order to achieve a feeling of the operating parameters of such facilities.

QACTF composed of representatives of both the Loyalist College Board of Governors and Quinte Arts Council, administers the current second phase of a $75,000 feasibility study into the proposed centre to be located at Loyalist.

QACTF chairman Friedl Bellisedt of the board told following governors Thursday QACTF members currently travel to other provincial colleges and universities to gain a better understanding of programs at centres at similar institutions to Loyalist.

Mr. Bellisedt said he visited a cultural centre at Seneca College recently and was impressed with the extent to which the centre benefitted the surrounding community.

"It makes me drool to see the possibilities for the Quinte area," he commented.

Centre Still Only Study Says Chairman

College Studying Ways To Cut Energy Usage

Loyalist College Board of Governors will soon embark on a $60,000 study into the modification of the college's heating and air conditioning plant which should save Loyalist at least $17,000 per year in energy costs.

Friedl Bellisedt, chairman of the board's building and grounds committee, said Thursday the move follows a directive from the provincial ministry of energy to all 22 community colleges in Ontario to decrease their use of electricity and conserve energy.

Board chairman Will Wilkinson pointing out some of the facets of the recent hydro rate hike become apparent, the annual savings under the modification could amount to more than $20,000.

No Conflict Expected With Two Facilities

A recent study conducted by consultants indicates there will not be a conflict in programs between the proposed Quinte Arts Centre to be located at Loyalist College and Centennial Theatre, Quinte Sports Centre on Cannifton Rd., says Friedl Bellisedt, chairman of the Quinte Arts Centre Task Force (QACTF).

Mr. Bellisedt of the Loyalist College Board of Governors told the board Thursday the conclusion was reached by Dixon-Bailey Associates Ltd. of Toronto, QACTF consulting firm.

QACTF, composed of representatives of both the board and Quinte Arts Council, administers the current second phase of a $75,000 feasibility study into the proposed centre.

Cost of the centre, a 1,200 — seat, flexible — use auditorium available for all types of cultural activity, is estimated at $2.17 million.

The Yardmen project, an 18 million complex initiated by the Belleville Yardmen's Benefit Fund, will be a multi-use facility seating about 4,000 people.

Outside Groups

cepted an invitation to join QACTF. He said Warden William Thomson attended the last QACTF meeting.

Belleville is represented by Ald. Jean Smith. There has not been notification of acceptance by Northumberland County, Mr. Bellisedt said.

Sidney, Thurlow, Tyendinaga and Trenton have spokesmen on QACTF due to current representation on the college board.

Capitals Give Bruins Battle

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Goaltender Ron Low could only carry Washington Capitals through the first 40 minutes of their National Hockey League game Thursday night.

Low had the Capitals leading Boston 1-0 after two periods of their National Hockey League game, but the Bruins scored three times on Low in the last 7 minutes to beat Washington 3-2.

The Capitals outshot the Bruins 43-15 but not until defenceman Al Sims scored twice in the final period was Boston able to take control of the game.

"We almost pulled it off," said Washington coach Milt Schmidt. "Almost. We didn't quite have enough experience."

Boston coach Don Cherry said Schmidt, a longtime Bruin player, coach and executive, "was tougher, right tactics against his stronger team.

"Milt Schmidt had them playing the way they had to play to beat us," he said. "You just hang on and hope your goalie's hot."

The always fragile Washington attack all but disappeared in the final period when Boston had a 15-2 edge in shots. Johnny Bucyk scored his 11th goal of the season before Ace Bailey scored his second goal of the night for Washington to complete the scoring.

It was the second respectable score in as many nights for the stunned opposition. On Wednesday, they tied Buffalo Sabres 4-4.

In Thursday's other games, Philadelphia Flyers stopped Chicago Black Hawks 5-2, New York Rangers tied Buffalo 4-4, Montreal Canadiens topped St. Louis Blues 4-1 and New York Islanders whipped Pittsburgh Penguins 6-1.

The unsally trouncest Dave Schultz turned in goal-scoring in the first period at Philadelphia, touching his third and fourth of the year for the Flyers, who ended a Chicago unbeaten streak at 15 games.

Andre Dupont, Rick MacLeish and Tom Bladon added a goal each for the Flyers, who have an unbeaten string of their own of seven games. John Marks and Bobby Sheehan scored for Chicago.

Buffalo coach Floyd Smith and Ranger coach Ron Stewart called the wide-open, sloppy brand of hockey played in their game "river hockey."

Phil Esposito scored twice for the Rangers in the first period. Greg Polis, Bill Fairbairn, Pete Stemkowski and Rick Middleton were the other New York scorers.

Rene Robert scored his second goal of the night with less than seven minutes to play to give the Sabres the tie. Danny Gare, Peter McNab, Don Lever and Jerry Korab were the other Buffalo scorers.

Yvan Cournoyer and Murray Wilson scored goals for Montreal less than a minute apart in the second period as the Blues lost their fifth game in a row.

Billy Harris scored two goals and added an assist to lead the Islanders to their easy win over Pittsburgh.

800 for Golden Jet

By NEIL CAMPBELL
The Canadian Press

Thursday was a night to remember for two players who helped make Chicago Black Hawks a perennial National Hockey League contender in the 1960s.

Bobby Hull scored the 700th and 800th goals of his professional careers to lead Winnipeg Jets to a 5-4 win over San Diego Mariners in a World Hockey Association game.

Pat Stapleton drew assists on six goals, most ever by a WHA defenceman, to lead Indianapolis Racers in a 7-1 win over Cincinnati Stingers.

In the only other WHA game, rookie Del Hall scored twice for Phoenix Roadrunners in a 5-4 win over New England Whalers.

Thursday's goals didn't affect Hull's over-all career ranking. He is still well behind Gordie Howe of Houston Aeros, who has 856 goals, and comfortably ahead of Frank Mahovlich of Toronto Toros, who has 585.

Hull opened the scoring before a San Diego crowd of 3,636 with his 14th goal of the year, helped out by Mike Ford and Lars Sjberg.

Hull's second goal, also set up by Sjoberg, tied the game 4-4. Willy Lindstrom scored the winner in the final minute, three seconds after the Mariners finished killing a penalty.

The 36-year-old Hull has scored 116 goals in three plus seasons with the WHA after a major league record 77 last season.

Stapleton switched to the WHA as player-coach of Chicago Cougars in 1972-74 and became part owner of the team before it folded last year. He switched to the Racers this year.

He drew assists against the Stingers on two goals each by Bob Sicinski and Kenny Scharf and one each by Nick Harbaruk and Bobby Whitlock.

The old record of five assists was set by Doug Barrie of Edmonton Oilers on Jan. 20, 1973, against New York Raiders and tied by Kevin Morrison of San Diego on March 4 this year against Quebec Nordiques.

Stapleton has three goals and 15 assists for the season.

The Racers and Stingers also drew a record 45 penalties, including 24 to Cincinnati and 19 to Indianapolis for a total of 180 minutes. The old high was 42 penalties.

Hall, assigned by coach Sandy Hucul to a new line with Rob Ftorek and John Gray, also earned a pair of assists but it was third-period goal by Michel Cormier that gave the Roadrunners the win.

Tom Webster scored two goals and Wayne Carleton, kept under tight check by the Roadrunners, and Rosaire Paiement one each for New England.

Roberto May Face Charges

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia attorney-general's department is considering charges against Detroit hockey player Phil Roberto as a result of an incident here Wednesday in a National Hockey League game, Attorney-General Alex Mcdonald said Thursday.

Macdonald said that he has requested the game film to review the incident and that whether charges are necessary against Roberto, a right winger for the Red Wings.

Roberto was assessed a match penalty for intent to injure by referee Brian Lewis after forward Don Lever of Vancouver Canucks was speared in the throat. Lever swallowed his tongue and had to be helped from the ice.

"The incident has been drawn to our attention and we're looking at it very closely," said Macdonald. "A decision should be made shortly, probably in less than a week."

NHL president Clarence Campbell suspended Roberto on Thursday for an indefinite period until he receives the referee's game report.

Dan Maloney of the Red Wings, who sat out Wednesday's game because of an injury, was reinstated Monday in an Ontario provincial court on an assault charge following an April last month involving defenceman Brian Glennie of Toronto Maple Leafs.

TEAM FINED

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Defending champion Juventus has been fined $1,500 by the Italian soccer league because its fans tossed snowballs at a referee in a game Sunday.

BOSTON TOP DH

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Willie Horton of Detroit Tigers was the American League's 1975 outstanding designated hitter award, it was announced Wednesday. Horton had a .273 batting average, 25 home runs and 93 runs batted in during the 1975 season.

Delvecchio Takes Over

VANCOUVER (CP) — It was Alex Delvecchio's 46th birthday Thursday and as a gift Detroit Red Wings gave him the club's coaching position.

In making the move, before leaving here for Calliopsis and a National Hockey League game tonight against the Golden Seals the Red Wings fired Doug Barkley who took over as coach from Delvecchio last June.

Delvecchio, who retired Nov. 9 1973, after 23 seasons as a player with the Wings, initiated the change. For the time being, he will also remain in his capacity as general manager, a position he took over when Barkley became coach.

GEORGE REED

Ninth All-star Selection for Reed

By IAN MacLADE

George Reed, who shatters a records every time he cea the ball and every time he cores a touchdown, is one o ise Saskatchewan Roughriders used in the Western Football onference all-star team as- nounced today.

Reed, selected as a WFC all- ar for the ninth time, has cored 137 touchdowns—134 ushing—and carried the ball 1,- 13 times for 16,116 yards in 13 easons in the Canadian Foot- all League.

The 35-year-old running back, most consistent runner in ague history, also ran his CFL record string to 11 seasons in which he has gained 1,000 or more yards.

Team-mates joking him on the WFC offensive unit, selected by members of the Football Re- porters of Canada in the five western CFL cities, are quar- terback Ron Lancaster, receiver Rhett Dawson and guard Ralph Galloway.

Five Roughriders making the defence are end George Wells, tackle Tim Roth and halfbacks Lorne Richardson, Ted Dun- mall and Jim Marshall. Mar- shall finished in a tie with Larry Highbaugh of Edmonton and Willie Burden, the Calgary Stampeder flanker, for the final half spot, as light end for the third straight year.

Five Ringbrothers making the defence are end Gerry Weil, tackle Tim Roth and halfbacks Lorne Richardson, Ted Dun- mall and Jim Marshall. Mar- shall finished in a tie with Larry Highbaugh of Edmonton and Willie Burden, the Calgary Stampeder flanker, for the final half spot, as light end for the third straight year.

The Grey Cup champion Ed- monton pot five players on the all-star team, four on offence, which he has gained 1,000 or- placed five players, three on de- fence; Calgary Stampeders con- tributed four, three on the de- fence, and Winnipeg Blue Bombers had two named to the defence.

Willie Burden, the Calgary back who set two records this season, and Lou Harris of British Columbia com- plete the running positions on offence.

Edmonton veteran George McGowan is the other wide re- ceiver with Tyrone Walls, also of the Eskimos, getting the nod at flank.

B.C.'s Al Wilson, at centre, is joined by guards Galloway and Willie Martin of Edmonton with Layne McDowell of the Lions also Lions and Edmonton's Charles Turner at tackle.

Bill Baker, who earned all-star recognition three times as a Rider before going to B.C. this season, was named the kicker end on the defensive unit.

Calgary's John Helton, for the second time, and Roth a tackle complete the front four.

Harry Walters of Winnipeg is the middle linebacker, B.C. rookie Larry Cameron and Cal- gary veteran Joe Ferzani the outside linebackers.

Completing the deep backs are Brian Herosian of the Blue Bombers and Calgary's Vernon Roberson.

Burden rushed for a CFL record 1,896 yards this season, breaking by 123 yards the 16- year-old record of another fot- mer Calgary runner, Earl Lon- sford, now the general manager of the Winnipeg.

Bayside Seniors Stop ENSS Squad

Bayside Secondary School rolled to its second win in as many Bay of Quinte High School Basketball League starts in the senior level in B Division play, Thursday, outscoring visiting East Northumberland Secondary School of Brighton 63-51.

Making its first league start, the ENSS squad got a 30-point effort from Mike Day but it wasn't enough to turn back Bayside which was led by Paul Dassylva with 16 points and Rick Hodgson who threw in 14. Kevin Wadsworth was good for 10 ENSS points.

Bayside teams were not as fortunate in midget and junior contests. The visitors pulled out a 38-34 win in overtime in the midget match and in junior, it was ENSS over Bayside 52-40.

Craig Poupart popped in 14 points for ENSS midgets, equalling the output of the top scorer for the losers, Don Dassylva.

ENSS juniors were led by G Sharp with 12 points. The game's top scorer was Bayside's Ken Lemoire.

In another midget game in the B section, Napanee and District Secondary School made its first start an impressive one, visiting Albert Colsive and coming away on top 85-36. Pearson and Gilbert each hooked 16 points to lead Napanee Steve Johnson had 12 and Eric Deaan 10 for Albert.

Albert turned the tables on Napanee in an exhibition junior game, posting an 86-51 victory, led by Glenn Bechtel with 32 points and Mike Tynes who hit for 26.

Midget and junior teams were in action at Moira Secondary School in A Division games.

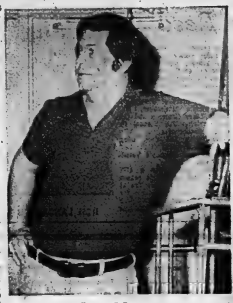
Moira Trojans gained a split with visiting Centennial Secondary School Chargers, taking the midget contest 36-32 but coming out on the short end of the 66-46 score in the junior matchup

Steve Whitley and Art Pultz took care of the bulk of the Chargers' production in the junior game. Whitley poured in 29 points and Pultz was right in step with 24. Kevin McKay led Moira with 18 points and Bruce McKay chipped in with 14. Joe Miskala added nine points.

Leading scorer in Trojan's midget win was Robbie Smith with 13. John Belanger, Bob Hall and Charlie Hurst each collected six points. Jim Wickenorr's 12 points paced Chargers. Rory Radford was good for nine points.

Tuesday exhibition results at North Addington Educational Centre showed Albert College squads taking two of three from the home teams.

Albert midgets got 19 points from Steve Johnson in a 36-33 loss while the school's juniors won 57-35 as Glenn Bechtel and Duncan Coote each hooked 16 points. Albert senior wins were led by Anthony Stuart's 22 points in a 49-34 victory. Ed Chan added 19 points to the winners' total.



Jim Murray

New Game Plan For the Saints

This is the year the Saints go marching. Quinte's senior basketball entry in the A Division of the Bay of Quinte Basketball League has no choice but to do a lot of marching this season. They plan to make up for an over-all lack of height with a pressing man-on-man defence.

"We're not as strong as we have been in past years," said Saints coach, Jim Murray, "I think all the guys on the team are aware of that."

"We don't have the height we've had in the past so we really can't afford to let the opposition set up under our hoop," he added.

Thus, the man-on-man. By pestling the opposition down court, Murray hopes his charges will force turnovers thereby controlling the game and, in turn, the scoreboard.

So far, Murray's marauders have found themselves in a certain amount of difficulty with the aggressive press, however, BCI, champions in the junior segment of the Trenton Black and Gold Tournament appear to be a sure bet for the finals.

The draw begins at 7.30 Saturday morning with Nicholson Bible Chargers, At 8.30 Cobourg West plays Quinte, 9.30 BCI faces Eastondale and at 10.30 Oshawa squares off with Brighton.

Semi-finals are at 3.30 p.m. and 4.30 p.m. with the final at 6 p.m. Each team is guaranteed two games. Admission is 50 cents with a student card and 25 without.

Napanee Comets Nip League Leading Flyers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Three goals by Mike Kennedy Whitby helped to a 7-4 home-ice victory over Orillia Travlers in an Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game Thursday.

In the other game, Napanee Comets upset league-leading Barrie Flyers 5-4 in overtime.

League action resumes tonight with a Terrier-Warrior rematch in Orillia.

Playing at home, the Warriors led 4-0 after the first period and 6-0 by the end of the second.

Dave Talaryn stopped 36 shots on the night. Orillia got a shutout bid late in the third period when John Winder scored on a power play.

Talaryn, who played with Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association in their last two games, returns to the Toros today as an injury replacement.

Howie Menard scored two for Whitby goals and Gary Milroy and Greg Bodnar each had one.

Each team was assessed two fighting majors in the contest. Gerry Raycroft picked up a misconduct.

Whitby outshot sixth-place Orillia 40-27.

In Barrie, Rick Gerow scored the overtime goal to lift the third-place Comets in a 5-4 win over the Flyers.

The teams were tied 3-3 after regular time a scoreless second period.

Wayne Elder, Bob Ferguson, Wayne McConnel and Charlie Convery got the other Napanee goals.

Barrie goals came from Doug Acomb, Bob Bedard, Dan Pagnutti and Paul Regan, who scored with less than a minute remaining in the third period to send the game into overtime.

The wins Thursday moved Napanee into a tie with a third-place tie, one point ahead of Cambridge Hornets.

Centennial to Host Junior Tournament

Centennial Secondary School is quickly becoming the centre of basketball activity in the Bay of Quinte area. And, at the rate the school is developing its reputation is may soon be known throughout Eastern Ontario.

CSS is the site of many of the Senior A Bay of Quinte doubleheaders last weekend the McDonald's Belleville Basketball Classic was staged there and this weekend it hosts its own Junior Charger Invitational Tournament.

Last year, CSS held its first senior tourney. It will be held again this season and because of the success, athletics director Bruce Faulds introduced the junior competition.

"We used to go to a lot of tournaments out of town," said Faulds, "everyone in the area had to go out of town to get tournament competition so I decided we should start running our own."

Faulds plans to make the junior, like the senior, an annual event. The response he has received five Bay of Quinte senior squads from outside the region.

"I didn't get as many outside entries as I would have liked," commented the tournament convenor. "But I'm content with the list for the first time around!"

Quinte Saints, CI Collegiate, Nicholson Hicks, Brighton Trojans and the Chargers have got the list of local teams. Kingston's Regiopolis, Notre Dame Lasalle and Cobourg West are the other teams signed.

Of these eight, five are likely strong enough to win the title. However, BCI, champions in the junior segment of the Trenton Black and Gold Tournament appear to be a sure bet for the finals.

The draw begins at 7.30 Saturday morning with Nicholson Bible Chargers, At 8.30 Cobourg West plays Quinte, 9.30 BCI faces Regiopolis and at 10.30 Oshawa squares off with Brighton.

Semi-finals are at 3.30 p.m. and 4.30 p.m. with the final at 6 p.m. Each team is guaranteed two games. Admission is 50 cents with a student card and 25 without.

CITY OF BELLEVILLE — LOCAL IMPROVEMENT NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE THAT:

1. The Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville intends to construct as a local improvement the following storm sewers, concrete curbs and gutters and the reconstruction of sidewalks and an asphalt road surface, and intends to specially assess a part of the cost upon the land abutting the work and the balance against the Corporation at large as follows:

STREET	FROM	TO	ESTIMATED COST	CORPORATION'S SHARE	OWNERS' SHARE	ESTIMATED COST PER FOOT FRONTAGE	ESTIMATED ANNUAL COST PER FOOT FRONTAGE
Victoria Ave.	William St.	McDonald Ave.	$270,300.00	$195,100.00	$75,200.00	$22.51	$3.62

EXAMPLE: Lot with 50 ft. frontage would be assessed as follows:
50 ft. x $22.51 — $1,125.50
If paid over a period of 10 years at 11% per annum, the annual cost would be:
50 ft. x $3.62 — $191.00

2. The Special Assessment is to be paid in 10 annual instalments.
3. Application will be made by the Corporation to the Ontario Municipal Board for its approval of the undertaking of the said work and any owner may, within 21 days after the first publication of the Notice, file with the Clerk of the municipality his objection to the said work being undertaken.
4. The said Board may approve the said work being undertaken, but before doing so may appoint a time and place when any objection to the said work will be considered.

DATE OF FIRST PUBLICATION — Friday, December 5th, 1975.
DATE OF SECOND PUBLICATION — Friday, December 12th, 1975.

1975 - A Year Of Clowns

MONTREAL (CP) — It could be called the year of the clown because the city is full of them. So far 1975 has seen them in parks, on the street, in shopping malls—even on television—commercials.

Not so long ago, life in Montreal wasn't very funny for this kind of performer. Work was scarce, and police frowned on jesters who did street routines in exchange for spare change.

Zeko and Wadja should know. Two years ago, they used to ply their yellow-and-black striped kitchen pleating strategy and entertain us. They were trying to figure out how they could make a living out of being around.

In their early 20s, they kept an apartment that looks like a stagecoach for a Barnum and Bailey circus. The living room is reserved for gym mats, peanut-shaped swords, rubber balls and assorted noses.

Downstairs in a mock factory and costume room. The rest of the place is chock full of gold fishes, dusty wine bottles and other physical non-sequiters.

Zeko is Gerard Harte and Wadja is Terry Noble. They are as actress and actor who decided several years back that more than anything else they wanted to be clowns.

"When you're a clown," explains Terry, "there's magic in the name. Once you put it on, whether it's balloons and large or round shoes, you're a clown. Not an actor, not a person. A clown, that's something special."

Contrary to what the public might think, he adds, clowning is a very self-revealing occupation.

"You'd think that a clown would have more to hide behind on stage than a regular actor. Clowns have masks and makeup. But the actor has a role to mask his own personality. It's easy to hide yourself in a figure like Hamlet. A clown's character is an extension of his own personality."

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Don't make winning ego being the best at something so important today that you'll believe so as to be offensive to others.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Be very selective of those whom you choose to be your friend with today. An erratic companion could cause you some problems.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20) — Your superiority leads to petty things before taking the time to evaluate the consequences. Don't be in such a rush.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Business conditions are especially tricky for you today. Handle your affairs prudently. Avoid debit purchases.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Usually you're pleasing to get along with. Today you're not likely to be as cooperative as you should be. Stubbornness doesn't become you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — If you feel a bit uptight today, it's probably because you've given yourself too much to do. Decide whether it's boldness and large or round shoes, you're a clown. Not an actor, not a person. A clown, that's something special."

Contrary to what the public might think, he adds, clowning is a very self-revealing occupation.

"You'd think that a clown would have more to hide behind on stage than a regular actor. Clowns have masks and makeup. But the actor has a role to mask his own personality. It's easy to hide yourself in a figure like Hamlet. A clown's character is an extension of his own personality."

tion to spend beyond your means doesn't gain the upper hand.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — This will be a busy and active but disrupted day. You're apt to feel pulled in several directions at once.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Today you'll rationalize and look for excuses for neglecting your responsibilities. They won't be magically whisked away.

105-year-old Man Lives With Manslaughter Rap

APOPKA, Fla. (CP) — Ed Hall, state-appointed lawyer was (Possum Slim) Myers spends a lot of his time in a small, dark bathroom, sipping gin to keep his spirits up and chatting with a couple of ghosts who he says were calling on him for help.

"Just two ghosts," he wants to make clear. "One was my woman I ever loved and the only woman I ever slid down. They both forgive me."

For Possum, forgiveness has a special meaning. "I wouldn't want to face the Lord Jesus with a black stain on my soul and love is all that can cleanse you," he says.

He thinks about that a lot because most days he's alone. Possum, apart from his grinding poverty, has what he says is his age and legal status. He's 105 years old and he's been convicted of manslaughter.

"I'm just alittle' here stashin'," he tells a visitor, "wondering how I got me where I is and whether I'll ever go home. Have to Confess to you, Jamie, He's seein' me through all this."

John (Jamie) Jamieson, a public defender, was appointed to act on behalf of marginally-poor clients after a successful career as a political aide and private investigator. He remembers Possum's lawyer, personal and legal problems.

He took on Possum's case, he says, after he was told that the old man was in trouble and that he was a minister.

"Massive problems of technology, management and sheer scale have been overcome by the Queen personally and switch to inaugurate oil flow from British Petroleum's giant Forties field in the North Sea.

After performing the ceremony at the company's control headquarters in Dyce, near Aberdeen, she watched on closed-circuit television as the first consignment of North Sea oil entered a storage tank at the Cruden Bay terminal 30 miles away.

The ceremony was watched by the Duke of Edinburgh, Prime Minister Harold Wilson, Opposition Secretary James Callaghan and Anthony Wedgwood Benn, secretary of state for energy.

Mr. Wilson said North Sea oil will lead to a new industrial revolution and will make Britain self-sufficient in oil by 1980.

North Sea Oil Field Aids British Budget

ABERDEEN, Scotland (CP) — Britain's North Sea oil bonanza received a royal send-off when Queen Elizabeth II switch to inaugurate oil flow from British Petroleum's giant Forties field in the North Sea.

After performing the ceremony at the company's control headquarters in Dyce, near Aberdeen, she watched on closed-circuit television as the first consignment of North Sea oil entered a storage tank at the Cruden Bay terminal 30 miles away.

The ceremony was watched by the Duke of Edinburgh, Prime Minister Harold Wilson, Opposition Secretary James Callaghan and Anthony Wedgwood Benn, secretary of state for energy.

Mr. Wilson said North Sea oil will lead to a new industrial revolution and will make Britain self-sufficient in oil by 1980.

got the nickname Possum Slim because of his small eye and a sideline of trapping and shooting possums for their hides.

Later, in his early 80s, Possum decided he'd had enough of living alone. "So I took to housekeepin' with Miss Mattie and we was common-law married 'fill the Lord called her away long years ago."

That was when Possum's troubles started. Mose, a bad friendless, he bought a bottle of whisky to give to a hard-living local woman on her 54th birthday.

Like she always did, she asked for more," he says. "I take a few dollars out and show her that's all I got and she puts it in and run off with another man."

That was June.13 and for Possum it was the final insult. He grabbed his gun and followed the pair, wounding the man and cornering the woman in her house. He demanded the money back but she reached up her skirt and I knowed there was a gun there so I shoots, bam, and she's dead."

If there was a gun, it was never found. "She tells me now she comes to visit that I didn't kill her," he says, "and the Lord understands, I know that."

As his visitors prepare to leave, Possum looks mournfully at Jamieson. "You forgettin'," he says, and the young lawyer returns and embraces him. That's better." Possum sighs, grasping contentedly after his gin bottle.

Diet Important After Colostomy

By G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Here is my problem. Three years ago I had a colostomy. Everything is fine, except for one problem. I constantly gas after eating. I am getting mostly starched, and I eat very little during the day. Occasionally I feel like I am full and will last a few days.

I would like to have a special diet you can suggest. At least I'd like any advice you can give.—Mrs. D.P.

The type of food eaten by the colostomy patient depends on the two three major problems—gassiousness, diarrhea or constipation. You have a mixture of these problems to the other extreme, which seems to be your problem.

Undoubtedly, it is a matter of experimentation, of learning your patterns.

You mention eating mostly starches. This could well be one cause of excessive gas. Another cause of resulting high levels of fermentation is fiber in foods. Avoid candy, sugar, and pastries, for this reason. Increase protein: lean meat, fish, fowl, eggs and cheese.

Vegetables such as beans, peas, cabbage should be limited. Raw vegetables tend to create gas. Eat more slowly to chew thoroughly. Visit your hospitals have dietitians who counsel patients with problems. Some have nurses who are expert in helping with colostomy problems.

You seem to have adjusted positively to your colostomy, a major factor in learning how to handle this often troublesome procedure.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had a mole on my breast removed. Is this dangerous? What makes a mole grow? Is it unusual to have moles on your breasts? What causes some people have more than others? If they grow, should they be removed?—M.M.

The common mole, known as a "nevus," is a benign growth which usually appears in the first few years of life. Most people have them, but they may seem more obvious in persons with lighter complexions.

It is not unusual for a mole to disappear. In fact, many people can have dozens of them, and see the number reduced to a few by middle age or later in life. Breasts are common sites.

But a mole that grows in size deserves attention. It is rare for one that appears after age 25. Rapid enlargement and color changes color dramatically.

Moles can be removed for cosmetic purposes, and surgery is advisable if it is in a location that causes physical irritation.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: One subject I don't believe you have written about is body odor. I perspire moderately, but I do have odor under my arms no matter how much I wash or what deodorant or anti-perspirant I use. I am a healthy female. I'm 23-years-old, 5 feet, 7 inches, and I weight 125 pounds.

I work in an office and it is quite embarrassing. I have even asked my doctor for advice. But his solution is only deodorants and deodorants didn't work. Could you please offer a solution in your column?—Miss R.W.

I sometimes suspect that as a society we've over-emphasized and anti-perspired ourselves to the point that a perfectly normal, physiological mechanism—perspiration—bothers a person of 30 years ago would appear odd to be a teaching club.

I am not suggesting you don't have a real problem, but I did suspect, based on the number of letters I receive on this subject, that a lot of folks are worrying about a problem that is quite nothing more. Incidentally, you and you do not perspire excessively. Then why the anti-perspirants? I am told that over a couple of rather basic observations.

Sweat glands under the arms, in the pelvic area and under the breasts are somewhat larger than those on the rest of the body. They can produce a more potent odor. If the areas are not kept clean, this sweat can react with bacteria and cause a truly offensive odor. The key is keeping the areas clean.

Excessive use of vitamin B can also produce a distinctive body odor.

A combination of water and baking soda can be effective as can a number of commercial cosmetic counters. Shaving the armpits is essential to reduce odors.

Take a good shower or bath in the morning. Dry off under the arms well, then dust with an astringent powder or apply the solution I mention.

Your body odor may be of your own imagining. Give your skin a chance to behave normally. In extreme cases of truly offensive odor under the arms, layers of glandular-containing skin can be removed surgically. It is usually effective.

Archeological Findings May Alter History Text

STOUFFVILLE, Ont. (CP) — As a result of some dedicated — and, in some instances, lucky — digging—finds have been made at a 650-year-old archeological site that might change writing of history.

The finds were made at an Indian village near Stouffville, sixty about 20 miles northeast of Toronto where workers have uncovered relics which might cause historians to re-examine many of their conceptions of Canadian history.

For example, some brass beads and a brass ring have been found which may force scholars to rethink their views about when Europeans started fur-trading with the Indians.

William D. Finlayson, a lecturer at University of Western Ontario, who heads the dig, said the finds mean the Hurons who lived in the village might have obtained the beads through trade in the St. Lawrence River valley with the Basques and Portuguese, putting the trading era about 100 years ahead of the date in the history books.

Throughout the summer, Mr. Finlayson kept his people working at breakneck speed to clear out as many as possible of the artifacts before bulldozers moved in to start work on the new Toronto airport.

But then the federal government's cancellation of the project in December, plus the generosity of students and others working on the project have able to let up a little on the work. And, in early November, work was resumed—temporarily when the dig was shut down for the winter.

At least a million specimens are expected to come out of the site, including arrowheads, stone tools and pipes.

As well, 40,000 to 50,000 seeds—such as sunflower, raspberry and elderberry seeds—have been unearthed which will provide the investigators with a fairly accurate picture of the tribe's diet.

Tobacco seeds also are among the finds, marking the first time an archeological has been able to prove Champlain Indians of 450 years ago grew their own tobacco.

The Draper Site Archeological Project, as it is called, is one of the biggest digs of its kind ever undertaken in Canada, and the $225,000 contract is the largest ever organized by the National Museum of Man, Archeological Survey of Canada.

Money for the work came from the ministry of transport, and those in the project hope the ministry will provide another $300,000 next year to complete it.

The site, which is its time was one of the largest villages in Ontario, was discovered in 1968 when it was by a farmer named Draper, but until the digging began, it was an airport nearby—when excavation of the site became urgent—little investigation had been done.

Originally the village was thought to cover only about seven acres, but now is known to have covered 15 to 18 acres. So far, 31 longhouses have been found, the buildings varying between 95 and 250 feet.

Human bones have been found scattered and some bear evidence of chewing marks indicating the villagers tortured their captives and ate them.

In the midst of the village a gigantic garbage has been found measuring about 40 feet across and 10 feet deep which, according to Mr. Finlayson's calculations, would have taken almost at one time have been 10 feet high and would have given off a real stench in the hot weather.

Old literature indicates Indian villages were largely abandoned during the summer with the men away hunting or fighting and the women and children going outside the village to live in bark shelters. Mr. Finlayson speculates that one reason the garbage was located was the smell from the garbage dump.

IS A GROUP

Monitor is the name of a group of 30 kinds of lizards that live in the Solomon Islands, New Guinea and Australia. The largest of the group is a dragon of Komodo which sometimes reaches 10 feet in length.

In Memoriam

CLAPPER — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Eva Clapper, who passed away December 8, 1972.
Sadly missed since she's very, Quietly resting, never more.
Gone from our life to share,
But in our memory she's always there.
—Lovingly remembered by son Carl and family.

CLAPPER — In memory of Eva Rose, who passed away December 8, 1972.
The telephone stopped ringing,
On that sad, silent night,
God held your hand,
And said it's right.
You fought so hard to stay,
Dear mom we miss you,
But now it's time,
Until the very end of time,
To rest in God's arms.
Forever in our hearts,
—Daughter Norma, son-in-law Garnet and Gerry.

CLAPPER — In loving memory of my dear mom, Eva Rose Clapper, who passed away 3 years ago today, December 8, 1969.
God gave us our mother,
To love and cherish her,
But one day from our arms,
He gave to train her charms,
Although the years may pass,
Three years ago today,
That God took mother away,
To live in His home for ever.
—Sadly missed, always remembered, daughter Elaine and husband Ken.

CLAPPER — In loving memory of a dear mother, Eva Clapper, who passed away December 8, 1972.
Three years have passed and memories linger,
In the midst of my joys I can miss her,
In my sad hours I yearn for her gentle touch,
A heart so kind,
Words can't express how much I miss her.
—Sadly missed by daughter Marie, husband Ken, children Kenneth, Valerie, Susan, John and Janet.

Anka Likes 'Big Apple'

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Anka knows his heart is in the Big Apple.

Mike Beame, the mayor of New York City, was there to catch it.

Anka, the phenomenal Ottawa native who more than a decade ago gave the song Put Your Head on My Shoulder to the bubblegum poopers, gave a little bit of support Thursday night to New York City.

The love New York City, Anka said as he greeted about 1,000 fans outside of Broadway's Uris Theatre.

Anka had opened a delayed run, now only for 10 days, at the Uris, one of Broadway's newest and largest play houses.

At his scheduled opening earlier this fall, at the Palace, Anka had planned to donate his earnings — whole bunglio—to skid-row, which later, Anka came back.

Mayor Beame's office issued a brief statement which said the proceeds from three days of Anka's 10 at the Uris will go to New York City.

Cousteau Searching for Atlantis

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In his search for the lost city of Atlantis, Jacques-Yves Cousteau is ever the optimist.

"Of course we will be successful. Even if you don't find what you are looking for, the search is always itself the effort. Nature is so overwhelming that you always find something that is worthwhile."

Cousteau was here for a few days to confer with his film producer, Marshall Flaxen of Metromedia, before taking off on his next adventure.

The Frenchman is a philosopher-explorer and a popularizer who understands the use of media in 1975.

The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau, which begins its final season on ABCTV this month, appears in more than 100 countries of the world.

With the end of the Undersea World series, Cousteau will devote his efforts to a pair of two-hour specials in 1976. One will concern the world's hunters of undersea treasure. The other will be a search for Atlantis.

"Of course we don't expect to uncover a complete civilization," he cautions. "But even if we find only one statue, that would be extremely exciting. We know nothing about the people of Atlantis; we don't even know how they got their beads. Anything that we recover would be revealing."

Atlantis has occupied the imagination of the world ever since Plato wrote about the so-called lost civilization. Cousteau believes its site is near the Greek island of Santorini and that will be the base of his operations with the ship Calypso.

Cousteau intends to devote a year to the Atlantis search, remaining 20 days a month on the Calypso. The other 10 days will be spent in New York and here, overseeing the Cousteau Society and the television productions.

Show Biz Shorts

MANILA (Reuter) — Francis Ford Coppola is producing a film about the Vietnam war which he hopes will be as successful as his Academy Award winning Godfather movies.

Coppola, who is in Manila to supervise preparations for the filming of Apocalypse Now, which he promises will be a philosophical discussion of man and "orgiastic" in its violent society.

"Films about Vietnam have been a hot potato in the movie industry in the last few years so one would touch them with a 10-foot pole—because I guess the American people felt guilty," he said.

Apocalypse Now, with a budget of $12 million, will be shot on location in the Philippines. Negotiations are under way to sign Marlon Brando, Gene Hackman and Steve McQueen to play the major roles.

Apocalypse Now, an adaptation of Joseph Conrad's 1902 novel, Heart of Darkness, is set in Vietnam during the war in 1968. It is the story of a man who sets out on a journey up river to assassinate an mysterious agent called Kurtz.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television entertainer Johnny Carson has received a bill for $11 million to appear in a motion picture version of author Irving Shaw's new book, Nightwork.

Shaw was a guest Tuesday on Carson's Tonight Show and talked about the book, about a new husband — recipient of a sleazy hotel who finds a dead man with $100,000 in his pockets.

During the 1a's, agent Irving Lazar walked on stage and offered Carson what he said was a $1 million cheque if he would take the starring role, saying it would only take 10 days in film.

Spitfires, Petes Pull Off Upsets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Windsor and Peterborough, last-place teams in the Emms and Leyden Divisions, respectively, scored upsets Thursday in the only Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A action.

The Spitfires dumped first Sbt. Marie Greyhounds 5-3 and the Petes trimmed Kitchener Rangers 5-4.

Play resumes tonight with Oshawa Generals playing in Kitchener, Windsor meeting the 97s in Ottawa, Sault Ste. Marie visiting London Knights, Kingston Canadians playing host to Toronto Marlboros and St. Catharines Black Hawks travelling to meet Hamilton Fincups.

A home crowd of 3,000 fans watched Mike Dwyer score three goals to break an eight-game losing streak for the Spitfires.

Dwyer scored in each period to hand the Greyhounds their sixth defeat in the last eight games. Sault Ste. Marie remains in fourth place in the Leyden Division.

Other Windsor goals went to Ginger Purdon, Cherlie Skidd and Jack Anderson.

Mike Hendy, Romano Cecilia and Steve Young replied for Sault Ste. Marie, outshot 33-25.

Referee Frank Martin assessed 10 minutes in penalties, including three majors to each team and a match penalty to Windsor's John Holmes for participating in a fight with taped fists.

Playing at home, the Petes trailed 3-1 at the end of the first period but held a 4-3 margin going into the third.

Peterborough got goals from Tony Carmichael, Mark Kirton, Mike Fryia, Ron Moore and Brad Pirie.

Ret Laurence and Berry Dueneh replied for third-place Kitchener in the Emms Division.

The Rangers outshot Peterborough 38-25 and took 13 of the 25 penalties handed out.

Nighthawks Blanked By Richmond Robins

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Pete Scamurra's second-period goal led Richmond Robins to a 3-0 win over New Haven Nighthawks in the only American Hockey League game Thursday night.

The win increased the Robins' Southern Divisen lead over the second-place Nighthawks to four points.

After a listless first period Scamurra, a recently acquired defenseman, carried the puck up the ice and shot in close. The puck bounced off the post, but goalie Brian Holdsmans' skate and deibbled into the cage.

Andy Peloffy scored the only other goal on a breakaway. It was his 13th goal of the season.

In game, tonight, Nova Scotia is at Providence and New Haven visits Rochester.

Historians Seek Empire Loyalist Information for Major Study

LONDON (Reuter) — Historians in Britain, Canada and the United States would like to hear from anyone with information on colonists who remained loyal to Britain during the American revolution.

About 40 historians have joined the Loyalist Papers project, and will mark the U.S. bicentennial by gathering and cataloguing loyalist names and source material.

While the United States officially celebrates the "winners" of the revolution these scholars are searching out the stories of the "losers," those who remained loyal to their king and, in most cases, paid dearly for it.

It is fascinating, untold history—untold in the U.S. mainly because Americans are slightly embarrassed by the large number of colonists who supported the "wrong" side.

Not all the loyalists were blue-blooded, white-skinned aristocrats. Some of the more bizarre stories being gathered are of American Indians and blacks loyal to King George III.

The historians' first problem is to define the term "loyalists," for as one tired professor said at a recent conference on the subject in London: "Most of us wouldn't know who a loyalist was if we met him on an empty street."

Those who fled the 13 colonies during the war obviously fit the category. Prof. Esmond Wright, director of the Institute of U.S. Studies at the University of London and a leader of the project, estimates that about 80,000 left — exile—about 43,000 to Canada, 8,000 to England, and the rest elsewhere, many in the West Indies.

Paul Banks of the U.S. Library of Congress said in his recent book, Loyalists and Redcoats, that 20,000 colonial men enrolled in loyalist regiments to fight the rebels. From this he reckons that 70 per cent of the American population opposed independence.

But definitions are tricky. Gen. George Washington was a loyalist until he chose to lead the crass a slightly treat to King George's breath, claiming he was speaking for the armies of Parliament, not the king.

But in the spring of 1776, Washington, along with thousands of other patriots changed his mind, as pamphlet producer Tom Paine began attacking the "Royal brute."

The earlier colonial visitors had hoped for a quick British victory so they could return home. But as the American armies began winning battles, many found themselves taking peculiar pride in the fighting skills of their former neighbors.

Those who fled to Canada when it became evident they could not go back, set about becoming the founding fathers of that country. Until recently it was fashionable in eastern Canada for families who could trace their ancestry back to the loyalists to write U.E.L. (United Empire Loyalist) after their names.

Thus Canadian scholars are way ahead in loyalists studies—"it's our history," said one Canadian professor in London—and will be bringing out several volumes on the subject soon, including one on black loyalists.

Hospitals Ordered To Freeze Salaries

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario hospitals have been instructed by the provincial ministry of health to freeze salaries, full-time and part-time staff and any planned expansion in programs and services for 1976.

A government memorandum, mailed to the hospitals Friday, also tells the hospitals not to submit budgets for 1976 until they more directives, dealing with spending guidelines and specific bed closures and staff reductions, have been sent out.

The Ontario supplementary estimates for March, 1975, show the province spends $2.536 billion or 28.7 per cent of its revenue on health care.

The memorandum, which represents the first phase of a government campaign to reduce health costs, tells hospitals that "the ministry will be making every possible effort to contain hospital operating costs at the lowest possible level."

It says reductions will have to be made in the volume of inpatient services and the number of persons operating hospitals.

Hospitals are also told:

—No costs of collective agreements signed after Oct. 13 (the date the federal selective wage and-price controls were announced) will be accepted.

—Salaries and perquisites (including residence accomodation, automobiles, club fees and membership fees) affecting senior staff also are frozen at the Oct. 13 level although there is room for appeals where some subordinate staff members may be making more money than their seniors.

—Filching for all collective agreements now under negotiation will only be available if new contracts live up to the general controls.

—Expenses for goods and services will not be accepted if they are more than 10 per cent above those for 1975.

The hospitals are warned against increasing work loads and are told that increased costs for out-patient services will be restricted to eight per cent over 1975. While they are restricted in spending, the hospitals are told to avoid revenue increases to 10 per cent.

Peter Wood, assistant executive director of the Ontario Hospital Association, said the first phase of the guidelines was likely to be less worrisome to the hospitals than the next two phases.

"The main stink will be when the government gets down to individual cuts and starts closing beds or staff," he said.

Laura Barr, director of the Registered Nurses' Association of Ontario, said nurses are not having trouble finding jobs this fall although some have had to settle for locations and shifts that are not their first choice.

Most concerned is Thomas Edwards, hospital representative for the Canadian Union of Public Employees, which represents service workers, kitchen staff, cleaners and maintenance workers.

Mr. Edwards said the union has already filed a protest with the government over action by St. Joseph's Hospital in Toronto where employees were told to take two days off without pay in an effort to reduce expenditures.

Response to Freeze

In-patient Volume Uncontrolable: Bateman

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

A major difficulty posed by a provincial government freeze on hospital financing, in control of in-patient volume, Carl Bateman, Belleville General Hospital board chairman indicates.

Mr. Bateman was commenting on a health ministry memorandum — now in the mail — which forbids increases, including those caused by higher patient admissions.

He said today he was not surprised at a directive against expansion of facilities.

"But I don't know how in the world you can control in-patient volume," he said. "Hospitals are the end product of a health care system that generates this volume.

"... How can we, as a board, stand at the door and say 'you can't be admitted.'"

Mr. Bateman, also Hastings County administrator, said he may have a statement after he has read the memorandum when it arrives.

For 1975, the ministry approved a BGH operating budget of close to $12,700,000, the bulk of which went on salaries and wages — an estimated $9.8 million earlier this year.

Quinte Rescue Squad worked for two hours Friday night to free a man trapped in his car after a single-car accident one half mile north of Glen Miller village on Highway 37. Campbell Gilchrist, 26, of 11 King St., Frankford, sustained injuries to his legs and head and is listed in satisfactory condition today at Belleville General Hospital. Details are sketchy but Belleville Ontario Provincial Police said the accident sent four other people to the hospital.

Moluccans Free 7, Standoff Continues

AMSTERDAM (AP) — South Moluccan nationalists held up to 41 hostages today in two standoffs at the Indonesian consulate in Amsterdam and aboard a hijacked train in northern Holland.

Mediators from the South Moluccan community in Amsterdam won the release of seven children from the consulate Friday, but at night fell the six gunmen continued to hold four children and between 16 and 21 adults. Negotiations were suspended until morning.

An explosion in the train hijacking by South Moluccans near Beilen, 90 miles north of here, resulted in the release of two hostages and the surrender of an injured gunmen. Security officials said the explosion was "accidental."

The remaining four hijackers held 36 hostages, who were spending their fifth straight night aboard the train.

Both sets of gunmen are exiles from South Moluccs or sons of exiles. The Moluccas also known as the Spice Islands, became part of Indonesia 25 years ago when the Dutch ended colonial rule in the East Asiag archipelago. The Dutch government has no power to do anything about the independence demands.

Taylor Says Angry MDs Cause Problems

TORONTO (CP) — Discontent in Ontario's mental retardation system has been caused by a few disgruntled doctors, James Taylor, community and social services minister, said Friday.

The 20 doctors in Ontario's psychiatric hospitals and retardation centres used Thursday they will hold a one-day strike to protest the government's decision to hire non-medical co-ordinators of medical services at three centres. No date has been set for the strike.

The non-medical staff are expected to be appointed at centres in Oshawa, Smiths Falls and Smiths Falls.

Mr. Taylor said in the legislature that he is willing to meet with the doctors to discuss the situation.

Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis asked whether the government, in its "lust for federal

Fraser Pelted With Plums

ROCKHAMPTON, Australia (Reuter) — Demonstrators pelted Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser with plums and a half-eaten chicken at an election rally today.

Fraser smiled when he was struck by the chicken, but he completed his address before being hustled away from the chanting crowd by security men.

The rally, attended by about 1,500 people, following a bomb hoax at Fraser's hotel in the northern city at Cairns early today.

Fraser, who is acting as caretaker prime minister pending the result of next Saturday's general election, has been encouraged by opinion polls which have indicated a big swing from Labor to his Liberal-led coalition.

News Briefs

Backs Expansion

OTTAWA (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan said Friday he hopes the government will not have to expropriate any property for a planned expansion of St. Lawrence Islands National Park. He told the Commons that the government hopes to purchase property for the park, in the Thousand Islands region of eastern Ontario, as it comes on the market.

Develops Space Device

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is spending nearly $14.5 million to design a 58-foot, arm-like device which will enable astronauts in the U.S. space shuttle to place and retrieve cargo in space, it was announced Friday. The device is Canada's part in a joint space project which ensures Canadian access to the space shuttle for delivering satellites and carrying out experiments.

Egg Prices to Drop

OTTAWA (CP) — The price of Grade A large eggs is to drop one cent a dozen next Monday, but Beryl Plumptre and Eugene Whelan have differing explanations about this good news for consumers. The decrease was announced by the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) Friday. The reason the agency manager Max Roytenburg was that it reflected a decline in the price of feed for laying hens.

Carlos Keeps Premier

MADRID (AP) — King Juan Carlos I has decided to keep Carlos Arias Navarro as premier and has armed him with added powers to implement cautiously liberal policies, Juan Carols announced Friday he will keep the 67-year-old Arias as the head of government to serve a five-year term that began January, 1974, under the late Gen. Francisco Franco.

NDP Conference to Be Held Here in February

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The New Democratic Party has selected the Quinte district as the site for a three-day policy conference involving eastcentral Ontario.

The sessions will be held at the Hastings community centre on the Trenadinaga reserve Feb. 6-8.

Conference chairman is Ian Reilly of Belleville.

Mr. Reilly says more than 100 delegates are expected to participate in a program that will focus on NDP policy for the region — an area ranging from north of Oshawa to Kingston.

The event will be a prelude to the NDP convention at Kingston next June and will also be an opportunity to discuss election and organization planning and strategy.

There will be delegates from the 41 ridings in the region. Constituencies represented will be Prince Edward-Lennox, Northumberland, Frontenac-Addington, Kingston and the Islands, Peterborough, Durham North, Durham East, Victoria and Haliburton.

Trenton Woman Awarded Wings for Second Time

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Wendy Whelan, going on 20, Friday night got wings — for the second time.

She became the first female graduate of Belleville Flying Club to hold licences as a glider pilot and for powered flight.

The young Trenton woman, now a travel and tourism student at Toronto's Seneca College, was among 24 fliers to receive wings — symbolic of their licensing as private pilots — at the club's Christmas party at the Four Seasons Hotel.

It was the first class of powered flight pilots to graduate under the flying club's own instruction program.

Miss Whelan won the club's Angel award for unique accomplishment.

The club's Chief Flight Instructor's trophy for top proficiency went to Sam Alchouel, formerly of CFB Trenton, now of Jamby Bay with a forest fire protection company.

Jeanne Sauve Named Environment Minister

OTTAWA (CP) — Jeanne Sauve, environment minister, was sworn in as communications minister Friday.

Romeo LeBlanc, fisheries minister, will be acting minister of environment.

Mrs. Sauve, wife of a former Liberal cabinet minister,has been in Parliament since 1972. She has been environment minister since last June, and science minister before that.

Education Beat

Program Geared For Leadership

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

While teacher professional development continues to be batted around by both the public and the profession itself the concept of student development is slowly gaining momentum in schools.

Bayside Secondary School has been quietly waging its own student development program since September. Two Bayside teachers, Marshall Tubbs and Fran Blair, have developed a student leadership program designed to strengthen and enrich the personalities of students.

The program's primary goal is to develop natural leadership abilities in some students so that they can conduct student affairs and solve problems that arise in the school environment.

The perhaps more important the two teachers are trying to give these students the confidence and communication skills required to be leaders in the business and political worlds and as well as many other facets of communities.

Bayside Secondary School has already held six two-day sessions since September. Between 30 and 35 students take part in the two-day programs. Mr. Tubbs said he would like to see the majority of students take the program. It is usually held at the Ann St. Education Centre because the two instructors believe an atmosphere outside of the school is more conducive to this type of group work.

After the two-day program the particular group meets once a week to evaluate and work out further details of the program. Mr. Tubbs said the guidelines are in a process of change and both instructors become more familiar with the needs of the students.

Communication skills, including listening, expressing oneself, and learning trust and confidence et others, is the key to the actual solve problems that arise in the school environment.

The role of the teacher is that of a facilitator or a resource person. Students are required to take the responsibility of getting the most from the program.

The students also examine their reactions in encounter sessions and discuss the various appropriate courses of action required. They also examine their own reactions and the reactions of others they meet.

The program, according to Mr. Tubbs is still in the exploratory stage and will probably be changed in time but he feels that the results have been positive and visible in the students who take the course.

Tweed Stores Stay Open

TWEED — The Chamber of Commerce has announced the following Christmas Store Hours in Tweed Village.

Beginning Monday, December 15, and continuing until Friday, December 19, stores will be open until 9 p.m. Stores will close at 5 p.m. on Saturday, December 20.

The following week, stores will remain open until 9 p.m. on Monday and Tuesday, December 22 and 23, but will close at 6 p.m. on Christmas Eve, December 24.

It was announced at the most recent meeting of the Tweed Chamber of Commerce that there had been no objections to the proposed Christmas store hours, and that the suggested times would be most effective on Monday, December 15.

Bayside Meeting Site

The Quinte Christian High School Association will meet next week, Dec. 11 at 8 p.m. at Bayside Secondary School. A spokesman for the group said the public is welcome to attend.

City Child Injured in Collision

THOMASBURG — A Belleville child is listed in serious condition with head injuries at Kingston General Hospital after a two-car collision Friday night on Highway 37 at Thomasburg.

Shane Smith, two, of 329 Bridge St., Belleville, was one of the passengers in a car driven by Sharon J. Hawrylak, 21, of Rt. 5 Belleville. Another passenger, Ohn Clement, 17, of Rt. 4 Tweed, was treated and released from Belleville General Hospital.

A spokesman for the Madoc Provincial Police said the Hawrylak vehicle was northbound on Highway 37 when it approached an intersection near White's Service Station and swerved to avoid a vehicle driven by Edgar Geen, 23, of Thomasburg, who was making a left-hand turn towards Thomasburg.

The Hawrylak vehicle collided head-on with a car driven southbound by Charles E. Swinnington, 64, of Elmonte.

Mr. Swinnington and his passenger Reta Swinnington, 61, was treated and released from SGH.

Damage to the Swinnington vehicle was estimated at $500 with damage to the Hawrylak vehicle set at $1,500.

The accident is still under investigation.

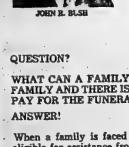
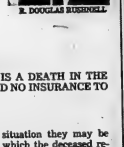
FUNERAL QUESTIONS



JOHN R. BUSH

WE ARE OFTEN ASKED



R. DOUGLAS RUSHNELL

QUESTION?

WHAT CAN A FAMILY DO IF THERE IS A DEATH IN THE FAMILY AND THERE IS NO MONEY AND NO INSURANCE TO PAY FOR THE FUNERAL?

ANSWER!

When a family is faced with the above situation they may be eligible for assistance from the County in which the deceased resided. Application for assistance is made through the Dept. of Social Services. If the application is approved the Social Services Dept. will assume full responsiblity for the funeral expenses including a cemetary plot. If a family is not eligible for the above grant your funeral director will assist the family by offering a plan of monthly payments.

Gobbling Gulls

Even though Belleville was blanketed with snow this week, the city's seagull population was not deterred from enjoying its daily repast. While cars wended their way along slippery streets and pedestrians slopped their way along slushy sidewalks, the gulls swooped down the lower end of the Moira River gobbling minnows. Although observers shivered in the wind, the birds appeared oblivious to the cold water, undisturbed by the noise of the city around them.

Livestock Sales

Receipts were heavy on most classes of cattle and calves at Belleville Livestock Sales Tuesday. Prices were generally steady on good steers and heifers and cows were steady. Good stocker cattle sold higher. Good stock steer and heifer calves sold strong. Good dairy cows and heifers were in strong demand at high prices. Weaned pigs and shoats were high.

Machine Might Mean End To Manual Berry Picking

HALIFAX (CP) — Modern technology has come up with an answer to the blueberry picker's backache. It's a mechanical low-bush blueberry harvester.

Agriculture Minister Jack Cicco said machine could be developed to a point where it would pick at a rate of one acre an hour.

The development of the machine was part of the research program of Nova Scotia Agricultural College in Truro and the Blueberry Growers Association of Nova Scotia.

The machine consists of a drum with fingers that rotate through the blueberry plants in much the same manner as a hand rake. The berries are collected in the rotating drum and then transported by a conveyor belt in boxes that can be set aside for later pick-up.

A number of modifications have been made to the machine and although it is capable of mechanically picking berries under most field conditions, Mr. Hawkins said it would be necessary to make additional modifications to increase productivity in the 1976 berry picking season.

preliminary testing of the machine indicates that it's comparable to hand-rakers in terms of completeness of harvest without crop damage.

Nine Factors Affect Plants

By ROSS HAWTHORNE

The basic factors the taffect a house plant's health, and well-being are as follows:

1) Light — natural or artificial
2) Temperatures — day and night
3) Humidity
4) Watering
5) Nutrition
6) Soil Mix
7) Containers
8) Potting and Repotting
9) Insects and Disease

But it is the first three we are concerned with in establishing the wide variety of "climate profiles" existant in our homes in preparation for fitting our plants into those profiles according to their individual needs.

And we place "light" — natural or artificial — at the top of the list because it is the hinge on which all else turns. No plants except mushrooms and toad stools will exist with out light. It is essential to every plant's health and well being. Without it, no chlorophyll is manufactured and no food is synthesized and little or no growth takes place.

True, there are some plants tolerant of poor light conditions, plants such as Aspidistra or Chinese Evergreen but that's all they'll do — tolerate, in proper light — they'll thrive.

Now, let's classify light into four basic categories: 1) Sunshine, 2) Bright, 3) Filtered, 4) Low.

Sunshine means either a south, west or east window. A south window from now until April will be fine for plants that like four or more hours of sunshine a day. But from May through October, it could be just too much in terms of sunshine and heat buildup.

A west or east window is fine for plants that like two or more hours of sunshine a day as long as you remember that a west window gets higher night and cooler early day temperatures and an east window — just the opposite.

The second category — bright light is provided by a north window or a brightly lit room with light walls and with plants in close proximity to the lights. A room with lots of sunshine, in those area, rather than in direct sun could also qualify as "bright."

Filtered light usually refers to sunshine through a south, west or east window, filtered by sheer curtains, or the branches of a tree or shrub, bars as they may be.

Low light means the corner of a room or a hallway with a limited or distrust light source.

So, begin your "climate profiles" by classifying rooms and sections of rooms according to how their light profiles match the above categories.

And next week we'll talk about temperatures and humidity profiles.

Litterbugs Just Might Be Dogs

BY MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Picton mayor Donald King this week called for a crackdown on the litterbugs who strew garbage on the streets asserting that the "days of warning are over."

Mayor King added that he had observed Main Street on a recent Sunday morning and reported that it was "a mess" with cans, papers and other litter creating eyesores.

He told town council that it is difficult for the PICTON it is difficult for the Picton police department to apprehend litterbugs as these offenders are unlikely to do their thing while officers observe them.

However, a town by-law does prohibit placement of garbage on Main Street more than two hours before scheduled pick-up.

With council's apparent concern for keeping Picton beautiful it is amazing that the broken garbage strewers of all have been completely overlooked.

On every garbage day in Picton there is also a red letter day for the dozens of dogs that roam at large.

Ripping garbage bags carefully tied and placed at the curb by home owners are swiftly ripped apart and contents scattered by the canine trash troop.

A crackdown on dogs running at large would accomplish a great deal toward improvement in the appearance of Picton streets and lawns.

Certainly, dogs do not toss pop cans from car windows or drop take-out food containers in public places but they do zero in on trash bags as prime targets for games of chew and destroy.

If council is serious in its efforts to clean up the streets it will be impossible to keep skirting the need for an animal control officer.

By curtailing the strays and household pets permitted to run at large a dog catcher would reduce the littering have on garbage collection days.

When council demonstrates concern for ridding the town of foot-legged horror then other community residents may show greater interest in a litire free streets.

By hiring a competent dog catcher town council will not automatically eliminate all dogs in Picton. This step, however, would add dignity to any crackdown on "dirty Jobs."

As it stands council is leaning heavily on community's front door calling for penalties for litterbugs then stepping to the back door to let the dogs out for a run.

Hotel Hazard Needs Remedy

By JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

The fire-gutted Gilbert Hotel has been declared a safety hazard by the fire inspector and the Trenton building inspector but the town has made no effort to have the dangerous situation corrected.

Spokesmen for the municipality have contended, and rightfully so, that the existing by-law which covers the problem has no officer appointed to enforce the act. The town has twice once immediately after the fire in March, 1975 and three weeks ago acting on the complaint of a citizen and local community engineer — informed the owners of the building that it is a hazard but has made no definitive moves to rectify the situation.

Aside from the two harmless letters and informing the municipality's insurance agent of the problem to make sure the town was not liable if any passer-by were hit by falling debris, the town has shown little concern for the safety of its residents.

The last complaint was initiated by an engineer who said that because the walls were exposed to the elements water would seep in, freeze and loosen the mortar, when it thaws making it more critical during the high winds of spring. It was also pointed out that the roof, which had all but disappeared at one section was not providing lateral support for the walls.

The building is located in the downtown core on a well-travelled street and if one of the sections of burned out wall collapsed when the area is crowded it will likely cause great physical harm to anyone unlucky enough to be around at the time.

The situation presents a hazard to anyone near the area and it is incomprehensible that council, who can not help being aware of the problem when they look out of the chamber windows, has not made a move to force the owners to eliminate the problem.

Perhaps if a demonstration of the potential hazard could be arranged for town council, the falling bricks and debris might jor something loose upon impact, wake up the august group and force them to take action.

Hopefully they would rest comfortably in the hospital assured that the municipality was not liable and that the exercise would not cost the city any money.

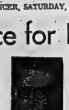
Independence for Dutch Guiana as Racial Tensions Flare Up in Netherlands

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thurston News Service



The sprawling Guyana region along the northwest coast of South America is represented politically in four countries. Here, the Guyana provinces of Venezuela and the three more familiar "Guyanas" of British, Dutch and French rule.

British Guiana became the Independent Commonwealth Caribbean nation of Guyana in 1966.

French Guiana remains a self-governing region with the French union, not unlike the political relationship of the last French islands in the western hemisphere in the Caribbean and off Newfoundland.

And the last-known of the three Dutch Guyana or Surinam became yet another independent nation in South America at the end of November.

It will be one of two Dutch-speaking nations in the western hemisphere. The other one will be the Netherland Antilles, better-known by the familiar island of Aruba, when it reaches independence probably in 1980.

Already it looks as though Surinam will be a copybook version of Guyana where problems of race, politics and markets for its major natural resource are concerned.

And in Guyana as well as in the huge Venezuelan region with the same name, Surinam is rich in bauxite.

Also very much like Guyana, Surinam will be a restless multi-racial society with blacks in political control and East Indians, (from Java rather than from India, as is the case with Guyana), as the not always well-regarded but wealthy merchant and trader class.

Other racial elements in the continent's newest small nation of 400,000 people include a dwindling community of the original Amerindians and about 118,000 Creoles.

The Dutch government, recognizing the racial tensions in their colony, offered Dutch citizenship to any Surinamese who could make it to Holland before independence day.

The result was an exodus of about 3,000 per day from the archipelago known as Indonesia, and which was part of the former Dutch East Indies. The island also has a Dutch heritage and it has been active within normally placid Holland.

What will all this human tension-loss from its former far-flung empire in America and Asia, the Dutch are experiencing the same racial prejudices which have become commonplace in Britain, home to several million former subjects of Asian, African and Caribbean colonies which are now independent nations.

Already the Surinamese who chose to stay have been being discriminated against in Dutch restaurants, housing and jobs.

In Holland as to Britain the legacy of empire where humanity is concerned, is proving out with the hauling down of the flag.

It is interesting that independence for Surinam with the last-minute influx of locals who didn't want to live in a new state, took place at the same time as a group of South Malacan revolutionaries hijacked a train in northern Holland.

South Malacca is one of the vast island sprawling the archipelago known as Indonesia, and which was part of the former Dutch East Indies. The island also has a Dutch heritage and it has been active within normally placid Holland.

What will all this human tension-loss from its former far-flung empire in America and Asia, the Dutch are experiencing the same racial prejudices which have become commonplace in Britain, home to several million former subjects of Asian, African and Caribbean colonies which are now independent nations.

Issue of Free Speech

Belleville City Council cannot be said to have taken "cheap shots" at the Postal Union, as local union president Walter Yatemman suggests.

True, local councils had no direct concern with the strike or its settlement, but indirectly it affected everyone. In this respect council members are as much entitled to an opinion as anyone else. They expressed those opinions when polled by The Intelligencer.

What were they expected to say? That all is prettiness and light in the land, with everyone pulling his weight?

The union president and members should face the fact that the bulk of the population is fed up with being held to ransom by first one sector, then another and with the postal service, it seems, frequently in the van.

Mr. Yateman's remark, "we remember our enemies for a long time," may well "boomerang," to his and the union's disadvantage. Threats such as this, directed at council and, in effect, at the community as a whole, should have no place in these first days following the end of the strike.

Peking Interlude

The U.S.-Chinese deliberations now concluded, have been of a stylised character—from the low-key welcome to President Ford in Peking to the formal dinner with a vice-premier questioning Washington's policy of detente with Russia and Mr. Ford replying with a prepared speech.

There may well be good reasons for questioning efforts to hold hands with the Soviets. After all they are said to be spending a great deal more on the build-up of their forces than the Americans, while still imposing restrictions on the freedom of its own citizens — keeping its Nobel prizewinners at home for instance — but does Washington need to hear this from the Chinese?

Still, it's a small world. America and China may be worlds apart, as the saying goes, ideologically, yet not all that far away by today's jets — and via Alaska is that, where distance between the two is significantly narrowed. And all the more so of course, where the Soviet Union is concerned.

If there is no detente, what remains of hope, let alone a future, for the universe?

Rigors of The Arctic

So you want to be a model?

And jet off to the Caribbean or other exotic backgrounds. And never mind — where the kids are concerned — the pushy and competitive parents, and stuffing down the "appetizing" food that in fact has gone cold, and so on.

But who would want to stand out there and take pictures and be photographed at 40 below (Fahrenheit)?

The answer comes in the Indian and Northern Affairs department's handsome publication North Nord, to give it its full bilingual title.

Oktiokie Takolik is the young Eskimo woman who, took the pictures of model Anapolis Alooke, admitting that her right hand was cold while she worked, while Anaoyok said, "at least the coats I model are warm at 40 below. Both work for the Spence Bay Craft Project which produces fashions for southern markets. Dyes come from wild flowers of the region and this is the subject of a book being prepared by another Spence Bay resident, Judy McGrath.

North provides an interesting insight into the people of the Arctic region and, as this issue suggests, it is a salute to northern women, with another attractive Eskimo woman, Bernadette Brintneli, as cover model.

Much is made of the cost of producing government publications such as this handsomely-illustrated departmental magazine. Here is one though which returns to the taxpayer a wealth of interesting information about a region most of us will never see. It includes one of a series of articles by Anna Hoskyn-Thomas, wife of an Anglican missionary at Cambridge Bay in the 1930s. Articles and pictures capture much of the constraining, elemental beauty and harshness of the Arctic environment. Available in the Corby library here, as well as on magazine stands, it is a valuable contribution to the cultural mosaic.

Mandatory Use of Seatbelts Is a Success in Australia

From The Mudoc Review

Aussies are "a pretty belligerent crowd", said Sydney policeman, but if their seat belt law was changed tomorrow "nine out of 10" would wear them.

And as for the fears of policemen in Ontario that it could be difficult to enforce a seat belt law, there's no trouble with that Down Under, added Detective-Sergeant Glenson of Sydney police.

Wearing seat belts became compulsory in Australia in 1970 and public acceptance has been exceptional, said Glenson.

The law was first introduced in 1968 and Australians were given two years to get used to the idea. Then on 1970, according to Glenson, the police were ready to step in and force people to wear them by levying fines of up to $40.

"It didn't work that way. We don't have any statistics but very few people had to be fined.

The little enforcement that has been needed in Australia turned out to be relatively simple" Glenson adds.

"We didn't have to use spot checks on anything like that", Glenson said. "It's been proven without a doubt that seat belts cut down the number of fatal accidents."

The Irish Free State was proclaimed 53 years ago today in 1923—in the absence from the Irish Parliament of Republican party deputies. Although war with England ended a year before, there was civil war between Irishmen wanting an immediate break with Britain and those willing to settle for dominion status. The Irish Republican Army began a terrorist campaign and killed an English field marshal in London and Michael Collins, commander of the official Irish army, in Cork. Civil disorder subsided in 1923 after an appeal from Eamon de Valera.

Wage Offers: Board's Credibility at Stake

Montreal Le Jour: Many current wage offers are clearly over the guidelines and if Mr. Pepin is to retain any credibility, they will have to be reduced.

But he won't be able to arbitrate all of them. Certain wage offers by the Quebec government to public service workers exceed the federal directives.

In addition, the provincial premier to increase wages automatically if the cost of living index rises more than eight per cent can only mean an eventual breakdown of the Trudeau measures. . . .

In other cases, unions and companies seeking to obey the directives have had to lessen both demands and offers, as was the case in the recent clothing union settlement. . . .

There is also the possibility that certain settlements reached after current strikes would be nullified by the control board, and that would be nothing less than a flouting of justice. . . .

The Ravages of Pollution

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Ontario's tough Environmental Protection Act is of little use to the people of Ontario and the Natural Environment. If Ministry of the Environment officials, continue to avoid enforcing the regulations.

For this failure the people of Ontario, are rewarded with poisoned wells, dangerous radioactive waste dumped near homes, cattle dying and people treated for insecticide inhalation.

Residents west of Frankford, unable to use water from their wells, for drinking, bathing, or laundering could cause severe body rashes and many cases of "running blisters." The smell from the water is almost enough to make you sick.

Ministry of the Environment officials said the water was suitable for drinking, but when a ministry representative was offered a glass of water, did not drink it. "Oh well, I guess he was not thirsty at the time."

When residents wanted to dump the water from their wells into a nearby creek, the ministry officials permitted, saying the creek would become polluted. Strange the water was fit for human consumption, but after weeks of investigation decides that it should not drink this water without some pre-treatment.

Deloro family forced from their home by pollution levels in their home. Coming from the same property as Deloro were the controversy about arsenic leaching into the Moira River, has been going on for many years.

How could government officials responsible for the health and safety of people, not have know about this dangerous radioactive waste being on the property? Why was this property not properly fenced and warnings posted, to keep children and people from being exposed to the dangerous conditions that exist on this property. What will be the cost in human suffering from this neglect? Only time will supply the answer.

Homes sprayed in Belleville with a dangerous Chlordane insecticide, that should not have been used as a space spray. Not only did it poison all the residents were treated at the Belleville General Hospital for insecticide inhalation. Just another case of improper control.

Cattle dying after being treated with Ontario Agriculture Tri-O-Cresyl Phosphate, that a Roslin farmer had bought at a sale. Other people using the same drum for storing bread and lubricating farm machinery. Never realizing that this waste oil might contain a toxic fluid that destroys the nervous system and could result in death.

Ontario has fallen on evil days, when pollution levels prevent citizens from enjoying the normal use of their homes and property. This is what happens, when the ministry of the environment ignores complaints and instead of resolving the environmental problem in a reasonable length of time, allows "DELAY" to become the name of their game.

KENNETH B. PEOPLES

Area TV Programming

The following is the text of a letter addressed to the Hon. Robert Welch, Minister of Culture and Recreation:

It was with much regret, and some anger, that I read in the newspaper, recently, that the Province of Ontario is not going to expand cable TV to Belleville and Peterborough.

I used to live in Belleville, where the local Cable company still carries Buffalo Programming on a special channel. Since moving to the country we are no longer able to receive OECA programming.

I seem to remember that when the lottery act was first devised, we were informed of all the wonderful cultural and recreational activities which could be derived from the moneys you expected to receive from this project.

In view of the "windfall profits" the Ontario Government is making from Wintario — not to mention the profits from publicly owned corporate grants as the LCBO and Ontario Hydro — surely it must be possible to find the few small dollars needed to implement (and even expand) the cable service to rural Ontario stations in order that people like myself can benefit from the many tax dollars being spent on production of programs that we might otherwise never see.

I hope that when Ontario's next budget comes up for discussion in the House, that the legislature that your ministry should give its support to the original plan of expansion of TV cable service to rural Ontario communities.

This month sees the end of the Food Prices Review Board. But the typical Canadian shopper is no better informed about food prices today than 2½ years ago.

The board's chairman, the controversial Beryl Plumptre, moved on to the greater arena of the anti-inflation board in October. By the end of this month, the board she left behind her will slip into oblivion.

When it was created in 1973, the Food Prices Review Board was widely believed to be just another government technique to divert and diffuse public concern about inflation.

That belief seems just as valid, despite the considerable value of the research carried out and recommendations made by Mrs. Plumptre and her staff.

Earlier this year, for example, the Food Prices Review Board published a report, What Price Nutrition? that showed how families might improve their nutrition while cutting their food bills.

But the federal body most directly concerned, Nutrition Canada, seems not to have heard of the report.

Although the government has spent many millions of dollars in funding the Food Prices Review Board, it has ignored most of the recommendations not once in a while but time and also in all the other studies carried out by the board.

On the issue of the government's role in setting monopolies in farm products, the commission's interim report is clearly shown to be in last place.

Some of the Food Prices Review Board's most telling points were its criticisms of the government-created monopolies that "protect" food.

The term "marketing" in this case doesn't have a broad commercial meaning but instead denotes the planned-economy concept of production quotas, fixed prices and rampant bureaucracy.

Example: In the case of eggs, one of the most notorious of foods, the result of monopoly marketing has been an almost incredible story of mismanagement combined with high prices.

Millions upon millions of eggs were allowed to go bad. Canada eggs sell for less in the United States than at home, and Ontario egg producers' quotas have been set so low that the supply to the local industry has been cut off.

Yet despite the patently inflationary pricing policies of the government-sanctioned monopolies, they have been exempted from the general anti-inflation policy that restricts retail price increases to the amount of increase in production costs.

Startling next month, the food shopper will not even have the moral support of a Food Prices Review Board in trying to withstand inflation at the supermarket.

It's some comfort that a number of merchandising chains have promised not to raise their selling prices (on other than perishables) until the second half of January—although a few of them appear to have marked up certain prices just before they froze them.

For the longer term, consumers will have to rely on inflation than ever before to nutrient values if they hope to keep the family food budget under control. The recommendations of the Food Prices Review Board's nutrient study will help in that task, but the board itself is gone.

Examples include substitution of hamburger, a low-cost source of iron, for other high-iron, expensive foods; reduction in sugar consumption and reliance on whole-grain bread, not fortenine, despite its reputation, as a source of calories.

Do such techniques really work? The researchers say they do.

By their calculations, a family of four, switching from today's typical food choices to its nutrition at diet, could save almost 30 per cent on meals taken at home.

A Snoopy Christmas

Spectators along the route of Belleville's recent Santa Claus parade must have blinked when this float came along. Snoopy, the popular character from the Peanuts comic strip, was more than ably represented with eight replicas crowded onto one small entry.

CP News Roundup

LCBO Lowers Some Prices

TORONTO (CP) — The Liquor Control Board of Ontario will lower the price on 80 brands of alcoholic drinks effective Saturday, Sidney Handleman, consumer and commercial relations minister, said today.

Price reductions, depending on the brand and size of bottle, will range between five cents and $1.80 on 41 spirits, between five cents and 80 cents on 36 imported wines and between 10 and 30 cents on 11 Ontario wines. Three imported ciders will be reduced by between five and 20 cents and one Ontario cider will sell for 65 cents less.

Mr. Handleman told the legislature that lower prices from suppliers and a reduction in foreign exchange rates are responsible for the decrease in prices.

He also said the board has notified suppliers that wine prices be reduced or cancelled if future price increases fail to acknowledge Ontario's attempts to control inflation.

The board is a major customer and "we anticipate their fullest co-operation to help us hold the line on prices," he said.

Correctional Minister Favors Capital Punishment Here

TORONTO (CP) — John Smith, Ontario minister of correctional services, is proud of his rehabilitation programs but says he is strongly in favor of capital punishment.

The new minister from Hamilton Mountain says he is discouraged in his tours of Ontario correctional institutions where he finds most of the prisoners under 25.

"It's discouraging to find, for instance, that when there are 850 prisoners in the Toronto Jail, 70 per cent of them are under 25," he said in an interview. But Mr. Smith says he is firmly in favor of capital punishment and believes "there are certain crimes that call for the death penalty."

A religious man, president of the Hamilton branch of the Canadian Bible Society and director of the Church Army in Canada, Mr. Smith says he finds no conflict between his capital punishment beliefs and his religious convictions.

Since becoming minister last October, Mr. Smith has visited as many provincial correctional institutions as possible and talked in dozens of prisoners.

He is disturbed by what he has seen.

He says he was upset by a prisoner in Ottawa who is on gaun on his wall saying "Happiness is a warm gun." He had been convicted of armed robbery.

And a young man at the Toronto jail who said he didn't really know where his house was also disturbed him.

Mr Smith says remands are causing over-crowding in provincial jails. "And the courts are reacting to the criticism of the bail system and making it tougher."

Expensive buildings aren't the answer to the problem, he says, and the new jail in Ottawa is one example.

"It's a $15-million show-piece and already there have been riots and a succeeding of superintendents," he said. "The finest building in the land will not solve the problems."

Ottawa Fears Crime Inquiry Because Evidence May Hurt

OTTAWA (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker suggested Friday that the federal government is trying to have Dr. Quebec crime inquiry scuttled because it fears what might come out in testimony.

The crime inquiry's ability to subpoena witnesses was interrupted this week by a court ruling it could not order Vic Cotroni to testify while the constitutional validity of the inquiry is before the Supreme Court of Canada.

The mandate of the inquiry, which has exposed the tainted meat scandal and underworld associations in Montreal, was to end at the end of the year. The Quebec government Friday extended the mandate for an additional five months.

The Supreme Court of Canada decision on its constitutional validity is not expected until January at least.

The validity of the inquiry was raised by Nick Di Iorio and Gerard Fontaine, who both refused to testify before it last year. Their argument that Quebec has gone beyond its constitutional powers in holding the inquiry was supported before the Supreme Court by the federal justice department.

Justice Minister Ron Basford has said the intervention was made solely to protect federal jurisdiction. If the Supreme Court ruled that Quebec does not have the authority to hold the inquiry, he would take steps to delegate such authority to the province.

Quebec Promises Access To Olympic Information

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government has come out with what it promises to be a new and open information policy toward preparations for the 1976 Summer Olympics scheduled to open July 17.

The province's newly-created Olympic installations board (OIB) pledged at its first news conference here Friday that complete information will be given to the media and public.

Victor Goldbloom, Quebec (municipal) affairs minister, conveyed optimism in the conduct of Olympic affairs since the province took over construction responsibility from Mayor Jean Drapeau's Montreal administration two weeks ago.

Reporting "some improvement but no miracles," Dr. Goldbloom emphasized the tight construction timetable and declared:

"The companies and the employees have within their hands the future of the Games."

The appointment of a Montreal architect as supervisor of completion of the Olympic park designed by French architect Roger Taillibert also was announced.

Claude Rouleau, Quebec deputy minister of justice and chairman of the seven-member OIB, said in a statement the appointment of Andre Daoust, associate architect of the park in Montreal, became effective Nov. 24.

The dazzling Taillibert concept of an Olympic stadium featuring a 500-foot inclining tower and a retractable roof has been a tradeMark of the 1976 Olympics. Dr. Goldbloom said the government wishes to be fair to Taillibert because of the contributions he has made.

While the contract has been signed with Mr. Taillibert, Dr. Goldbloom confirmed that published estimates of fees going as high as $40 million were unrealistic.

Through the OIB, the government took over responsibility for construction of the stadium, swimming pool and velodrome, plus accessory facilities, when estimated costs climbed to $1 billion with an anticipated deficit of $600 million.

The news conference came at the end of a crucial week in which Mayor Drapeau—no longer involved in public slanging during the provincial takeover—appeared on television and radio to appeal for a "holy alliance" of capital and labor to finish the construction job.

New York's Aid Passes Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation authorizing $2.3 billion in federal loans to save New York City from default passed easily in the United States Senate early today and was sent to the White House for certain approval.

Senate approval came on a 62-to-36 vote.

Final congressional action ended months of speculation as to whether the federal government would step in to keep the city from defaulting on its obligations. The bill extends $2.3 billion in short-term loans for the city and is effective for the next three years.

President Ford proposed the bill in late November, reversing his previous opposition to federal aid for the city. The House of Representatives approved the measure 319 to 103 last Tuesday.

City officials have warned that default might come as soon as next Thursday, but with approval of the federal loans, it is expected that city bond holders will exchange their due notes for long-term notes to enable New York to continue operations without a formal default.

Free Literature, Christmas Sharing

Free literature about the tragic Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, sometimes known as crib death, is now available from the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit, 208 Bridge Street East.

In the literature, the syndrome, which accounts for the death of two children in every thousand (usually when two to three months old), is explained.

Did you know that the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development will give you $500 a year to go prospecting in the Yukon or the Northwest Territories? That's just one of the fascinating facts you'll find in "Farming and Fishing", a booklet published by information Canada. It's one in a series, called the Citizens' Service Series, of booklets designed to guide you through the maze of federal government services. In the booklet explains, like federal government is composed of 150 different departments, boards, councils, Crown corporations and other organizations.

It may be because of the mail strike, but Betty Watson, who is running the Volunteer Bureau's Christmas Sharing program reports that donations are down 35 per cent compared with 1974.

She and her co-workers need your donation to be sure that no family in Belleville is hungry this Christmas. If you wish to make up a basket of food is valued at about $25 - and deliver it yourself, you can telephone Mrs. Watson at 962-1333. She can mail a suggested food list to you. If you haven't the time to become involved directly you can just send along the money to 346 William Street. Or, you can send even a very small amount as a donation toward a Christmas basket.

Speaking to the Food Seminar held here recently, a representative of the Ontario Food Council outlined the ways you can save money on foods necessary to keep you healthy.

Milk: Great savings can be made by substituting some skim milk powder and evaporated milk, especially in cooking and baking.

Fruits and vegetables: Remember you can use apple juice, canned tomatoes, or a baked potatoes for a source of Vitmain C along with green peppers, broccoli, cabbage, turnip or strawberries.

Breads and cereals: Use hot cereals like oatmeal or Cream of Wheat to save money over cold cereals. If you do buy cold cereals, use whole grain products with few additions like sugar coloring.

Meat, fish and eggs: Supplement meat with other sources of protein. For example, combine a smaller portion of meat than usual with rice, cooked beans, pasta. When the majority of the meal consists of a vegetable protein, include a little milk or meat or egg. Use peanut butter.

Christmas Means Traditional Gingerbread Scene

When Joan McCulloch thinks of Christmas, she thinks of gingerbread houses.

For five years she's mixed, baked, stuck together and decorated several gingerbread houses each holiday season, many of which she's donated to charitable institutions.

Her gingerbread house — actually it's a church complete with belfry, horse and sleigh out front and Christmas trees — has the added distinction of being eminently edible.

She begins by mixing the dough, shaping it into large rolls and refrigerating it over night.

The next day, on sheets of waxed paper, she rolls slices of the dough out flat and cuts the pieces for baking on the waxed paper at 300 degrees for 20 minutes.

The pieces are two church sides, two roof pieces, two church ends, one with a door cut out, four belfry roof pieces, two belfry sides, and two belfry front pieces. For each tree, two identical evergreen shapes, with slots cut on opposite ends. The sleigh consists of two sides, braced with a bottom and two runners, along with a back and front. The horse is made from two pieces braced between.

All the pieces are baked and then immediately removed from the waxed paper.

They are glued together with sugar cement (recipe follows) and decorated with icing, some of which is colored blue and green.

Gingerbread Dough

5¼ cups flour
one tsp soda
one tsp salt
three tsp cinnamon
two tsp ground ginger two tsp ground cloves
one tsp nutmeg
one cup shortening
one cup sugar
one cup molasses
one egg

Sift flour, soda and spices. Beat shortening with sugar until fluffy. Beat in molasses and egg. Stir in flour mix to make a stiff dough.

Icing

two egg whites
one tsp lemon juice
3½ cups sifted confectioners' sugar
food coloring

Beat egg whites and lemon juice until foamy. Slowly beat in sugar. Divide into three bowls. Color one blue and one green.

Sugar Cement

Spread one cup of sugar in a heavy skillet. Heat slowly until it melts. Use immediately. Be very careful; this mixture can cause serious burns.

Joan McCulloch completes her gingerbread church.

Gingerbread pieces are baked on paper.

How 'bout a hand for the Piper

Actually, you don't need a "hand" for Hammond's Piper Autochord. A finger will do. That's right, even if you consider yourself a one finger musician, you can make beautiful music on the amazing Piper.

here's why:

- The Piper has just one keyboard.
- The left hand accompaniment plays automatically with a phantom bass feature.
- The Piper's seven automatic rhythms play individually or in combination.
- The Piper has a dazzling variety of solo and percussive sounds.
- The Piper has no pedals to fuss with.
- The Piper sounds great. It's the easiest keyboard instrument ever.

Stop by and try it. Before long your friends will be giving you a hand.

Vanderkooy — Lovett

Deborah Doreen Lovett and Walter Vanderkooy exchanged wedding vows early in November in a late afternoon ceremony held in Maranatha Christian Reformed Church.

The bride is the daughter of Doreen Lovett and the late Charles Lovett; the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Vanderkooy, RR 4, Stirling.

Rev. Henry Kaiserberg performed the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her eldest brother, Ron Lovett, the bride chose a white qiana knit gown with train which fell from the waist. Her dress featured a standup collar and lace flowers with pearl centres appliqued on the bodice. A lace juliet cap caught her fingertip veil.

She carried a cascade of coral sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

Nelle Vanderkooy, the sister of the groom, was maid of honor in a rust color ensemble featuring matching jacket and hood. She carried rust carnations, white mums and baby's breath.

Anne Vanderkooy, Sharon Vanderkooy, Laurelie Fairborn and Kim Campbell attended the bride in costumes similar to the maid of honor's ensemble, in coral. They carried white daisies, mums and baby's breath.

Dan Reid was best man, assisted by ushers Jim Lovett, John Doornbos, Allen Burke and Arnold Vanderkooy.

A dinner and dance was held in the Fiesta Room of the Hotel Quinte.

After a wedding trip to Nassau, the couple took up residence at RR 1, Foxboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Vanderkooy

MICHAEL COUGLIN, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Coughlin, graduated from Queen's University with a Bachelor of Arts in Physiology in the fall convocation. Mr. Coughlin graduated from Nicholson Catholic College and is now teaching at the Lady of Fatima School.

— Jean Pigott may have a motherly image, but she is a determined business woman. President of Morrison Lamothe Foods Ltd. of Ottawa, Mrs. Pigott recently received the Ottawa Board of Trade's distinguished service award. She is shown

Imaginative Leadership Saved Failing Business

OTTAWA (CP)—The Ottawa Board of Trade held a special reception and dinner recently to honor an Ottawa business woman. Jean Pigott, 49, president of Morrison Lamothe Foods Ltd., was chosen from 20 nominees to receive the board's distinguished-service award.

She has been president and chief executive of Morrison Lamothe since 1966, when she took over a faltering family business from her father. Since then she has twice brought the company back from financial disaster and now looks forward to lasting prosperity.

In running a bakery, frozen foods and catering company with 600 employees, Mrs. Pigott offers an unsophisticated but apparently effective approach to corporate management.

When she took over Morrison Lamothe nine years ago, the company was bankrupt and firmly embroiled in a bread price war.

Consultants hired to investigate the situation concluded there was no way the newly organized company could continue to operate with 1,900 employees and a costly new $5-million factory in Ottawa's east end.

During the next year, Mrs. Pigott and a carefully selected management team had to close the doors of their shiny-crowded bakery and move back to the abandoned factory that had been slated for demolition.

After cutting the work force by two-thirds and eliminating $800,000 in overhead expenses in her first year as president, Mrs. Pigott saw the company return a profit of $8 million a year from $15 million.

But Morrison Lamothe Foods is now financially sound and even showed a small profit.

By 1974 the firm was reporting annual sales of $16 million, provided of them from a Toronto-based frozen-food division.

But then for no apparent reason, people stopped buying Morrison Lamothe frozen foods. Production had to be cut and employees were laid off.

It turned out that Banquet Foods Corp., a United States company, was selling frozen foods here at prices Morrison Lamothe couldn't even begin to approach.

A federal inquiry, held at Mrs. Pigott's insistence, found that Banquet was dumping its products below cost on the Canadian market. A resultant anti-dumping duty took away Banquet's market advantage and Morrison Lamothe recovered.

Today, Mrs. Pigott is chief executive officer of a company large enough to be included under the federal government's recently announced lacuna-to-straight program.

"To get some of the boredom out of doing the same thing all the time", Mrs. Pigott initiated games for her factory's workers, including a "green baker," a green plastic lump on the lunchroom wall.

The "green baker," awarded to work teams meeting all company standards, entitles employees to free cups of coffee.

If things go according to plan, Mrs. Pigott will soon launch another bakery "product" — a "safety court." In an attempt to reduce the number of industrial accidents, Mrs. Pigott will require that an inquiry be held after every mishap in the plant.

Over the last year, she has been honored by the Kiwanis Club of Canada and the Bakery Council of Canada. She has been interviewed for television, featured in magazines and sought as guest speaker by more organizations than she can name.

Mrs. Pigott is also a director of Ontario Hydro, serves on the audit committee of Canada Development Corp., campaigned actively for the Progressive Conservative party and is chairman of the Ottawa-Carleton District Health Council and a director of the Council on Drug Abuse.

There are people who figure Mrs. Pigott is so transparent they can see right through her, but she is quite happy to have them think so.

When she turns up at a meeting, she says, everyone expects her to make some remark about people working better on full stomachs, to be hungry and always makes sure there are snacks available.

She says businessmen visiting her plant expect a woman executive to behave like a woman, still somewhat of an oddity in the business world. Not wishing to disappoint them, she had a china cabinet, a rocking chair and some old family portraits put in her office.

When she gives a speech, Mrs. Pigott says, she knows people are waiting for her to tell them her husband Arthur is still the boss at home. She usually manages to tuck it somewhere in her address.

She is a devoted mother, a great cook and even does needle-work—in many ways a traditional woman. But behind the hats and mink-based broad insties a philosophy not often found in books or university classrooms.

Mrs. Pigott says that in a world of big business, big government, mass production, depersonalization, city life and convenience living, people are looking for someone strong enough, perhaps foolish enough, to offer them a world where everything is like it used to be. It is this philosophy that underlies her business policies.

Lawyers Want Rape Victim's Personal Life Open to Questioning for Benefit of Defence

OTTAWA (CP) — A proposed Criminal Code amendment to minimize the embarrassment of rape victims during trials is "extremely dangerous" and politically motivated, the Commons justice committee was told Thursday.

Arthur C. Wheeler, president of the Ontario Criminal Lawyers' Association, told the committee his organization objects to proposed amendments which would limit a defence lawyer's right to question the victim about her past sexual conduct.

"If this is intended to save the female from parading her life in public than we should simply make the sexless of the trial in camera," he said.

He said that not to be able to determine if a woman is regarded as an "easy conquest" in the community would deprive the accused of an important part of his defence, that of thorough cross-examination "on all relevant matters."

The proposed amendments would give judges the power to permit questions concerning a woman's sexual conduct with others only if he considers this to be relevant to the particular case.

The justice department has said the amendments are necessary to remove the appearance that the victim is on trial, as well as the accused.

The association, an organization of about 250 Ontario lawyers whose practices are concerned mostly with criminal law, says in a brief to the committee that a certain amount of momentary embarrassment "is justified in view of the importance in seeing that no person should ever be wrongly convicted of an offence."

The brief argues that other restriction of publication of the victim's identity and the right of the prosecution or the defence to request the public be excluded from the trial, the re-

Some Foot Problems Need Doctor

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: To a recent letter from one of your readers signed "To Lets For Me," you replied, "It is the responsibility of parents to see to it that their children go into adulthood with healthy, normal feet. All it takes is shoes that fit."

As president of the Illinois College of Podiatric Medicine, I can tell you that statement is erroneous. Statistics which we have compiled over a period of several years show that only 10 per cent of all children's foot problems are directly related to ill-fitting shoes. The remaining 90 per cent have problems that were present at birth and became aggravated by the appropriate care which included ill-fitting shoes.

Most of the conditions found in children's feet can be helped with professional treatment by a doctor of podiatric medicine.—Philip B., Brachman, D.P.M.

Dear P.B.B., D.P.M.: Thank you for setting me straight. You can be sure the shoe industry will be delighted with your letter as well as your colleagues in the field of podiatry. I must say your statistics were a revelation to me.

Dear Ann Landers: Last week my cousin from Davenport was visiting me. The phone rang. I was grocery shopping and my cousin answered. It was my daughter Sara calling from Kansas City. She always calls station-to-station because it's cheaper. When my cousin heard my cousin's voice she was annoyed and I don't blame her. She had to pay for the call.

I say it's rude to answer the phone in someone else's home. Am I right? — Mad

Dear Mad: The natural response in a case like this is to answer it. If you don't want your guests to answer your phone when you're out, just tell them.

Advent Season Now Has Less Peace

By DR. GORDON C. SMITH

We have entered the Advent season. Since the 4th century, Advent has been regarded by the Church as the liturgical time to prepare for the birth of Jesus, Bethlehem is a blessed, happy word.

But some of you are likely wondering just what kind of a been have found a hive in my bonnet. Do I REALLY know what dominates Advent in the Canadian scene?

It is not merely the merchant's tinsel. It is not simply the time when liquor sales soar and a period called "My Sin" is recommended for a gift on the birthday of him who came to save us all from sin. Tempers are shorter than ever before. There is less peace than ever before. There is more organized chaos than ever before.

A tonic that can help is history. For instance, in 1347 the priory of St. Mary of Bethlehem was founded in London. By 136 it had become "an hospital". In 1401 it was specifically recognized as a hospital for the insane. The noise and confusion of that institution was heard throughout England.

The original name "St. Mary of Bethlehem" was shortened to "Bethlehem". And "Bethlehem", by contraction and realism, became "Bedlam". The two were related!

Is that not how it was when Jesus was born? A holy inn, a stable — these were marks of a crowded and noisy city as a result of the Roman census ordered by a governor.

Jesus knew that he should have to live there. But he hoped that we would live there in the spirit of the heavenly Father of all, who revealed himself in Bethlehem.

Anglican Church Kicks Off Centennial

Holy Trinity Anglican church, Fraserburg, will kick off its centennial celebrations Next Year's Eve with a church service followed by a parish get-together at the parish hall.

A centennial committee formed a number of months ago has been busy planning events to mark the church's 100th anniversary.

On Jan. 11 a special Children's Service is planned. It is an ecumenical service with all other churches in the village invited.

The annual meeting will be held during the week of Jan. 19 followed by a pot-luck supper.

Baptists Campaign Against Music

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Damning rock music for its "appeal to the flesh," a Baptist church here has launched a campaign to put the torch to records by Elton John, the Rolling Stones and other rock stars.

About $1,300 worth of records were tossed into a bonfire last week after church officials labelled the music immoral.

Rev. Charles Boykin, associate pastor and youth director of the Lakewood Baptist Church, said he has seen statistics which show that "of 1,000 girls who become pregnant out of wedlock, 87 committed fornication while rock music was being played."

He could not, however, remember the source of the statistics.

Boykin says the main thing wrong with rock music is its sensual beat.

"There's a rhythm to our bodies and when we hear music with a similar rhythm we respond to that beat. Too much of this can affect you in the worst way," he said, adding that even some gospel music can lead youths astray.

At the bonfire this week, teenage members of the church were asked to bring "Top 40" records which they felt unleashed unrestrained carnal appetites.

"Teen-agers in the church felt they couldn't give the records away," Boykin said. He said one of them feels it would be "like giving away dope."

Boykin said he was gratified by the response of the church's young members and he plans to expand the crusade to other churches.

Lotteries Hurting Toy Drive

Popularity and proliferation of lotteries hasn't exactly helped Santa's working for needier youngsters in Belleville this Christmas.

For years, city firemen have run a benevolent fund to pay the cost of their big toy distribution program.

This Christmas season the usual ticket sales were held on a $200 savings bond prize.

But when sales were tallied up before the winning ticket was drawn at the firefighters annual Christmas party Friday night, the net was estimated at $2,500.

"That's down about $1,000 from last year," said fireman Ralph Boomhower, ticket sales chairman.

His explanation: "Too many lotteries and raffles are more."

However, there was little chagrin. The firemen also count on private donations of both cash and toys to help balance off expenses.

Ralph believed the program costs around $4,000 to meet the needs of an estimated 1,300 children.

If ticket returns continue to decline an alternative may be needed to support the annual project.

"We hope to continue it. But unless we get further support we're going to have to figure something else," said the ticket chairman.

Prize-winning ticket — drawn at the IOOF Hall on Bay St. — was Mrs. Bruce Sills 30 Jellema St.

That's the Ticket

Stella Culhane, wife of city's fire chief draws winning ticket on $500 prize in firefighters' fund-raising drive for Christmas toy project. Ticket sales chairman Ralph Boomhower who assisted in draw said the project had dropped about $1,000 from last year because of increasing number of lotteries.

City Sign Blooms

A brightly-linged touch of welcome has blossomed on a main approach to Belleville.

The colorful, co-operative community project went into place Friday on the greenbelt flanking the Canniffon Road-Highway 37 entrance to the city.

The welcome sign, imaginatively designed around a sunflower motif, is the product of shared effort — and cost — by the city, its service clubs and Chamber of Commerce.

It sprouted from a suggestion two years ago that timeworn signs on the city outskirts enumerating community service clubs, be replaced.

The task was assigned E. L. Burnham, veteran Rotarian and retired public utilities general manager. He decided something brighter than the standard spartan-like metal posts and club emblems was needed.

Casting about for inspiration, he turned to city parks director Lloyd Syer had some ideas on some projects.

The result: A sign incorporating a broader civic touch with service clubs' symbols.

Mr. Syer and his parks staff drafted the attractive design — a beaming bloom effect on a sleek arrayed with the badges and a Chamber of Commerce sign. The community's traditional Priority City motto is emblazoned on the background.

City manager Wilbur Purcell handled the contract tenders while the parks department planned landscaping to surround the sign standing almost 20 feet high.

Originally, instalment had been scheduled for the busier, North Front St. entrance to the city, on Quinte Mall property.

But, said Mr. Burnham, Ontario transportation and communications ministry registration forbid such a sign within a quarter mile of Highway 401.

Cost of the installation — lighted at night with about $2,500, he said. It will be split between the city, Chamber of Commerce and service clubs.

Trial Resumes Next Week

A 25-year-old Belleville man will be in provincial court again Monday for the conclusion of a trial in which he has been charged with assault causing bodily harm.

Floyd Johnston of 26 Centre St. appeared in court Friday after being charged by police following an investigation into an attack on a 51-year-old city woman Oct. 4.

Johnston was remanded for trial for Friday after originally appearing in court Nov. 24 following his return from a psychiatric evaluation during 30 days of incarceration at the Penetanguishene Mental Health Clinic.

is "optimistic" about the outcome of discussion with Environment Minister George Kerr on provincial aid for Hillcrest's sewage disposal services.

However, there were no immediate commitments given and the mayor expects to meet with a ministry official in the next 10 days.

The long-awaited session between city and ministry spokesmen to solve Hillcrest's sanitary sewerage problems realized Friday in Toronto.

Advocates for the Hillcrest case, with the mayor, were city manager Wilbur Purcell and Hugh O'Neil, MPP Quinte. They met with Mr. Kerr and two senior ministry officials.

"We came away very hopeful that we made a point about the problems and we look for some kind of answer within a couple of weeks," said the new Friday night.

The Belleville delegation told the ministry representatives "there should be some way they could assist us," said Mayor Corke.

Both the mayor and Mr. O'Neil had been seeking to put the Hillcrest case personally to Mr. Kerr for a month.

Truck Part Went Fast

It didn't take long recently for Mrs. D. to sell an unwanted cap for a pick-up truck.

She placed an ad in the classified columns of The Intelligencer and was able to sell the cap to the first caller.

For quick action in selling, or buying, truck or car accessories, place an ad with The Intelligencer Classified Advertising Department, 962-9171 and wait for the telephone to ring.

The effort to make contact followed ministry refusal of provincial subsidy support to help ease the cost of sanitary sewer installations which seat Hillcrest tax bills soaring — and sparked a neighborhood demand for city action last year.

The mayor's following Friday's discussion was that Mr. Kerr was "very sympathetic" to the problem.

While the minister and his officials "wouldn't commit themselves" on the request for aid "I'm optimistic," said the mayor.

"I expect to be talking again with a deputy minister within 10 days," he added.

In making its earlier request for aid the city had noted water and sewer installations planned for neighboring Sidney township would be subsidized.

The ministry rejected the proposal, however, like those planned for Thurlow are a provincial project and owned by the senior government. It said Hillcrest's services are a municipal scheme and do not qualify for the same subsidies.

Grant Helps Cemetery

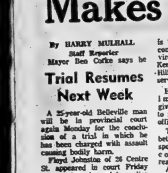
PICTON — Resignation of Glenwood Cemetery is now in progress, subsidized by a Local Initiatives Program grant of $14,180.

Town councillors this week were told that 40 per cent of the LIP grant has been turned over to the cemetery board as an advance payment toward the cost of the work now underway.

A part-time secretary, William Waters, of Picton has been hired for the cemetery's LIP program and he and cemetery board member Ross Scott have been authorized to hire two laborers from Canada Manpower here.

The workers will be paid at a maximum rate of $2.75 an hour with the foreman receiving $3 an hour.

Superintendent of Glenwood Cemetery, William Steen, will outline and co-ordinate the restoration work through direct communication with the project foreman.



A Glanmore Christmas

Panagiota Droukas, a Grade four student of Prince of Wales Elementary School, helps Marta Wishart, a member of the Hastings County Historical Society, decorate trees at Glanmore House Friday. The students have been studying Belleville history and were helping prepare the museum for next week's Christmas program.

City Police Order New Bullets

New ammunition has been ordered for Belleville police department to meet new specifications set by the Ontario Police Commission (OPC).

The new bullets are considered less likely to ricochet or disintegrate — thus reducing chances of severe wounds when a human body is hit.

The OPC set new standards for guns and ammunition for Ontario's police forces after extensive testing. The specifications are aimed at improving accuracy and reducing risks to passersby when police have to open fire.

The new ammunition was ordered for the Belleville force Friday, said Police Chief Douglas Crosbie.

Elmer Bell, OPC chairman, said oval-headed bullets long used by police had a tendency to ricochet. They have been known to bounce off car doors and angled glass in modern automobiles.

New ammunition must have a flat-nosed solid bullet of lead alloy. They will tend to pass through a body and not disintegrate, Mr. Bell said.

Maximum muzzle velocity has been set at 1,000 feet a second when fired in a revolver with a four-inch barrel. Reduced velocity limits the range of a bullet.

A maximum weight of 38 ounces and minimum barrel length of four inches have been set for police guns, since a light weapon is more likely to be inaccurate, said the OPC official.

The new firearm standards apply only to new weapons purchases, and do not entail replacement of guns already in service.

Chief Crosbie said all the sidearms issued to his department's uniformed officers conform to the new standards.

The exception is pistols with two-inch barrel issued to women officers. However, they don't have to be replaced right away.

The OPC has said policewomen may be issued with a 38-ounce revolver with a three-inch barrel.

The chief said he was also taking a survey of any guns for which special OPC permission is required.

A chief will still be able to authorize a member of his force to carry some other firearm "if he satisfies the board" on sound-based points long favored by detectives.

New Sidney Fire Hall Township Christmas Gift

Homes in Sidney township south of Highway 401 will receive improved fire protection early in 1976 when the township's third fire hall at Aikens Rd. is completed.

Under construction since late October, the fire hall is expected to be finished shortly after Christmas.

Jack Bush of Shiverside Construction, builder of the $51,215 two-bay structure, said Friday his crews have placed a mock's work left, and although it won't be done by Christmas, "it'll be shortly after."

Concrete T-slabs were hoisted by crane onto the structure's walls Friday and, according to Mr. Bush, the finishing of the roof will take place next week.

Once the firehall is complete, a 14-man volunteer fireman division and a 500-gallon pumper will move into the building.

It will mean an improvement to the fire department's ability to respond quickly to fires south of Highway 401.

Previously, a fire hall in Bakers and a second located at the Loyalist-Wallbridge Rd. and the fourth intersection covered the entire township.

Construction of the new hall is "forging right along" said township Fire Chief Doug Scott.

He said he is pleased at the progress of the building and Friday's erection of the roof-support beams a turning point in the hall's construction.

Originally, construction plans called for a 13-week erection time, but, says Mr. Bush, it will likely be completed ahead of schedule.

Work started early by about a week.

Bow Hunting Scores Big Hit

Introduction of a bow deer-hunting season to the Quinte district this year scored a hit-and-see with local archers, provincial wildlife officials report.

At first, the archery season — already in vogue a number of years elsewhere in Ontario — drew some skeptical public reaction, says Terry Humphreys, conservation officer in the natural resources ministry Napanee district office.

But this mainly was due to public misunderstanding of archery hunting, he said.

Not only is it more skillfully-sportier and gives many recreation hours than traditional gun shoots, it also is easier on conservation. Kill rates range in other areas only from two to four per cent, he said.

One indication of its popularity was that archery stores in the Belleville-Trenton area reported a shortage in archery equipment — much of which was probably related to the new-style hunting season from Nov. 3-30, he said.

"And we've had no complaints from members of the public whatsoever," said Mr. Humphreys.

While only one kill so far has been confirmed, many archers occasionally reported seeing a number of deer. Some sighted 10 to 15 of the big game animals in a couple hours of hunting in the Murray Marsh area along the Trent River north of Brighton.

With the exception of Prince Edward County, archery hunting was permitted in entire Napanee district south of Highway 401.

Unlike firearms hunting, archery calls for the marksman to remain stationary — camouflaged and watchfully ensconced under cover.

There are no dogs or parties of men beating the bush. Hence no noise or disturbance.

"Usually the general public don't know they (archers) are around," said Mr. Humphreys.

Initial negative reactions were partly due to lack of knowledge of what happens if a hunter scores a non-fatal hit, he added.

Arrows are designed to pass through the animal. If the animal is only wounded it has a better chance of survival than if hit by a bullet, which may lodge or disintegrate in the body.

An arrow will cause a clean wound and any barbs left protruding from an animal are designed that they pull free when brushed by undergrowth in the deer's flight, he said.

"A deer with an arrow wound has better odds of living than and a greater chance of recovery," he said.

Arson Trial Held Over

The trial of Daniel Higgins of 1178 Victoria Ave., charged with three counts of arson has been held over for conclusion in provincial court Dec. 8 after Friday's court proceedings.

The 36-year-old Belleville man was charged, according to police, on Nov. 14 following an investigation into three fires which occurred in the city during the previous four months.

The first were a two-alarm blaze at an apartment block on Victoria Ave. Oct. 17, on Nov. 3, a house fire on Canniff St. and a fire at a garage fire near Victoria Ave.

No Protest at Prince Edward Heights

PICTON — Robert MacKenzie, administrator of Prince Edward Heights — the provincial government's rental retardation complex here — says the facility would not be involved in a planned protest by doctors at similar Ontario centres.

Private Edward Heights does not have its own medical staff but relies on the services of doctors in the community, he said.

Some 220 doctors in psychiatric hospitals and mental retardation centres plan a province-wide strike to protest a provincial government proposal to appoint medical co-ordinators of medical services in three centres.

The protest plan followed a meeting in Toronto Thursday of the Ontario Psychiatric Hospitals and Hospitals Medical Staff Association.

The three centres are at Smiths Falls, Orillia and Cedar Springs.

Credit Course in Driving Meets Approval

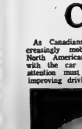
As Canadians become increasingly mobile and the North American love affair with the car thrives, more attention must be paid to improving driving skills, say Quinte Mall shoppers interviewed this week.

Last month the Hastings Board of Education approved a full year's credit course for students begining next September — a move aimed at making sure young people behind the wheel are qualified.

Generally, those interviewed were in full support of the board taking the initiative in the field of driver instruction.

Many said the quality of young drivers could improve using the school a professional instructors. The thought was older members of the family teaching the children to drive would mean teaching "bad habits" cultivated through previous years of driving.

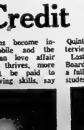
As well as getting preferred insurance rates after completing a recognized instruction course, parents have the confidence of knowing their children have trained professionally, shoppers said.



MARGARET HUNTLEY

"Young people, in these special courses, are trained to drive defensively ... in a way to avoid accidents," said Margaret Huntley.

A resident of 72 Queen St., she said students learning from a professional will be better equipped than those trained by their parents."



ROBERT WAITE

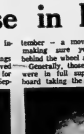
"I think school driver education is a terrific idea," said Robert Waite of Belleville. "It will make the kids better drivers."

"Instructors, I think, would be more careful than parents while doing the teaching. Special courses should also be given in use of fire arms."

SUSIE PIGDEN

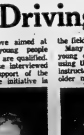
"I think it is a very good idea," said Mrs. Susie Pigden. "So many of the young people seem to be having problems with cars these days. They don't seem to learn anything else in school, they might as well learn to drive.

"A trained instructor is much more qualified to teach this sort of thing."



DAN SENSABAUGH

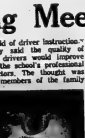
A professional driver with the Canadian Armed Forces in Trenton, Dan Sensabaugh says "a special course in a good idea but only for those students who take it seriously and get all they can out of it. "Family teaching, as I was taught, can be just as good," he said. "I haven't had an accident yet."



BELLE CREIGHTON

"I have four children who went through driver education courses in school and I think it is a very good idea," said Belle Creighton, of O'Hare St.

"Everybody is driving these days and it is important they know what they are doing. I have confidence in my children's driving ability because of the course."



JIM TOWNSEND

"I feel more comfortable knowing a professional taught my daughter how to drive a car," said salesman Jim Townsend. "There is a danger of parents teaching their children poor, driving habits. The class room situation is ideal for teaching young people the rules of the road before they ever get behind the wheel of a car."

Bonnar Is Not Happy But He'll Take the Win

"I'm happy with the two points, but we played terrible," confided Bobcat coach Meehan Bonnar after his club ekked out a not too thrilling 5-4 win over the visiting Whitby Young Bruins in Metro Junior B action at the Memorial arena, Friday night, before 1,300 fans.

For Belleville, the win marked the first time in five games that the Cats have been able to chalk up two points in the standings. The best previous to last night's game was a tie the locals managed at Picketing against the Panthers.

"That's the trouble playing a team like that (Whitby), you play their style of hockey and the first thing you know they score quick goals on you and you're in trouble," explained Bonnar after the contest.

The Cats came out flying in the first few minutes of play but couldn't manage a goal and soon after that lapsed into the slow skating pace that the visitors played continuously throughout the game. Neither club could be blamed for keeping the fans awake although at times people could be seen sitting on the edge of their seats for one reason or another.

The locals lineup for the first time in many weeks was almost at full strength with the lone exception of Paul Tilley who will be out until next week's game in Belleville. Bonnar also got their first opportunity to see the performance of newcomer Jake Ayotte in a Belleville uniform. The stocky centreman's tallys got plenty of ice time and made his presence felt. He should prove to be a valuable asset to the club in the future.

Jeff Merrill got the nod for the goaltending chores in Friday's game. This was his second start in a row and again the redhead came up with some outstanding saves.

Whitby drew first blood in the contest midway through the first period as Tony Sgro's shot from behind the net bounced in off Cat's defenceman Rick Langstaff. Belleville responded with two quick goals from Dave Lewis and Tony Meagher, his first of two.

Whitby, in an attempt to get back on track, switched goaltenders after the second Belleville goal.

The Cats were working with a total of seven defencemen in the game.

"We had them (defencemen) coming out of ere' ears," joked Bonnar.

Dave Lewis, a regular defenceman with Belleville got his first chance at a forward position and was one of the few standouts as far as skating and shooting were concerned.

Bonnar noted that Lewis will see action on a regular basis up front.

Meagher picked up his second goal of the game in the second period and Grant Coegan on a typical eger individual effort netted the second Belleville goal of the middle frame. Goegan's goal came at a time when two Bobcats were serving penalties.

Mike Crawford scored what proved to be the winning goal for the Cats at the 12:10 mark of the final period. Crawford also came up with a good showing for the Cats skating well both ways.

The visitors outscored the locals in the final period by a 3-1 margin with their lone goal coming with little better than a minute remaining to play in the game. Belleville able to fight off the comeback drive for the remaining minute of play and clinch the victory. Al Hunaks, Dave Phillips and John Brunton rounded out the scoring for the Bruins in the final two periods.

Minor Bantams Downed

KINGSTON (Special) — Joe Guthrie, John Ricketts and Steve Slaughter were the marksmen for Belleville Mcleroy-Maines in an Ontario Minor Hockey Association Minor Bantam 8-3 loss to Kingston Township here, Thursday.

The winners spread their firepower around. Marty Shaver was the only two-goal man for Township. Singles went to Jamie Cameron, Mark Norris, Tracy Drinka, Robbie Rosman, Bob Denyes and Steve Ogilvie.

Whitby Young Bruins' defenceman John Brunton (3) is headed for a fall as Bobcats' Joey Edwards whips in on goalie John Palaggi's doorstep during Friday night's Metro Junior B Hockey League game at Memorial Arena. Cats' profession was just enough to nose out pesky Bruins 5-4 with about 1,200 fans in attendance. Belleville team, in third place in the eastern division, begins series of games with central division leaders next week, playing North York at home. Friday and visiting Bramalea, Sunday.

Bi-Temp Scores

Bi-Temp Airconditioning edged a short-handed Belleville Carpets 5-3 Wednesday night in the only Gaz House Hockey League game of the week. The GHHL was preempted by the ice show at their regular Monday and Tuesday night slots.

Bi-Temp earned its sixth win in nine games, securing fourth place in the standings with 13 points. Bill Lynch scored twice and added an assist in leading his club to the victory. Dandy Carmichael, Steve Empey and Dom Di Tomaso added singles.

Ron Mitchell had two goals and an assist for Constelation and Bill Leitch scored the other. The Carpet club, had but eight players and two goalies for the game.

Dairymen In Charge

Spreading its goals among five players, league leading Reid's Dairy chalked up its eighth win of the Quinte Hockey City season, Thursday night at Memorial Arena, downing O'Brien Steel 5-2.

Dewolin Gambines took advantage of the situation to pull even in the standings with O'Brien by topping Belvedere Hotel 5-1. Dewolin and O'Brien each has eight points, well off the pace of the Dairymen who show the way with 16 points. Belvedere brings up the rear with four points.

Looking after the Reid's goals Thursday were Moe Hunter, Al Hay, Ralph Boerboower, Ralph Plane and Rick Hoselton. Wayne Defoe and Kevin Allen took care of the O'Brien production.

Two goals by Wayne Andrews powered Dewolin to its fourth win of the season. Frank Pinder, Doug Hallam and Dallas Lambert shared the other counters. Paul Padon helped himself to a pair of assists. Belvedere's lone goal was supplied by Ron Fulton.

HOCKEY TIPS

Don't Neglect Working on the Flip Shot

The flip shot is one of hockey's handiest and easiest shots yet it's surprising how youngsters and coaches devote little time to it. Unlike the slap, wrist and backhand shots, the flip shot seems to be dismissed as one of the game's natural skills.

But how many times have you seen a goalie sprawled on the ice and a shooter right on his doorstep unable to flip the puck over the figure into the net?

And how many times have you seen a player attempt a flip pass and shoot at glove at an opposing player and fail miserably with feeble flip shot?

Finally, how many times have you seen the quick dribble of the stick of a player who attempted to flip it and danger?

There are some of the frequent occasions when that extra work on the flip shot would have paid off in either a) a goal b) a good pass or c) safety in one's defensive zone.

Toronto Maple Leafs' Inge Hammarstrom is one of the better players with the flip shot around the goal area. Quite simply, with the goalie down and the puck close to him, the shooter must almost send the puck straight up in order to get it into the net. That's why the flip shot in this area is more difficult than meets the eye.

The flip shot isn't very complicated because all you have to do is flip the puck with the TOE of your stick. Make sure not to look at the puck when shooting . . . keep your head up.

Another possible advantage of the flip shot is its potential to fool a goalie from long range. Although it doesn't happen often, more than one goalie has been beaten when a flip shot from centre ice hit a crack in the ice or the puck took a weird bounce into the net. Goals like that can give a team a big lift.

So far, the wrist, backhand and flip shots have been discussed in these columns. There's been no mention of the slap shot. Know why? Because it's the last shot you should learn and use.

Called Up from Whitby, Tataryn Lifts Toros

By NEIL CAMPBELL
The Canadian Press

When Toronto Toros were looking everywhere for a way out of a season-long slump, perhaps they should have looked in their own backyard.

The troubled Toros reached down to an amateur team in suburban Whitby this week for a goaltender and suddenly they are owners of a modest two-game winning streak.

The new goalie, Dave Tataryn, has starred in both wins by the World Hockey Association team, including Friday night's 7-4 decision over the high-scoring Quebec Nordiques.

Tataryn's 42 stops included two difficult savers on shots by Marc Tardif, who shares the WHA scoring lead. Only one of 19 first-period shots got past the 25-year-old rookie.

The Sudbury, Ont., native started the season with Columbus Owls of the International Hockey League and had played two games with Whitby Warriors of the Ontario Hockey Association before being called to joining the Toros.

The loss didn't cost the Nordiques any ground in their fight for the Canadian Division lead. Winnipeg Jets, who lost 5-4 Friday by three points, were 5-4 losers to Houston Aeros.

Calgary Cowboys trounced Edmonton Oilers 8-3 and Minnesota Fighting Saints edged Denver Spurs 4-3 in Friday's other games.

Tataryn blocked the open cor- ner with a leg save on Quebec in the first period and handled a hard slap shot from the point by Tardif in the second.

Toronto scored five times in the third period to break a 3-3 tie, getting two of their goals from Peter Marrin. Tardif scored twice for the Nordiques.

Injuries to veterans Les Binkley and Jim Shaw put Tataryn in trial with the Toros as backup goalie and a series of mediocre performances by first-stringer Mario Viens gave him his starting chance.

He responded with a strong performance in Wednesday's 4-3 win over Calgary to earn a second start Friday.

A three-year veteran with Laurentian University Voyageurs of Sudbury, Tataryn failed to make the Toros in training camp this fall, showing a weakness on long shots. He appears to have corrected that flaw.

Murray Hall, Ted Taylor and Larry Hale scored in the final two minutes to give the Aeros their win. Hale scored the winner with two seconds to play. Hobby Hull scored his 18th and 7th goals of the season for Winnipeg.

Houston veteran Gordie Howe and goalie Ron Grahame were handed game misconduct penalties about calls in a game that produced 20 penalties.

Captain Danny Lawson's three goals helped the Calgary move three points in front of Edmonton in the Canadian division. The Oilers have played five games more than the Cowboys.

Greg Neeld Gets Trial

TORONTO (CP) — Defenceman Greg Neeld, who lost an eye during a junior game two years ago, will get a five-game trial with Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association later this month.

The Toros acquired the rights to Neeld, 20, from Minnesota Fighting Saints in exchange for the rights to Bill Nyrop, a defenceman of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League.

Assistant general manager Miles Baker will practice next week with the Toros and Buffalo Norsemens, their farm team in the North American Hockey League.

Neeld will play one game for the Norsemen next Friday, then take his trial with the Toros Dec. 14.

Rochester Closes In on Voyageurs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rochester Americans closed to within a point of first-place Nova Scotia Voyageurs in the Northern Division of the American Hockey League with a 7-3 win Friday night over Springfield Indians.

The Americans still have three games in hand over the Voyageurs, holders of a 15-8-2 record in 25 games. Rochester has played 22 games with 14 wins and five losses.

In other games Friday night, Hershey Bears downed Baltimore Clippers 4-2 and Cincinnati Robins shut out New Haven Nighthawks 4-0.

Rene Drolet scored two goals and Rochester Americans buried the Kings under a barrage of 44 shots. The visitors were able to manage only 17 shots on the Rochester goal.

Bob Pollesroit scored both of Springfield's goals in the third period.

Warne Schaab scored two goals and Jerome Marandi spearheaded in goal to lead the Robins to victory.

Schaab scored in each of the first two periods. Larry Wright and Steve Coates added goals in the last 6½ minutes of the game.

Jean-Guy Guy Gratton scored the winning goal to lead Hershey past Baltimore.

Gary McAdam scored for the Bears in 11:56 of the first period and Ray Clearwater responded for the Clippers at 14:51 in the first period.

Espo Wheeling For Rangers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A change in uniforms doesn't appear to have altered the prevailing touch of veteran Phil Esposito, now that he's healthy again.

The big centre set up two goals Friday night to help New York Rangers edge Kansas City Scouts 5-3 in a National Hockey League game.

A pair of ankle injuries have kept Esposito, NHL scoring champion in five of the last seven seasons, from playing much for the Rangers since they acquired him from Boston Bruins last month.

He returned in the Rangers' lineup on Saturday night and scored once in an 8-3 loss to Pittsburgh Penguins.

Bolstered and bruised, he started to hit his stride Sunday with two goals in a 5-3 win over St. Louis Blues, then had another two-goal game in Thursday's 4-4 tie with Buffalo Sabres.

In Friday's game he and Steve Vickers each drew assists on first-period goals by Rick Middleton and Bill Collins.

The assists gave Esposito 37 points for the season, far off his customary pace with the Bruins for whom he averaged 124 points a season for eight seasons.

Atlanta Flames whipped Vancouver Canucks 6-2 and California Seals edged Detroit Red Wings 3-2 in Friday's other games.

Middleton set up the Rangers' winning goal midway in the second period, scored by Larry Sacharuk on a shot from 40 feet out.

Second-year player Wilf Paiement scored one Kansas City goal and helped set up the other, scored by Craig Patrick. Paiement has scored eight goals in Kansas City's last six games.

Two goals each by Dave Kryskow and Curt Bennett helped the Flames to an easy win at Vancouver, Hilliard Graves added a goal and two assists for Atlanta.

At Oakland, California goalie Gilles Meloche made four saves in the final minute to preserve the win for the Seals. The Wings pulled goalie Jim Rutherford for a sixth attacker when a penalty to Ralph Klassen left the Seals two men short.

California had taken a 3-0 lead on a first-period goal by Rick Hampton and second-period goals by Bob Murdoch and Dave Hrechkosy. Bill McKechnie and Nick Libett scored for Detroit.

Tonight's schedule has Washington Capitals at Montreal Canadiens, Buffalo at New York Rangers, Philadelphia Flyers at St. Louis, Detroit at Los Angeles Kings, Kansas City at Minnesota North Stars and Boston at Toronto Maple Leafs.

Avoid Incidents Says Campbell

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says National Hockey League teams have been told to avoid creating incidents by criticizing the officiating in series against teams from the Soviet Union.

The newspaper quotes Campbell as saying he is "issuing a directive to all clubs involved in order to preserve what we've patiently built up."

"I don't want it destroyed by some critical fool. The greatest risk is that if the (series) could end in some kind of haggling over the conduct of officials."

Officials from the Soviet Union will referee four of the eight games between NHL and Russian club teams, which will be played under NHL rules. First game in the series is Dec. 28.

Campbell said if the series is successful, it may lead to series between the NHL and Russian club champions next year.

Wilson Out

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Rangers goaltender Dunc Wilson, who underwent an appendectomy late Thursday night, is expected to be lost to the National Hockey League club for about a month, a team spokesman said Friday.

Wilson was stricken after the first period of Thursday night's 4-4 tie with the Buffalo Sabres and was taken to Buffalo General Hospital where the surgery was performed.

Meanwhile, the Rangers announced that Doug Soetaert has been promoted from New York's American Hockey League affiliate in Providence for the duration of Wilson's recovery period. The 20-year-old Soetaert, the Rangers' second draft choice last summer, was to join the club in Kansas City for Friday night's game against the Scouts.

Coach, Players Fans Charged

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Provincial police say a stick-swinging brawl between hockey players and spectators at London Gardens three weeks ago has resulted in criminal charges being laid by Friday against the coach of St. Catharines Black Hawks, two Black Hawk players and three spectators.

The Hawks play in the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series.

Most serious of the charges — assault causing bodily harm — is against St. Catharines defenceman Kevin McCloskey.

Charged with causing a disturbance by fighting are: St. Catharines coach Paul Emms; St. Catharines defenceman Robert Manno and three fans — Marco Sclombri of St. Thomas, John Bernaards of Ingersoll and Vernon Rivers of London.

Constable Bill Litewski said summonses were mailed to the accused Friday. Court appearances will be scheduled early in January.

The charges are the latest legal move against hockey violence. Criticism of the sport peaked in October when Roy McMurtry, Ontario attorney-general, called for a crackdown on hockey violence.

The crackdown was directed to on-ice fighting.

The incident here Nov. 14 started that way but ended with fighting in the stands.

At 8:22 of the third period in a game between St. Catharines and London Knights, play was halted for a skirmish between Andy Wahley of the Black Hawks and London's Brad Marsh. Five-minute fighting penalties were assessed to each player but, before the referee could signal play to resume, fighting broke out in the stands involving first one St. Catharines player, then the entire team and its coach.

Provincial police had to be called in to stop the 20-minute brawl.

One fan was taken to hospital by ambulance and required stitches for a facial cut. Several others were treated at hospital.

Witnesses say no London Knights players were involved in the fighting in the stands.

"London won the game 13-4.

Although the league did not act against any member of the visiting team, it ordered London Gardens to post a $5,000 bond to guarantee adequate police protection at future games.

That order was rescinded when Knights owner Howard Garvin agreed to hire two off-duty police officers for all games.

French Skier Dead

BOURG-ST-MAURICE, France (Reuter) — Top French skier Michel Dujon, 18, died today from injuries received in a heavy fall during trials near here Thursday.

Dujon, one of France's few hopes for an Olympic Alpine ski medal and winner of two European Cup competitions, fractured his skull when carrying out out wasting trials with the French team in nearby Tignes.

His helmet was shattered into five pieces but police are not sure of the precise cause of the accident.

The only witnesses to the accident were tourists in a chair lift, police said.

Ken Charles the Spark

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Undersized Ken Charles may have absented heralded Erale DiGregorio to the bench for a while and at the same time provided the impetus for the sluggish Buffalo Braves.

Charles, starting in place of the slumping DiGregorio on Friday night, chalked a career-high 24 points in sparking the Braves to a 125-88 victory over Cleveland Cavaliers in a National Basketball Association game breaking Buffalo's six-game losing streak.

Charles hit 10 of 15 field goal attempts, had seven assists, three steals and four rebounds in 2 minutes.

"I don't expect him to play that well every night," said Buffalo coach Jack Ramsay. "But tonight, he played with intensity."

Asked if the flashy DiGregorio, who played only seven minutes late in the game and failed to score, could be effective as a reserve, Ramsay said: "He hasn't been. That's not his background. But we're at the point where we have to win games with the people who can do job for us."

In Friday's other NBA games, Boston Celtics beat New Orleans Jazz 104-9, Philadelphia 76ers edged New York Knicks 99-97, Detroit Pistons downed Houston Rockets 102-91, Milwaukee Bucks topped Kansas City Kings 103-95, and Washington Bullets defeated Phoenix Suns 95-87.

Fincups in Harvest of Goals

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Fincups defeated St. Catharines Black Hawks 14-4 in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A action Friday, giving the Fincups a total of 29 goals in their last two games.

In other action, Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds beat London Knights 5-3, Toronto Marlboros downed Kingston Canadians 8-6, Kitchener Rangers trounced Oshawa Generals 4-0 and Ottawa 67s upset Windsor Spitfires 5-1.

At Hamilton, captain Dale McCourt scored three goals and assisted on four others to lead the Fincups.

Rob Street and Mike Keating each scored, twice and Ted Long, Joe Kowal, Ed Smith, Cal Heard and Mark Perras got the other goals for the Fincups, who led 3-0 in the first period and 13-3 going into the third.

Bill Hamilton scored two goals and Don Wilson one for St. Catharines before 1,651 spectators.

Seven majors and a game misconduct were some of the 29 penalties called, most of them in the third period.

Rick Szabo and Bob Preese faced 55 Hamilton shots while the Fincups' Mark Lockes and Al Jensen, a third-period replacement, were tested 33 times.

League play resumes today with Sudbury at Toronto.

On Sunday, Sault Ste. Marie is at St. Catharines, Sudbury at Oshawa, Peterborough at Toronto, Hamilton at Kitchener, Windsor at Kingston and London at Ottawa.

Greyhounds 5 Knights 3

Sault Ste. Marie scored four goals in the second period to break a 1-1 tie before a crowd of 2,427.

The loss was the second in 16 home games this season for London.

Tim Coulis, John Tavella, Rosario Carboni and Randy Dorbely scored for the Greyhounds in the second period. Mike Kaszycki, the league's leading scorer, got a goal in the first period.

Tom Trevail, Steve Stackman and Tom Rowe replied for the Knights. Rowe's goal was the only scoring in the third period.

London outshot the winners 42-28.

Marlboros 6 Canadians 4

At Kingston, four third-period goals gave Toronto the victory before 3,700 spectators.

John Szarko scored three times and Lynn Jorgenson, Cary Farelli and Mark Murphy each scored once for the Marlboros, who led 3-1 after the first period and trailed 3-2 after the second.

Mark Sunse got two goals and Mike Crombeen and Tony McKegney scored the others for the Canadians, who outshot Toronto 40-29.

Rangers 4 Generals 0

The line of Don Maloney, Mark Holbrook and Blake Foster scored goals within three minutes late in the second period to lead Kitchener to victory over the visitors.

The other Kitchener goal came from Kevin Street in the third period.

Warren Skinner, playing in his fourth league game, stopped 33 shots by Oshawa to get the shutout before a crowd of 4,427.

The Rangers, who had 42 shots on goal, received 11 of the 20 penalties called.

Red Laurence of Kitchener and Dave Gardner of Oshawa each received a 10-minute misconduct and Chan Knutson of Oshawa was given a game misconduct. Each team had two fighting majors.

67s 5 Spitfires 1

Ottawa led 4-1 after the first period and added the remaining goal midway through the third frame to defeat the last-place Spitfires.

Peter Lee paced Ottawa with his 22nd and 23rd goals of the year; and Tom McDonnell, Bruce Baker and Steve Marcerere scored the others.

John Goodish was the Windsor scorer.

Each team fired 36 shots on goal.

Nationals Pad Lead

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The first-place Rockland Nationals enhanced their lead in the Central Junior Hockey League Friday night by tripping the second-place Gloucester Rangers 7-4.

The Nationals were led with two goals each from Norm Brisbois and Jean Thibodeau as they came from behind to beat the Rangers. The Nationals now lead the league by eight points, last place in the six-team league upset their opponents, with the Pembroke Lumber Kings outgunning the Brockville Warriors 7-4, and the Smiths Falls Bears crushing Nepean Raiders 8-3.

Novice Skaters In Top Form

Play in the Belleville Minor Hockey Association's Novice Division is under way and the Bills guys showed plenty of know-how in their first outing.

Dickie Lee's Devs Pyllett cleaned up the first shutout of the season, blanking Everyone Lumber in his team's 5-0 win. Sparking the offence was Doug Burley who popped in three goals. Brian Nolan and Bob Carey had the others.

Goals by Jamie Mills, David Sliss and Joey Glen produced a 3-1 Fry Ford win over Quinte Lions. Lone marksman for the losers was Paul Moore.

Peter MacIntosh rattled in three goals to lead Stephen Licence past Local 1000 5-1. Robert Guarasci and Kevin MacLaurin also scored in the win. Mike Dawson replied for the losers.

Belleville Credit Union slipped past Cherney's 3-2 with Paul Barkett collecting two goals and Allan Lessels one for the winners. Scott Gilbert and Jim Sagrift found the mark for Cherney's.

At the midget level, Stirling Sheet Metal zoned out Demark Construction 5-2 with Robbie Cousins supplying two goals and Ron Ferguson the other marker for the winners. Hitting for the Demark goals were Timothy Thompson and Brian Gooding.

Bill Gow fired three goals and Paul Lang and Chris Ripley checked in with singles in a 5-5 Sun Lick Gardens' win over Canadian Legion. Victors' got goals from Mike Kimble and Dennis Greer.

Powering Tim Horton Donuts past Rose Royals 5-3 was Bill McQuaid who struck for three goals. Gary Frederick and Steven Giddings had the other counters for Horton's. Mike Wilkinson was a two-goal man in defeat.

Steve Gilbey shot the lone goal for Licence Leisure World Bantam Major Selects as the team went down 10-1 to BYRF. Wally Inwood, Sean McKinney and Gary Stapley each notched a pair of goals while Danny Jeanes, Lynn Simpson, Danny Flesch and Robert Cook rounded out the BYBF attack.

Peter Fahey fired three goals and Gene Pearce helped himself to three assists as ANAF Dukes doubled the score on Uptown Billiards 6-3. Pete Lewis was the other scorer for the winners. Phil Cowan and Ron Dourthe connected for Uptown.

Legion and Red Shark staged late comebacks in Bantam Minor action but neither team made it pay with a win. But Legion did earn a split in points with Y's Men's Club, overcoming a two-goal deficit to get a 3-3 tie.

Red Shark's display of resurgence fell one goal short of the mark as the team scored the last three goals of the game in a 6-5 loss to Bob's Auto Body.

Scoring for Legion were Nell Ellis, Mark Carter and Terry McIntosh. Y's Men's goals came from Timmy Jaques, Ken Pappas and Don Hamilton.

Bob Hope and Don Castela each scored twice in Bob's squeeze past Red Shark. Stagmen went to Jim McMullen and Brian Cleaver while Lloyd Olson earned three assists. The losers got two goals each from John Hendrickx and Andy Fletcher and one by Scott Massey.

Whitley Rentals Peewee Major Selects got shutout goaltending from Brad Caldwell in an 8-0 romp over Blake Kerr Exxo. The scoring was handled by Brian Cruickwright with two, Allen Berry, Paul Beaudoin, Craig Saxby, Gord Graham, Steve Clancy and Steve Taylor.

All the scoring was confined to the first period in Doug Jones Jewellers' 4-1 defeat of McIntyre-Matthews. Scoring for the winners were Jeff Jackson, Peter Ganiah, Rob Ioloway and Kevin Johnston. Mike Miller replied for the losers.

Robbie Brand's goal late in the game deprived Ed's Esso goalie Tony Jackson of a shutout as Kiwanis dropped a 6-1 decision. Mike Vant and Doug Austin each came through with two goals and one assists in the win. Mike Weatherspoon and Terry Bayeroft had the other goals.

"Come on. Pop back home and see Britain on the cheap."

The Britain you remember really hasn't changed very much. And with our low off-season 22/45 day fares you know there's no better time to pay a flying visit to everyone back home.

Our low off-season fare. For only $315, Montreal's Mirabel to London return, we'll fly you back home with nice friendly service en route. You'll have time to catch up with all the "goings-on", and perhaps take a look at all those famous sights you never saw when you lived there. You can do a bit of shopping too, because British Airways' off-season fare lets you keep more of your budget. And if you'd like to travel at weekends, it only costs $15 extra each way.

Save even more with our Apex fares. Just $282, Montreal's Mirabel to London return, gets you a ticket on a regularly scheduled British Airways flight back to Britain. You have to book your flight (and pay for it) at least two months before departure. And if you change dates or cancel we're sorry but there's a penalty of 10% or $50 minimum. Book soon—because we've got a limited number of seats at the Apex price and they're not available on some flights. By the way, it won't cost you any more to fly on a weekend.

Incidentally, these fares are for departures from November through March and could change. So remember, your British Airways travel agent will be delighted to help you plan your trip and answer any questions you may have. And say that Roz told you about it.

We'll take good care of you.

Births

COOPER — Layton and Eleanor are pleased to announce the safe arrival of their new daughter at the Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday, December 3th, 1975, 9 lbs., 14 ozs. A sister for Julie. Special thanks to Dr. Birchard and staff on level 5.

In Memoriam

WOODCOCK — In loving memory of a dear wife, Maude Pearl Woodcock, who passed away December 6th, 1973.
Lovingly missed, never forgotten,
Memories treasured, never outworn sit,
And though the years may pass on
We
They are filled with remembrance of you.
—Ever remembered by husband Everton and sons.

JUBY — In loving memory of a dear husband, Wm. Juby, who passed away Dec. 7, 1974.
Sadly missed along life's way,
Quietly remembered every day,
Memories of you I treasure so,
But in our heart he's always there.
—Loving wife, Alice Juby.

BLEECKER — In loving memory of a dear husband and father Ben Bleecker who passed away December 7th, 1968.
We think of us who loved him,
And those but once before.
He lives with us in memory,
And will forever more.
—Lovingly remembered by wife Laura and family.

HOLLOWAY — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, John Percy, who who passed away, December 6, 1973.
A void in our household exists,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
Sweet memories of you we'll forgotten,
Though on earth you are seen no more,
But in memory you are with us,
As you always were before.
—Always remembered by wife Anne and family.

HOLLOWAY — In memory of a dear husband and father who passed away in December 6, 1973.
The years are quickly passing,
Though still we can't forget,
For in the hearts that love him,
His memory lingers yet.
—Never forgotten, Sonny and family.

CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to thank Dr. Douglas, Dr. Lawton and all the nurses of Belleville General Hospital for their kindness and care during my stay there. May God bless you all.
Sincerely, Mrs. L. Sebestyen

Kidney Stones Prayed Away

WHEN NOT SEEING IS BELIEVING

Copyright 1973, Toronto Sun Syndicate

Once upon a time a man had five kidney stones.

Not that he knew about it until one stone decided to move — a process accompanied by excruciating pain (which the doctors referred to matter-of-factly as "renal colic").

Anyway, the urologist, a wizard specializing in kidneys and things thereof, explained to the writhing patient the stone was busy passing the stone, remember) that the reason why calcium deposits form in the kidneys are unknown. But such stones rarely cause problems, he said. Except, of course, when they move.

The patient groaned his assent.

Sometimes, said the urologist cheerfully (the rolling stone rolls right on out of the body and the patient is just fine. However, sometimes it gets stuck (the patient groaned again) and must be encouraged to leave with surgery.

Well, our hero's stone got stuck. The urologist unstuck it in what he described cheerfully to the patient as "a major operation for you, a minor one for me."

There was a little bad news. The patient, it had been discovered, had four other stones, about the size of the original, still embedded in his left kidney. Each one, if it moved, was a potential source of the same exquisite pain he had just suffered.

"Can't you dissolve them?" implored the patient.

"Not without dissolving your kidneys at the same time," said the urologist unhelpfully.

He added: "Cheer up. The stones may never move. But, then again, they may."

Yeah, thought the patient, and probably at about two in the morning when I'm in a plane hours from a hospital.

Feeling as though he had bored four tiny time bombs, ticking away inside himself, the patient went home from the hospital. Since science could offer him no more help, he set about prayer.

The patient asked three of his friends who practised spiritual healing to pray for his kidney stones — that they would depart in peace.

More than a year later the patient returned to the urologist for X-rays. The urologist called him into the office with a puzzled look on his usually all-knowing face.

Flipping on a light that illuminated two sets of x-rays, he pointed to the one on the left.

"That's the x-ray we took when you left the hospital. There are four stones in that left kidney. Count 'em. Here and here and here and here. Now, look at these."

The urologist pointed to the other set of x-rays.

"We just took these. No stones. I had them looked at again to be sure. Same result."

"But," said the patient, "didn't you tell me that kidney stones just don't go away?"

"That's right."

"Didn't you tell me they couldn't be dissolved?"

"Yes."

"And would you say that I would certainly know it if I had passed four kidney stones as big as the last one?"

"I certainly would."

"Then," asked the patient, "where are my kidney stones?"

"That," said the urologist to the patient (who, in case you haven't already guessed, was myself) "is part of the unexplained."

Young Mennonite Dedicates Work to Preserving Past

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — A young Waterloo artist of Mennonite descent, who believes that the Old Order Mennonite way of life may vanish from the Canadian scene by the next century, is dedicating his life to preserving rural Mennonite scenes on canvas.

Arrangements have been made for the paintings of Peter Snyder, 31, to be displayed in Harrods in London. The paintings are eagerly sought by dealers all over North America. To date, he has completed about 150 works, some of which command a price of $1,500 and average about $800.

Although the success of the young artist is phenomenal it is secondary to him.

The paintings which give glimpses of pioneer life remainisent of a century ago and kept alive still by the Old Order Mennonite farmers show horse-drawn sleds struggling through snow-drifted country roads, barn raisings and farm scenes where old-fashioned horse-drawn plows still are used.

"Waterloo County is a living museum," said the artist who painted his first oil at 12. "People don't appreciate what they have in this area."

Although Mr. Snyder's ancestors were Old Order Mennonites, he himself is not and makes his way as Mennonite farm country in a sleek car wearing modern clothes. He is accepted, by farmers because of his name which can be traced back to pioneers who arrived in covered wagons.

Not since Homer Watson have rural scenes in Southern Ontario been transposed to canvas with such freshness and charm. A line of wash fluttering in front of a fieldstone house has a magical quality about it in a Snyder canvas. So has a simple scene of cows drinking from a pond holes in a furrowed country lane.

A red sled drawn by two black horses up a lane led by a boy in the look of an old master. Trees, glorious in fall colors and that's what's put on the addition."

Mr. Snyder paints everything and anything he sees. His constant excursions into the heart of Mennonite farm country help him retain the freshness of his work.

"The Old Order Mennonite way of life is fast disappearing from Pennsylvania where their farm land has become so valuable they are being persuaded to sell and give up farming," he said. "Here in Waterloo County machinery is beginning to appear on farms near cities. I have to travel to the most remote areas to find farms retaining the pioneer type of life. It may eventually disappear altogether from this area too and that is why I am planning to spend my entire life recording it.

A drive up an unknown country road recently, rewarded him with one of his best paintings. It was included in an exhibit he took to Boston in February.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A battle for a piece of the nostalgia market has spawned a $3-million lawsuit by band leader Artie Shaw against Time Inc., owner of Time-Life Records.

New York State's highest court on Thursday ordered a trial on several of Shaw's claims for damages against Time-Life Records for the use of 25 of his musical arrangements in its Swing Era record series.

The Time-Life series uses arrangements made popular by artists such as Shaw, Tommy Dorsey, Count Basie, Glenn Miller and Duke Ellington.

"However, none of the name artists played as much as a single note on the Time-Life recordings," the Court of Appeals said. Instead, the arrangements were recreated by a modern orchestra or recorded from an earlier album made by the Glen Gray Casa Loma Orchestra."

The seven-judge panel held that a jury must determine whether Time tried to "pass off" its records as being the personal work of Shaw, or if Time created confusion between its recordings and a competing four-record set of Shaw's marketed by the Reader's Digest Album Service and entitled Swing With Artie Shaw.

It also left to a jury to determine whether the Time-Life recordings were damaging to Shaw's reputation.

But the Court of Appeals dismissed most of the suit seeking damages for invasion of privacy and unauthorized use of his name.

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — An Australian who has vowed to fight a 15-foot great white shark on television for 15 minutes revealed Thursday how he intends to kill the fish.

Ben Cropp, 39, of Queensland is scheduled to meet the shark in an undersea cage off West Samoa.

"The whole fight could take five to 15 minutes," he told a news conference. "I would aim to stun the shark with the first shot (from a speargun). I'm looking for a quick kill.

"I could be eaten alive and I aim to cut the risk as much as possible."

The fight will be filmed March 9 and transmitted on closed-circuit television around the world. The show's promoter is Hollywood film producer Bill Sargent.

Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol
Sunday, Dec. 7

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The bigger or more active the gathering, the better it should suit you today. Try to attend a function where you can meet new people.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Though this normally isn't your work day, something good could be developing that will have had a chance to talk with the boss.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't be afraid to think in big bold terms today. Your ideas won't be all that far out, but if you fall short, you'll be ahead.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You'll find today's friends are those who aren't always that generous toward you will be surprisingly willing to share.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your judgment is particularly keen today. A good day to make major decisions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Set aside nonessential tasks. Give yourself out-of-doors in the fresh air and concentrate on that's just plain fun.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) A short trip to visit someone you haven't seen for some time could turn out to be a ball. Phone first.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Get in touch with a family member who has something you've been wanting to make a deal on. He's in a generous mood today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This is a good day for you to take care of an important matter that must be committed to writing. Spell out your terms.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) An unusual shift in conditions is now developing. It should be of substantial benefit to you materially. Some headaths may even surface today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your leadership qualities are excellent today. You may be fairly aggressive in this, but others will.

PISCES (Feb. 20 - March 20) Benefits are likely to come your way today either through very unusual channels or in a unique manner. Trust in Lady Luck.

Monday, Dec. 8

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're not the suffer a disappointment today if you lead yourself to believe another is a enthusiastic about something as you are.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be careful. Don't trend on too many toes in your attempt to satisfy your self-interests. Slights won't be quickly forgiven.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You have good ideas and intentions today, but when it comes to implementing them, you'll leave a lot to be desired.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Know when to back off today on business propositions. The party you're not privy to will be sorry or fail.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't have associates or companions with problems that don't directly affect them, especially if it's a family matter.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It isn't likely you'll get the thanks you expect for a service you perform today. Take satisfaction in knowing you did your best.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You'll be in a sociable generous mood today. This could substantially affect others ires out to be freeloaders.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) What you accomplish today will have to be earned through your own merits. It's not likely others will make things easier for you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A promise impulsively made to you today will only be partially fulfilled. Be realistic as to what is expected.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This could be a profitable day if you stay in areas you're familiar with. Getting out of your element would be a mistake.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The timing is all wrong for you to talk with one you know actually about help with something you're concerned.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It's marvelous to be a Good Samaritan. Now is the time for you to help others in need. You don't take on more than you can manage.

Newmarket Man Sails Battleship

NEWMARKET, Ont. (CP)—A lot of people have yachts or motor cruisers to sail in, "But," says Fred Cowell, "not many have a battleship!" Nobody but Mr. Cowell.

For 28 years model-maker Mr. Cowell has been working on a giant copy of that mighty but ill-fated German battleship Bismarck. Now it sits under plastic covers in his backyard eight miles northeast of here.

It might just be the biggest model ship ever built.

One-twentieth the size of the 50,000-ton original, it's made of wood and reinforced plastic. It's 8½ feet long, five feet, 10 inches wide at its beam and 13 feet from keel to mast top.

Every last detail is there—80 guns, anti-aircraft fire boxes, capstans—the lot.

But it's not merely a model to look at with the eye. Mr. Cowell plans to push this mini-battleship out on Lake Simcoe with Captain Grenner inside at the controls.

Police Camera Truck Used for Crowd Control

TORONTO (CP)—No longer is Candid Camera something to laugh about when it concerns the Metropolitan Toronto police force.

Some months ago the force developed its newest piece of crowd-control and surveillance equipment—a truck to be used by the Shriners' convention in the summer.

It is a white panel truck and carries no police identification. The only whisper is in the driver's compartment. The exterior air-conditioning unit on the roof helps in the appearance of an expensive recreational vehicle. But inside it is filled with sophisticated electronic equipment.

The main camera which rises from the top of the truck, is operated by remote control from a console that contains eight television monitors and controls. Other cameras may be operated manually from a special platform on the roof. Video relay stations are also located in relays for its police viewers.

There is also a small soundproof and lightproof office in the interior.

Inspector William Meyers of the investigation bureau, who is in charge of the vehicle, says the truck's reinforced plastic body was placed on a regular truck frame. The equipment was installed by the department.

Supt. Meyers says the truck is sent out on request from various police divisions ranging from traffic to the command centre. He says the new piece of equipment is not a spy on the public but rather a tool. He adds that the police believe their presence in a crowd can act as a deterrent to violence or crime.

But Insp. Meyers has not a command post for the senior officer in charge of crowd control, providing with his, television and radio hookups, a comprehensive view of the situation.

Nova Scotia Behind In Recreation Plans

HALIFAX (CP) — Recreation programs and facilities in Nova Scotia are not playing catch-up with those in other areas of Canada, says a professor at the Acadia University school of recreation who was recently elected president of the Recreation Association of Nova Scotia.

Bill White said in an interview here Nova Scotia is about 25 years behind Ontario in development of recreation-oriented programs.

"Things are happening so fast today in the recreation field that as soon as we feel we are reaching up, new programs are initiated and we are suddenly in the background once again," he said.

Recreation is one of the newest government spending priorities and because of that it is at the bottom of the priority list for funding.

"However, this attitude of government is changing as the public demand for additional and better recreation programs is increased. Flexible working hours are becoming increasingly popular among many big companies as more and more employees see the changes."

People also want more time to "live their jobs. Most jobs were not self-satisfying, so people were looking toward recreation to fill their personal needs.

Gary Boone, regional recreation representative for the Halifax-Dartmouth area, said there is a definite shift in people's recreation preferences.

Most people were looking for recreation in creative pursuits—the arts, music, theatre and drama—and only about 20 per cent were involved in traditional physical sports.

"Municipal recreation committees are most interested in the elite sports activities such as professional football, hockey, baseball or whatever," Mr. Boone said.

"These sports are left up to professional sports promoters and their expert coaches.

"Our main concern is the average citizen looking for some type of self-satisfying activity and outside regular work routine.

He said industries today play a large supportive role in recreation and big companies have instituted recreation and exercise programs for their employees.

Recreation administrators are coming from a variety of backgrounds, including the armed forces and the increasingly popular recreation degree programs at Dalhousie University here and Acadia at Wolfville.

Acadia's recreation degree program will graduate 120 students this year.

Toronto Draws Most Major Industries

MONTREAL (CP) — Toronto has attracted nine out of every 10 new corporate headquarters established during recent years, and will continue to surpass Montreal in drawing major industries and financial institutions, the director of the Montreal Urban Community (MUC) office of economic expansion said Thursday.

Jean-Guy Caron told MUC councillors that experts from the department of industry and commerce supported his conclusion—based on a report from Fasine, an American firm—that Montreal is no longer in the race to attract major businesses.

In the last 10 years, Mr. Caron said, only a few industries have moved to Montreal from Toronto, while dozens of montreal firms have moved to Ontario.

He said the heads of about 60 companies said Toronto was more attractive because of its concentration of industry and manufacture, its economic climate, and its proximity to the great lakes and the midwest of the United States.

Other reasons given for Toronto's predominance were its better social climate, greater local demand for manufactured products, easier marketing and greater possibilities for expansion.

Father May Sue School Board

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — A former supply teacher with the Waterloo County board of education said he will sue his former employer over his son's low mark in physical education if he cannot see his son's record.

Andrew Dupej requested Thursday that the board allow him to see his son's physical education record. He told the board he was upset about his son's mark fell short of the 80 per cent or more he received in his other subjects.

The student received a mark of 66, bringing his average to 79 per cent.

Mr. Dupej, a former teacher in Cobourg, Ont., said he knows access to his son's records will mean seeing other student's grades which is prohibited by provincial law. But he said he fears any separation of his son's grades could lead to tampering.

Mr. Dupej said he will seek a ruling from the ministry of education. Should that fail, he said, he will sue both the county board and the school principal.

Lorne Camphil, principal of Cameron Heights Collegiate where Mr. Dupej's son attends school, told trustees Mr. Dupej's son missed two tests which led in part to his low grade. He said the boy also missed a number of classes.

Firenza Owners May Sue GM

TORONTO (CP) — A judge of the Ontario High Court of Justice said Friday that four persons who own Firenza automobiles have the right to sue for damages on behalf of all other consumers who bought the cars through General Motors of Canada Ltd.

Mr. Justice John Osler of the High Court, a division of the Ontario Supreme Court, said that during a hearing earlier this week he disallowed a bid by General Motors to quash the Firenza owners' action. Company representatives said it was not a proper case for the application of a class suit.

Alberta May Set Own Gas Prices

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government introduced legislation Friday which gives the power to set natural gas prices if an agreement cannot be worked out with the federal government.

Energy Minister Don Getty said outside the legislature that the Alberta Natural Gas Price Administration Act is designed as a balance to the Federal Petroleum Administration Act and will not be proclaimed so long as pricing agreements can be worked out with Ottawa.

Mr. Getty said Alberta does not recognize Ottawa's constitutional authority to set gas prices but has never formally challenged it.

"I don't see anything on the horizon that would cause us to leave the current agreement and use the new legislation. I would be very hopeful that a new agreement can also be reached after June, 1976 (when the current agreement expires)."

Mr. Lyons, representing the four owners, said consumer class actions are common in the United States but usually are not admissible in Canadian courts.

Mr. Lyons said in an interview that there are about 4,000 owners of Firenzas in the province. The car, a British-made compact sold by General Motors in 1971 and 1972, retailed for between $2,500 and $3,300.

About 800 persons who bought the cars complained to the company that most owners experienced a number of mechanical difficulties, such as blinding headlights and stalling engines, he said.

Psychologists Predict Seat Belt Rule Will Cause More Growls Than Clicks

TORONTO (CP) — Forcing a motorist to wear a seat belt in his car is almost the same as telling him wear one in his home, say two Ontario psychologists who predict more growls than clicks when the province's seatbelt legislation takes affect Jan. 1.

Gerald Wilde, professor of psychology at Queens University, and Lawrence Lozero, a psychologist with the ministry of transport, say seat belts interfere with basic psychological needs of many drivers.

Legislation making the use of seatbelts mandatory was passed by the legislature this week.

"A car is one small territory where people can do very much what they like — a home away from home" Dr. Wilde said. "It's part of the search for freedom.

"They (seatbelts) don't offer any benefits over and above safety. They get dirty. They are cumbersome. Some are badly designed."

Mr. Lozero said drivers often do not want to wear seatbelts because "they don't want to be reminded they can be killed in their own living rooms."

Moluccan Gunmen Losing Courage Says Countryman

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Some of the South Moluccan nationalists holding more than 30 hostages aboard a stranded train in northern Holland are beginning to lose courage after defying the Dutch government for six days, the leader of the Moluccan community says.

"I could read from the faces of one or two that they do not want to go on," said Johan Alvares Maulaniara, president of the self-styled Republic of the Moluccas, after boarding the train Sunday to plead with the young gunmen to surrender.

But Maulaniara held out no hope of early capitulation by his compatriots who seized the train last Tuesday or another group of South Moluccans who occupied the Indonesian consulate in Amsterdam last Thursday. The Moluccans at the consulate are holding about 20 hostages, including four children.

The gunmen are demanding that the Dutch government sponsor a drive id the United Nations to see Indonesia to give the South Moluccan islands independence. The Dutch government has no direct control over the policies of Indonesia, a former colony.

The Moluccans aboard the train have also demanded safe conduct out of the country, but the government refused because they killed three of their hostages.

Maulaniara said he told the men on the train "they had reached their goals, achieved publicity and the attention of the world, but I got the impression they still hope the government will give in sooner or later."

"I made it clear to them that the government would not."

The South Moluccans were one of the island groups in the pre-Second World War Dutch East Indies that after the war sided with the Dutch against the Indonesian independence movement on Java and Sumatra. The Dutch recognized the independence of Indonesia in 1949, and thousands of South Moluccans fled to Holland after an unsuccessful rebellion in 1950.

A government spokesman said there "can be no question" of meeting the demands of the gunmen. He added that they are showing "a very primitive view" of what is politically possible.

Maulaniara said he has had no reply to a cable he sent to UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim asking for the United Nations to take up the South Moluccans' demand for independence and also asking him to mediate in the two sieges.

A man and his wife in their 40's were released from the train Sunday, reducing the number of hostages there to 31, police said. They also said there are four Moluccan still aboard the train, but Maulaniara said there are six.

The couple said conditions in the crowded car in which all the hostages are being held are not unbearable, but it is cold at night and the captives are kept tied up.

Six Moluccans are reported holding four children and between 15 and 20 adults captive in the consulate. An attempt to negotiate for the release of the four children was planned today.

Teachers Will Defy Wage, Price Guides

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial executive council of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation (OSSTF) said Sunday it will defy the federal government's selective wage and price controls, when ever it judges their application unjust, as part of a campaign against the measures.

In a news release, the council said it wants to protect collective bargaining and the quality of education.

Following a meeting of its 21 members, the council also said it will work with the Canadian Labor Congress and the Ontario Federation of Labor to develop "a valid anti-inflationary program to replace the present wage restraint program."

The release said the council plans to set up committees throughout Ontario to monitor the effects of the controls and work with community and labor groups.

An information service on the controls will be established for the public and the federation's 34,000 members, the release said.

Jim Forster, OSSTF president, said in an interview that any action in defiance of the controls will be within legal and constitutional bounds.

Mr. Forster said a nine-member council of the federation's executive will plan action for a particular area only on the invitation of teachers in that area. Such plans will have to be approved by the other executive members, who represent the federation's 29 districts, he said.

The OSSTF has called for a demonstration of teachers at Queen's Park this week to protest the lack of anti-inflation measures by the province and to show support for 8,500 striking teachers in Metropolitan Toronto, he said.

The federal anti-inflation board ruled Nov. 28 that the Metro Toronto school board's latest contract offer of a 39.5 per-cent increase in its secondary school teachers was excessive and would not be approved under federal wage-price wage and price controls.

The striking Toronto teachers are seeking a 47.5-per-cent increase and a cost-of-living allowance.

Election Win

Chief William J. Brant gets congratulations after results of election win at Tyendinaga Indian Reserve Saturday night. Mohawks re-elected him to second term after voting on council candidates to administer reserve for next two years.

William J. Brant Re-elected Chief of Tyendinaga Reserve

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

TYENDINAGA — William J. Brant was voted to his second term as chief of the Quinte Mohawks on this reserve Saturday night.

Chief Brant retained his office as leader of the reserve's local council administration against the election bid of Willard A. Hill.

The election — which returned two new members to the four-man council headed by the chief — was the first official consensus of opinion since Chief Brant's administration was embroiled last year on issues that led to often stormy protests on the reserve.

The demonstrations centred on location of a shoe parts plant which opponents claimed would open the reserve to taxation.

About 78 per cent of the reserve's estimated 100 voting Mohawks cast their ballots to return Chief Brant by 291 votes to 154 for Mr. Hill, a former councillor.

Chief Brant made brief reference to the past dissent in a short speech after claiming the feathered headdress emblematic of Indian leadership.

"I know we've had some turbulent times in the last few years," he told the Mohawks who had gathered more than 9½ hours at the reserve's community centre for the polling results.

"But I hope in this coming time we can iron out our differences and work together.

"Only by working together can we progress."

But the voting also brought defeat for a council veteran who also came under fire during the industry controversy.

Carl D. Brant — 10 years a councillor and who led the polls in the 1973 election — secured only 132 votes to place seventh among the 19 candidates for council seats.

Mr. Brant became founding president of the Four Ba — the industry that sparked the dispute.

Leading the polls this election with 210 votes was Donald F. Brant, former reserve electoral officer. Mr. Brant resigned his office last year as a personal protest gesture over the anti-council controversy.

The second newcomer is council is Hayer Brant, who won 148 votes to secure fourth place in the balloting.

Mr. Brant was listed as a candidate by the Mohawk People's Party — headed by Mr. Hill. Chief Brant is leader of the other reserve party, The Progressives.

Deanna Brant — first woman to seek election in several years — failed to secure a seat. Mrs. Brant, a school teacher on the reserve, came eighth among the candidates with 126 votes.

Two sitting councillors were returned — Charles (Bud) Maracle, second with 182 votes, and Elwood B. Brant, third with 153 votes.

Other votes: Michael Brant Jr., 106; Andrew Maracle Sr. 180; Lyle Lewes, 136; Wilbert Maracle 73.

Peter Gross, electoral officer, said a total 301 votes were cast.

No Deals for IRA

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard says it will make no deals with Irish Republican Army gunmen holding a 14-year-old postal inspector and his wife hostage in their London apartment. Police said there were either three or four IRA men in the second-floor apartment near Regent Park. They said one of them was believed to be Michael Wilson, accused of killing Ross McWhirter, co-editor of the Guinness Book of World Records, on Nov. 27.

Silence Surrounds Case

DETROIT (AP) — Federal prosecutors are silent on what they found out when three New Jersey Teamsters were placed in a lineup viewed by a secret witness to the abduction of James Hoffa. But a federal grand jury is expected to get a report on the lineup as early as Tuesday, leaving open the possibility of prompt indictments if the witness made a positive identification.

Quebec May Establish Gambling Casino

MONTREAL (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa confirmed Saturday the government is still studying the possibility of establishing a gambling casino in Quebec but said a final decision rests on talks with the federal government.

A Quebec government offer to buy the bankrupt Manoir Richelieu resort, a once-fashionable watering hole in Murray Bay about 80 miles northeast of Quebec City, revived speculation last week that the site might be used for a casino.

Mr. Bourassa said very often our first choice for a casino would be at that place," Mr. Bourassa said on CJAD radio's Quebec Report.

Rhodesia Faces Race War Soon

LONDON (AP) — David Ennals, Britain's deputy foreign minister, warned Rhodesia's white rulers today that they face all-out race war unless they hand over power to the African country's black majority.

Ennals told reporters after a trip to the region: "Europeans in Rhodesia will be overtaken by under no illusions. Preparations for military action are already being made. Several thousand (Rhodesian) men are training and more are joining every day."

Ennals went to Zambia, a neighbor of Rhodesia, to discuss possibilities of a new constitutional conference between the Salisbury regime of Prime Minister Ian Smith and leaders of Rhodesia's black nationalists.

Linda Tom Gives Music Prize To St. Thomas Building Fund

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Linda Tom has a talent for music.

Because of it, the reconstruction fund for Belleville's historic St. Thomas Anglican Church is a little bit richer today.

The 11-year-old daughter of Michael and Susan Tom — who operate the Sun Luck Gardens restaurant — won $37.50 last February at the annual Rotary Music Festival.

She saved an additional $7.50 from pocket money to make $45. The Tom family then called Dr. Richard Potter — recently-retired Ontario cabinet minister who head the St. Thomas reconstruction fund drive.

When Dr. Potter arrived Saturday to pick up Linda's check the Tom family had a big dinner for the building fund — $500 from themselves and $500 from their restaurant operation.

And Linda had a topper for the occasion.

A grade four piano student, she said if she wins any prize in the music festival's finals it too will go to the St. Thomas fund.

The Tom family's donations were the latest boost to the campaign to help finance restoration of the century-old church, gutted by fire April 24.

A financial target of $750,000 was set for the campaign. Some $235,000 was covered by insurance — the rest, $515,000, will be raised by the Potter committee.

Cash and pledges from parishioners, businessmen, individuals, community and other church groups have placed the drive within $150,000 of its goal, Dr. Potter said.

The results of canvassing among area industries is still awaited, he said. However, with the recent postal strike ended the expected local industrial managers likely will be hearing from their head offices about next year's budgeting — which hopefully will include donations to the church fund.

Revolutionary Operation Restores Sight for Two

OTTAWA (CP) — May Burke, 75, had been blind 29 years and Gordon Sheppard for 19 years until they underwent revolutionary operations that partially restored their sight.

Performed by Dr. John Stuart of Ottawa General Hospital, the operations were the first in Canada. The process was pioneered by Dr. Jose Hernando Cuenca of Columbia Presbyterian Medical Centre in New York.

Dr. Stuart performed the operations while Dr. Cardova was here last summer to observe. There were three operations but only two successful.

In essence, the doctor implants an artificial cornea in the centre of the patient's eye so light can get through again to the toptic nerve.

The device is described as resembling a hollow set and bolt implanted in the eye from which a diseased cornea is surgically removed.

This is the sort of device that gave Mr. Sheppard, local war veteran for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind (CNIB), his new sight.

Dr. Stuart explained at a news conference Friday that patients who receive the quarter-sized device have only what is known as tunnel-vision — a narrow field of vision compared with a normal 180-degree field.

"It's sort of like looking down a periscope," Mr. Sheppard said.

Scottish Teacher Finds Much Similar in Two Systems

TRENTON — As part of an educational international exchange program, Mary Stewart, a teacher from Scotland is enjoying a unique opportunity here.

"I see the exchange as a challenge, and all I can do is try my best," said Miss Stewart.

Teaching children at the elementary level, at College Street Public School, Miss Stewart said initially she was unsure how the children would react to her accent. The children she said, accepted her without question after a few days. She reasoned "The children are exposed to all types of accents on television."

The main advantage she pointed out with the Canadian educational system is the professional development days. "We don't have them at home.

"Hastings County has a great team of teachers," she said.

In Scotland, Miss Stewart taught children who were a year younger than the one here. "The stress is on development with kindergarten and grades 1 and 2, here as well as Scotland she said.

For the first month in Canada, Miss Stewart said her main complaint was with the climate. "I didn't like the heat at all." She said the weather now is about the coldest it gets in Scotland.

Miss Stewart, who taught just outside of Glasgow in Lanarkshire County, said that area has quite a number of economically poor families. The children here have a "vibrant spirit, and are well off."

While in Canada, Miss Stewart is paid her normal salary about $500. per month, but receives supplements from the British and Canadian governments.

Mary-anne Kolek, of Batawa is Miss Stewart's exchange teacher, and currently at Miss Stewart's school in Scotland.

"I met her a week before I came to Canada. We talked about school and filled each other in about our respective countries," said Miss Stewart.

Drizzle Doesn't Damper Annual Picton Parade

BY MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — In the tradition of "the show must go on" participants in the Picton Santa Claus parade ignored Saturday's heavy drizzle to march down Main Street ahead of St. Nick.

More than 30 floats and eight bands took part in the Christmas parade that took an hour to pass through town.

Although there was heavy rain since early morning, parade marshal William Thorley of Picton was at the fairgrounds before eight a.m. to advise participants that the march was still on.

Soggy crepe paper hung from many of the floats and participants waiting for the parade to begin huddled under umbrellas.

Heavy plastic was draped over a number of the parade entries to provide protection from the inclement weather.

Majorettes and bandsmen, hair and uniforms dripping, led the procession from Picton fairgrounds through Main Street to Lake Street where it dispersed.

Hundreds of perrons protected by raincoats and umbrellas lined the streets while a numbers of others viewed the parade from the comfort of their cars.

Winners of the trophy for best marching unit were the Trenton Majorettes while winners of the award for best band were the Kawartha Kavaliers.

The float judged as best community effort was the entry of the Prince Edward Heights workshop.

Best commercial entry was a float entered by Joe's Appliances of Picton.

Best school float was entered by the students of Keene School in Ameliasburg.

The Wellington Lions Club won the trophy for best entry by an organization.

Parade judges were Joe Cranbal, Bertha Campbell and Will Harrison.

Damage Extensive

ROSSMORE — Damage estimated at $2,000 resulted early Sunday when a car driven by Claudius Toy, 38, of RR 7, Belleville collided with a car stopped on highway 14 near the Bay Bridge.

A spokesman for the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said Sunday that a car owned by Jack Young of RR 7, Belleville was southbound on Highway 14 when it ran out of gas and stopped.

The vehicle received $1,000 damage when a southbound car driven by Mr. Toy was in collision with it.

Damage to the Toy car also was estimated at $1,000.

No injuries were reported.

Blaze Damages Apartment

PICTON — Picton Fire Chief Leonard Tripp said today the fire marshal's office has been called in to investigate a Sunday night blaze in a vacant apartment building at 138 Main St. here.

Chief Tripp said the fire, which apparently started in the basement, was reported by an unidentified woman shortly after 7.30 p.m. Sunday.

He said the owner of the vacant two-storey building is unknown at this time.

No damage estimate is available as yet but Chief Tripp noted that the building can be restored.

Cobourg Pipe Band Releases First Album

TRENTON — The Cobourg Legion Pipe Band, which has about 12 members from Belleville and Trenton, has just released an album of Scotish songs.

Glenn Slinsen, band secretary, said the album was recorded in late September at Les Smith Sound Studio in Grafton, Ont.

The album, paid for by band members, is their first attempt at recording and reaction is favorable said Mr. Slinsen.

The record costs $5 and currently can be bought in one store in Belleville, three in Trenton, and one in Brighton, or from any band member, he said.

Money raised from the sales will be used by the band for travel to competitions to buy uniforms, teaching of pipe music to students and donations to charities, Mr. Slinsen said.

Mr. Slinsen said the band will be travelling to the Orondo, Fla., Highland Games and Festival in March, and later the same month travel to St. Petersburg, Fla. for a Ceilidh. He also said the band may be playing at Bush Gardens, Fla., then but final arrangements will hinge with the dates available.

The band will also perform at the Santa Claus Parade in Brighton Dec. 1.

Cubans Export Guerrilla Expertise to Marxist Bedfellows in Angola

By JOHN D. HARRISON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Castro's Cuba has returned to guerrilla warfare for the first time since the mid '60s when it directly intervened in the internal affairs of unstable Latin American nations.

But this time, Cuban troops and guerrilla warfare specialists are not at work in the western hemisphere but in Africa and chiefly in battle-torn Angola supporting its pro-Russian Marxist Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA) movement.

Among the estimated 3,000 Cuban troops in Angola are veterans of the famous Castro July 26th movement in the hills of Cuba against Batista in the late 50s, aging, but still knowledgable experts in fighting and winning that kind of irregular combat.

And in the complex array of competing liberation movements fighting each other in Portugal's former colony, the Cubans have come in, not to fight against the other movements, but against other black revolutionaries.

As in 1937 to 1939, the Cuban troops may be on the winning side again. The MPLA controls Luanda the main city and a key corridor between the coast and Zaire, the country which is the principal source of MPLA Russian weapons and support.

The MPLA is also the Angolan group which has formed the country's new independent government. Legalistically it has a lead over the other three liberation movements which actually control much more of the huge former province than does the MPLA itself.

But this is not the first penetration of Cuban military specialists into the new nations of Africa. There are Cuban "technicians" in Equatorial Guinea, the only new African state which is Spanish-speaking having been a former Spanish colony, as well as in Tanzania and Somalia.

The latter nation has very large Russian naval and technical missions and is Soviet-oriented, though not as much as Cuba itself.

And then in the South Yemen in southern Arabia, and in Syria which is dominated by Soviet military technology, there are Cuban medical and agricultural specialists in the first country, tank operators in the second.

Why all this Cuban presence in such strange places as far from home and bearing not at all on the Cuban role in the Caribbean?

The best reason given is that Cuba wants to maintain a role other than as a receiver of Russian equipment in the Soviet-dominated Third World.

It has expertise in guerrilla warfare which few other emerging nations within the Communist orbit have developed.

Moreover, the great success of jungle operations during the Cuban Revolution remains a classic of guerrilla warfare, in spite of the largely disastrous efforts by Cuba in the early 60s to attempt these again on a lesser scale in various countries of Latin America.

And presumably by now, the Russians have forgotten Che Guevara's failure to create a Cuban-style revolution in the jungles of Bolivia plus his refusal to accept the basic dictum that bullets are not to be a one-year-book model of what happened in the Sierra Maestra between 1956 and 1958.

In the second place, the Cuban involvement in Africa is not meant to create "bridgeheads" for Castro in the strategic sense of Mao Tse-tung, since Castro's troops are not in Angola to form any kind of Cuban-oriented society or new nation.

But these strange and exotic ringlaurels, made possible by the ideological unities of our age, do have to be explained. A few years ago the Cuban Jacobins with their Vietnam's struggle was easier to understand.

The Cubans saw the North Vietnamese as allies and attacked directly by the "Yankees" as they had been in 1961 at the Bay of Pigs.

Hats And Women's Year

One of the last women's hats to make much of an impression on us was worn, paradoxically, by a young woman at the CNE in Toronto in September.

Paradoxically, because hats are not worn much by young women and indeed, not much at all these days according to Belleville's Audrey Davies.

The young woman at the CNE was a very elegant and attractive West-Indian, typical of Toronto's burgeoning compositanism. She wore a black skirt with a yellow top and a black hat that hugged her head like one of those chocolate nipples from the fancy cake shelves.

She was very feminine, the absence of which these days Mrs. Davies equates in part at least with the fact hats are out of favor.

Mrs. Davies is playing her part in trying to correct this trend. Well-known here for her pottery and artist, she has a collection of ceramic hats from various periods of history up to the present and is exhibiting some of them at the Pottery Guild in Toronto.

As a Women's Year exhibit — and Mrs. Davies plans more — this is perhaps valuable. Will it bring hats back into favor with the ladies? We shall have to wait and see.

Back to Junk Mail!

The postal stoppage cementer few friendships between the public and Canada Mail as represented by the government and its employees, but it did have its bright side according to one Tony Barrett of Toronto.

Mr. Barrett in a letter to a newspaper expressed his pleasure at the non-delivery of junk mail and the agreeable contacta he had with real live people regarding payment of bills — instead of dealing with the cold printouts of the computers.

Now it will soon be back to regular deliveries — junk mail and all. At least we can enjoy the pleasant memory of the first piece of post-strike mail to be delivered — a postcard mailed in October by friends vacationing overseas.

Pepin Wants Diversity of Approach in Fight Against Inflation

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The job of selling the government's economic restraints to the Canadian people seems to have passed from the prime minister to the man he appointed as chairman of the anti-inflation board.

And the approaches taken by the two salesmen make a fascinating contrast in human nature.

When Pierre Elliott Trudeau was travelling around the country, in his first flush of enthusiasm for restraints, he was being tough and ... ive, threatening jail terms for the greedy who tried to grab too much for themselves.

Jean-Luc Pepin, on the other hand, is all smiles, charm, wit, ticisms and audience flattery— plus an appealing pose of helplessness—as he travels from place to place to gather support for the program.

There's something for everyone in Jean Luc Pepin's approach in fighting inflation.

Speaking in Toronto recently, for example, he offered a quotation from the 18th-century British statesman Edmund Burke as summing up the anti-inflation board's view.

"The rights of man are not absolute. We balance inconvenience."

(If Mr. Trudeau had been drawing Burke's writings he might have chosen: "I know not many laws more likely to think that moderation in a case like this, is a sort of treason.")

... somewhat self-important group of economists, journalists had just finished lecturing the government on the futility of its anti-inflation approach, when Mr. Pepin made his Toronto appearance at a Financial Post conference on executive compensation.

That gave Mr. Pepin the opportunity to deliver a lecture of his own—God-inspired no doubt—erudite serious.

He made it clear that he didn't think much of pat answers to what he considers a highly complex economic problem.

"You don't fight inflation by a certain set of means," he contended.

"You fight inflation by a coordinated set of approaches. . . . Any oversimplifying may damage the success of the program as a whole."

"Fine-tuning is a word I like. My emphasis is on diversity of approaches."

The anti-inflation board chairman said he finds himself troubled about fashions in economic theory — regional development last month, national development today, "the neoclassical" tomorrow.

He said he will insist, instead, on an approach that avoids any excessive emphasis.

The intellectual beauty of Mr. Pepin's evolutionary, fine-tuning approach can't be denied.

But there's a big difference between hitting a target with a perfect sound, and timing an economic medicine captained by 22-million people of widely divergent interests and expectations.

Excessive government spending has, for instance, been generally recognized as a major factor in inflation. Yet federal civil servants fine-tuned themselves into substantial salary and pension increases just before the restraints were announced, and the government will not commit itself to a limit on its spending increases—either in dollars or a carb.

Some of the professions, so-called, are loudly determined to push the inflation rate to a new high.

And, as Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said recently, "less work for more pay" has replaced the old maxim about "a fair day's pay for a fair day's work."

It's quite now that the fight against inflation would have had a better chance of success if pelase and pressure had been frozen at the outset.

But that wasn't done, and so the anti-inflation board has a tougher job and a more modest goal.

"I don't look on this program as being anything more than slowing the wheel down and giving us a breathing spell," says Jack Biddell, a member of that board.

"Isn't having our dog send one to the Jones' dog taking this Christmas card business a bit far?"

Hints of Scandal and an Over-zealous Press

Montreal La Presse: There has been a growing quality to newspaper headlines of late.

We have been hearing that corruption has never been more widespread, and once again French-Canadians have succeeded best in distinguishing themselves in this area.

The current aura of scandal is gaining momentum, but it has been around for many months. The simplest case caused a deep pessimism and has forced many persons into painful introspection.

French-Canadians now ask themselves if they are the most dishonest, the least scrupulous on the least competent in our society more tarnished than others? . . .

It is true that our history is not an absolute model of public morality. But what reasonable man would deny that there has been some progress in this area within the last 15 years? . . .

Could it be that the healthy self-criticism we had launched a few years ago has backfired and become a self-destructive complex that obscures our progress and exposes only our failures?

I will say right away that I can't deny the necessity of denouncing public improbity. But I am ill at ease when the most baseless rumors are presented as irrefutable fact.

I feel ill at ease, too, when the press joins police in following up this leads in the hope of discovering judicial proof. The press sometimes allows itself to act as a mouthpiece for police, thus destroying the basic concept of the innocent until proven guilty. . . .

Our society can only emerge demoralized and vulnerable because of all this self-doubt. And societal institutions can only suffer as, increasingly, men of quality will refuse to lend their names for fear of losing their reputations needlessly.

Press criticism can only suffer because no society can bear to have itself depicted in terms it finds objectionable; just as in the past, society will end up wanting only the negative bearers of bad tidings.

Ever since the Watergate scandal, the U.S. press has tried to win forgiveness for having been the instigator of this affair.—Marcel Adam

Chemicals and Public Health

Cornwall Standard-Freeholder, The U.S. National Audubon (Federation NWF) has endorsed a proposed toxic substances control bill designed to prevent the marketing of environmentally-unsound chemical substances.

Thomas L. Kimball, NWF vice-president, said: "There are more than two million known chemical substances, with thousands of new ones developed each year. The disturbing aspect of this swelling production is of how little we know about the human health and environmental effects of exposure to these substances, either before or after their manufacture."

In commenting on three bills before U.S. consumer protection committee dealing with toxic substances, Mr. Kimball endorsed a resolution calling for testing of all chemical substances by the their manufacturers and introduction into the environment, prohibition or restriction of substances presenting an "unreasonable risk" to human health and the environment, and public hearings before any new substances, either before or after their manufacture."

Canada there have also been efforts to protect the environment on the basis as the use of DDT is an example.

Let us hope both countries continue to be concerned about illness. Many species of bird and animals have been endangered already by lack of research before chemicals were put to use.

Binding Arbitration Needed

The Globe and Mail

Already, with the ink just dry on this settlement, the public can see the union's leadership drum-banging for the next round. To quote Jean-Claude Parrot, CUPW vice-president and chief negotiator: "All of us, including those who accepted this offer, will be fighting every day during this contract for the things that are missing."

And there are problems remaining — around working conditions, job classifications, problems that neither the Government nor the union leadership has shown itself capable of dealing with. They will only be dealt with, and industrial peace only brought to the Post Office, by skilled, unpartisan, outside binding arbitration . . . and an end to strikes.

But until the Government comes to this wisdom it can at least improve the process. This strike could have been ended three weeks ago if the union leadership had permitted the Government's final offer to be submitted to the membership for vote, it did not. To avoid this mess in the future, the Government should be armed in law provision for a free, supervised vote as soon the Government has announced that its final offer is on the table. It must also make legal the alternative delivery services on which the country mail depend when there are disruptions in service. Canada must have dependable means of communicating; the public must be served.

Expression Of Thanks

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

On behalf of our Board of Directors of Hastings County Home and School Council, I would like to express appreciation through the Intelligencer, to CJBQ and to Cablevue for your public service announcements of our council meetings which were held in Hastings County Education Centre (united United to Bancroft, Madoc, Trenton etc.) on the first Monday of each month. We are getting results.

I would also like to thank the 60 principals of Hastings public elementary schools who arranged for meetings in their schools and/or teacher representatives to glean the information supplied to them.

We thank Mr. Alan Payton — director of education, Mr. Dick Beare, Transportation Officer; Mr. Ken Mumford, Educational Assistant who established the regulations for Hastings County for the "gifted" student, Mr. Ken Hutchison for his many "Metric Meetings" to Parent and People groups in our County. These people have given unstintingly of themselves above their call of duty.

We hope to have more of you in 1976.

Annual Free Cinema Show Nets Truckloads of Toys

It wasn't your ordinary run-of-the-mill matinee Sunday at Quinte Mall.

Hundreds of children, some with parents in tow, lined the corridor of the mall waiting to present Santa Claus with their admission to an afternoon of cartoons at Quinte Cinema.

Admission price was a toy donated towards the annual Bells the Fire Fighters toy drive.

Stella Culhane, manager of Quinte Cinema, organized the toy-show exchange four years ago as a contribution to the community. The entire staff of Quinte Cinema donate their time.

"Each year the response is greater than the year before," said Mrs. Culhane. "Besides being a good public relations endeavor it helps to take care of the underprivileged."

Truckloads of toys were collected and taken to the toy drive headquarters on Pinnacle St. for sorting and distribution.

Ralp Boomhower, fire fighter in charge of fundraising, said that although the drive is down this year in terms of funds the toys are piling up quickly.

"The free show at the Cinema helps tremendously," he said.

He added last year more than $4,000 was spent on additional toys, candles and items such as mittens for the gift packages.

The fire fighters assist some area 1,200 children every Christmas.

Christmas Program Under Way

Glanmore House began its annual Christmas program Saturday.

For two hours youngsters were treated to free horsey rides around the driveway of the Victorian mansion, now the home of Hastings County Historical Society's museum.

The lassies — guided by Nancy Allin, of Simcoe Arabian Farm, Cookyville — were taken aboard a buggy borrowed from the Ameliasburgh Museum.

Indoors, Glanmore House was decked with yule decorations reminiscent of the period in which the big house was a proud possession.

The setting was a background for an eggnog party given by the historical society.

Tonight, the museum's Christmas revels continue with the Eastern Ontario String Quartet at 9 p.m. Tuesday night, there'll be a presentation by the Tabernacle United Church junior choir; puppet shows are scheduled for Wednesday; Belleville Theatre Guild performs Thursday while Friday sees a display of music boxes by Belleville collector Frank Furby.

Students Use Mini Zoo To Portray Poem

Grades 7 and 8 students at Harry J. Clarke School have come up with a new twist to an old Christmas poem.

The poem-"'Twas The Night Before Christmas — will feature as the key characters guinea pigs, mice, rabbits and other animals that can do a trick or two.

The animals are the products of the mini zoo collection at the school. Students will be the guests of the local television show It's a Dog's World with Alex Mankaras on channel 4 on Dec. 15 at 11.

The animals, coached by a handful of students from Terry Marsden's class, will perform the poem complete with costumes prom and sunflower seeds to cure stage fright.

The Christmas special is also sponsored by the Junior Humane Society.

The show will feature Pennie the mouse ("not even stirring...") and Frances, a pretty long-haired white guinea pig, as jolly old St. Nick. Santa's sleigh will be led by guinea pigs Dodger and Samantha.

The mini zoo has been operating at Harry J. Clarke School for the last four years after originating in 1969 at King George Public School.

The students, responsible for the care of the animals, are filled with silence by various projects designed by Mr. Marsden.

On Dasher, On Prancer . . . !

Kea Saigle, a Grade 8 student of Harry J. Clarke School, encourages guinea pigs Doger and Samantha to lead the rest of Santa's crew. The students and the Junior Humane Society are preparing the pets for a Christmas special to be seen on Cablevue Channel 4.

Youth Charged After $2,800 Mishap Sunday

THOMASBURG — A 17-year-old Tweed youth is charged with careless driving and two years were treated and released from Belleville General Hospital following a one-car accident early Sunday on Highway 37, two miles north of this hamlet.

Ontario Provincial Police at Madoc identify the charged youth as Christopher Orr who, a hospital spokesman said today, suffered a head injury.

The spokesman said a passenger, James Lambert, 19, of base St. in Tweed, suffered injuries to his arm and shoulder.

Police say a 1967 model Plymouth was southbound when it went out of control, crossed the west 3'4 ider and severed a hydro pole located 18 feet from the pavement.

Constable John Ball estimated $2,500 damage to the rear, left side and windshield of the car and $300 to the pole in the 2:30 a.m. mishap.

Mountain of Toys

Belleville Fire Fighters begin the last day of collecting toys that were donated Sunday at Quinte Cinema for the annual toy drive.

Quinte Cinema staged a free cartoon show in exchange for a toy gift to assist the fire fighters.

Lumber Yard Workers Endorse New Agreement

Rollins Lumber Co. Ltd. employees are expected to sign a new labor contract today that will grant the plant's 24 union workers a three-per-cent wage increase and improved company contributions to fringe benefits, a union spokesman said today.

A meeting between company and union spokesmen was scheduled for today where it was expected the tentative, one-year pact will be signed.

A vote of the local of United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners has given "at least 75 per cent" support of the contract, said local steward Alfred Lawrence, "Average wage at the (Foxboro) plant is $4.80 an hour."

The contract is exactly the same as offered before the workers went on strike two weeks ago with the exception that the company will pay 100 per cent of hospital and group insurance benefits.

The union already has a cost of living clause which will continue in the new contract.

Earlier during the strike action, Mr. Lawrence said his local would go back to their jobs for the cost of living clause plus 19 per cent. The local returned to their jobs early last week when the latest offer was verbally endorsed.

Rollins vice-president Ron Murray could not be contacted today but said earlier the company's offer is not, tied to federally-imposed price and wage guidelines.

We took a sampling of area lumber yards and after comparing wages, we made what we feel is a fair offer, he said.

Car Hits House

Total property damage was estimated at $3,250 when a car struck a house Saturday at the intersection of Highway 14 and Hastings County Rd. 23.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville say they have charged Elsie Mumford, 18, of 484 Crawford St. in Toronto with driving without an operator's licence.

Police say a 1980 — model Plymouth, owned by Harry Roscoe of 25 Montrose Rd. at RR 3, Belleville, was southbound on Highway 14 and turning east onto the county road when an intoxicated passenger fell across the driver, causing the vehicle to go out of control.

The car struck the northwest corner of a house owned by William Lachford of RR 3, Belleville, police say.

Constable Terry Martin estimated $3,000 damage to the house and $250 damage to the car.

Fran Parish has learned to prepare wild duck in a variety of ways since her husband Gary is a hunter who brings home his quota each fall. This duck recipe (for two wild or one domestic) is a family favorite, recommended by Mrs. Parish because it's easy and "a little different."

Cantonese Duck

fresh parsley
one lemon
bacon strips (see below)
½ cup beer
¼ cup dry mustard
¼ tsp. accent
two tbsp. soy sauce
one cup preserves (apricot)
one tbsp. lemon juice
one tsp. grated orange peel
¼ cup melted butter (see below)
garlic salt and pepper

Mrs. Parish uses the bacon and the butter in the above recipe only with wild duck, since they have a lower proportion of body fat than domestic ducks, and need the extra fat. For the domestic ducks, eliminate the bacon strips, use less butter or no melted butter, as you prefer.

Sprinkle duck inside and out with garlic salt and pepper. Place sprigs of parsley and half a lemon in the cavity of the duck.

(Cover breast of wild duck with strips of bacon and fasten.)

Roast at 325 - 350 degrees, on a rack in a roasting pan or broiling pan — the higher the rack the better, so that the heat can surround the duck on all sides. Roast until the thighs move freely — the minimum time would be 15 minutes per pound, but more than that is usually required.

For the sauce, mix the beer with mustard, soy sauce, preserves, lemon juice and orange peel. Heat in a double boiler.

Baste with melted butter (frequently if it's a wild duck, occasionally or not at all if domestic). Baste with the sauce once about 25 minutes before serving.

Serve with rice, and the remaining sauce.

Mrs. Parish suggests serving the crisp duck skin as an appetizer. The best way to get the skin really crisp, she says, is to rub the skin all over with salt, before putting the duck in the oven. If it's a domestic duck, prick the skin with a fork, as this releases the fat and helps the skin become crisp.

After the duck is done, remove the skin — it comes off easily — and cut it into strips or squares. Serve with garnishes before the meal.

Keeping Family Together Is Aim Of CAS Emergency Worker

"My experience has been at a gut level, out on the streets working with people. My job now is not breaking up the home, my main concern is keeping the family together."

That's Len Smith speaking, an ex-policeman who moved to Belleville nearly two years ago. Since then he has pursued a full-time career in social work.

During the day he studies for a BA in psychology at Queen's University in Kingston, and by night he is the emergency duty worker for the Family and Children's Services of Hastings County (the Children's Aid Society).

As his job title suggests, Mr. Smith looks after emergencies — a type of work his police background prepared him for. After normal office hours, the CAS doesn't shut down. Emergency calls to its number (962-9231) are routed to Mr. Smith by the telephone answering service. He reacts swiftly, and gets to the trouble spot as soon as he can.

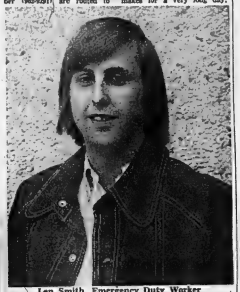
Len Smith has learned to expect just about anything. Sometimes the call concerns a teen-ager who's breaking up the home in an outburst of adolescent frustration. His job — restoring peace to the whole family, as well as calming down the overwrought teen-ager.

Sometimes a call notifies him that small children have been left alone, and he has to babysit until the parents are located and he's satisfied the situation is under control.

Sometimes children won't go home, and once they're found he has to begin the task of sorting out the emotional tangle that brought the crisis to a head.

The night-time job often makes for a very long day, and although it's tough to have to face studying with only a few hours' sleep behind him, Len Smith is determined to achieve his objectives. When he graduates in 1977, he'll continue studying for his MSW (Masters Degree in Social Work).

Mr. Smith believes that he can be an influence for order and decency in the community, that he can help straighten out problems between parents and kids. And one of the ways he can do that is by working from within the CAS, an organization dedicated to strengthening and unifying the family.



Len Smith, Emergency Duty Worker for Belleville's Children's Aid Society

St. Michael's Holds Dinner For Seniors

Christmas dinner, with all the trimmings was held Sunday, December 7 in the rectory hall of St. Michael's for 80 senior citizens of the parish. The dinner followed the noon Mass.

The occasion was the third dinner given for members of St. Michael's Senior Citizen's Club, an organization begun by Dora Vogt, rectory housekeeper.

Miss Vogt and her sister Ko Vogt prepared the food for the party, and were assisted in serving by women of St. Michael's parish.

The hall was decorated for the event festive ornaments, and a Christmas tree. During the meal the guests were entertained by Christmas carols, sung and played by Sherry O'Neill, Angela Black and Martin Vogt.

On behalf of all the members of the club, Ernest Cook gave a donation to Monsigner J.P. Sullivan and Miss Vogt, for the assistance they have given the club.

Reader Argues with Ann About Causes of Impotence

Dear Ann Landers: I'm not exactly a Women's Libber, but if I read one more "expert opinion" implying that aggressive females are responsible for male impotence, I think I'll go to the nearest bury intersection and burn my bra.

I'm deeply disappointed at your reader's agreement with the 75-year-old ex-stud who said "permissive society" is causing youthful impotency.

The idea that sex is a "performance" which the male does TO, not WITH, the female is neither natural nor universal. In other cultures women are bred to express their sexual feelings openly. This expression does not threaten the men nor does it make them impotent. I'm not defending the frightened hard-boiled chick who insensitively stamps on a young man's feelings. I AM saying that she and the professional hooker has deserve each other. If Don has finally met his match—Bully horray! You can sign me—No Nostalgia For The Fifties.

Dear No Nostalgia: Thanks for expressing your point of view. This is a big world and one can always find some glaring exceptions to every rule.

My agreement with the "find" was based on what I have read, heard, and seen these past ten years. One can no longer typecast the male as the hunter. The game has changed, dearie.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband's family is very prominent. His relatives have held public office, both national and state, and he is considering a political career.

A new raucous and vulgar radio personality has come on the local scene. His real name (which he uses professionally) sounds very similar to my husband's. People keep asking if he's a relative.

What can we do about it?—Minfred

Dear Mr.: If it's his real name there's very little you can do. Sometimes, even when the name is made up you can't do much. For example, the stripper Norma Vincent Peal has been enjoying her name for quite some time.

Dear Ann Landers: I never thought the day would come but here it is. What do I do now?

I can honestly say I had a happy childhood with many advantages. Everything went along fine until my parents began to have problems. The result was a divorce. I sided with my father when the court asked me to say which parent I wanted to live with. My mother was very upset with my decision and we exchanged some harsh words. It was an awful scene.

It's two years later and I realize I made a mistake. I know now my father told me many things about my mother that weren't true. I also know he isn't the kind of person I thought he was.

I haven't spoken to my mother since that terrible day in court. What should I do? I COULDN'T bear to be rejected by her.—Sad Seed

Dear Friend: Write your mother today. Tell her exactly what you told me—minus the unexcomplimentary remarks about your dad.

I'm willing to bet you she will be very happy to hear from you and she might even ask you to live with her. If she does, I hope you'll say yes. Good luck, dear.

Pacifist Agitator Goldie Josephy Finally Writing About Her Career

OTTAWA (CP) — Goldie Josephy has temporarily swapped her picket signs for a typewriter to appear in the cause of peaceful protest between the covers of a book.

"I sat, maybe because I was too lazy to move, at the centre of the peace movement here for 18 years," the 51-year-old Londoner-born pacifist-agitator said in an interview.

"The first draft of her autobiographical history book, filled with green ribbon left from last Christmas, lies on a card table in her house, her picket signs leaning against the living room hot in the bathroom, books of poetry and peace movement stacked in the corner, binders full of letters, mind full of memories.

"If you believe in peace, you only need two people to say you've got a peace movement," she said in explaining the whirlwind of activities, often alone.

Goldie was moving to Toronto to finish her book and start a new life, leaving this city where she organized demonstrations on Parliament Hill, held vigils outside foreign embassies, wrote hundreds of letters to newspaper editors stubbornly hobbled politicians and urged curious observers to campaign for world peace and human rights with her outspoken, gravelly barked chat.

When she arrived in Canada, Goldie helped create the committee for new immigrants, fondly called The Old Country Club, a name she now giggles at as "crazy."

It was basically a group of English immigrants crouching together in their various basements trying to cheer each another up."

About 109 homesick members attended the club's Christmas party in 1952 and her letter about some of them still were here to join the Canadian Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament.

Goldie keeps under lock and key the minutes of the first meetings in 1961 of the Ottawa Committee for Council of Radiation Hazards, scribbled in a hand-covered notebook.

With it is her first pamphlet, Peace Is Our Only Shelter. Evacuation — cost, seven cents — being posted and bomb shelters were being built at the time.

"This tends to lull us into a willingness to accept the possibility that war may be an tolerable. This tempts us to avoid realistic realizing with the present situation," Goldie wrote in the leaflet. "The only defence against accidental war is peace."

"The cold war was very cold," she said of her leading through a clipboard full of poetry to find one in which she summarizes the picket sign with the crucifix.

To find time for writing the book Goldie has taken a leave of absence from her position as special projects officer for Amnesty International, an office that campaigns for the release of political prisoners.

New Cabinet Post For Jeanne Sauve

OTTAWA (CP) — "Politics" loves it.

"I guess I'll stay in it until my constituents kick me out.

"I won by 17 000 votes the last time."

So says the smiling, silver-haired 53-year-old Montreal woman who likes to call herself the touchy communications minister's job.

Jeanne Sauve, former public affairs broadcaster, wife of a former cabinet minister, former minister of science and of the environment, was stepping up in the world.

She was first elected in the Montreal constituency of Anjou-Ile in 1972, years after her husband was defeated in the 1968 election.

She became only the third woman cabinet minister in Canadian history that year when she was named to the the science portfolio. In 1974 she was switched to the environment portfolio as Prime Minister Trudeau lived up to an election promise to split what had been the Department of environment portfolio.

Her most controversial time was earlier this year when she was met by jeers at a conference of women in the law in Vancouver when she spoke against liberalized abortion laws.

Mrs. Sauve takes over the communications portfolio from well-known Liberals and personal friends of the prime ministers-Gerard Pelletier and Pierre Juneau.

AROUND TOWN with DAVID SAUNDERS

(. . . an advertising feature designed to keep you better informed of what's new around town.)

Trimming the Tree

Part of the joy of Christmas is bringing home the tree and then setting it up in your living room, twinkling with lights and decorations . . . only then has Christmas really arrived! The Sidney Inn, 285 Moira West has just received a shipment of the real thing, fresh from the countryside . . . Scotch Pines, Spruce and Balsam; large or small. These trees are pruned and ready to take away. They are at popular prices. As come and see for the fun at Moira West and pick out your own tree. You will find all the tree decorations you need at the Sidney Inn too, and save a lot of irreverent shopping around. Remember when you were a kid? It's a wonderful moment when you finally switch on the lights and watch your own kid's eyes light up. Phone 962-8132 for further information.

The Nelson Touch

I mentioned last week that the late H. Nelson was shipped home in a barrel of brine after overindulging in the international aquatics against France off Calais, Pas-de-Calais. Actually the real story is better, because I was corrected by a colleague during the week and severely taken to task. Nelson was shipped home in a keg of rum, ship-shape and Bristol fashion, as apparently rum is noted for its preservative qualities — if not, in this case its restorative qualities. Unfortunately, the contents of the keg had been largely consumed by an over-enthusiastic crew by the time they docked at Portsmouth, but that's no reason not to drop into the cozy Admiral Villeneuve Room at the Inn On The Bay, Glenora St., Picton, a welcome new addition to the local scene. It's an atmospheric pub, with brass and copper and old photos and prints . . . and a fine open fire. A nice place to drop into anytime, but especially over Christmas! If you should want to dine there — as I recommend it — it's advisable to call ahead on Saturdays. The telephone number in Picton is 476-3114. Come on over!

Stocking Stuffers

Stocking stuffers can be one of the most intriguing parts of Christmas morning for children of all ages...The small gifts often do really make a difference . . . At Wessenell and Son Jewellers, 247 Front Street have a wonderful selection of stuffed gifts to slip into Christmas stockings . . . Crystal bells and small brass vases . . . pewter napkin rings and charms in gold or sterling silver. Small floral centrepieces or leather book markers . . . by the dozen! This retailer is a relaxed and friendly place to do your Christmas shopping, and the service is the kind you really personalized. Gifts are attractively gift-wrapped and they have both gift certificates and a layaway plan. The phone number is 962-3514.

Cutting Rug

For those of you old enough to remember, that was slang, in the roaring twenties, for dancing. Decor Studios in the Plaza on Dundas St. East has a great variety of area rugs in stock just now . . . "Rya" broad name in a Tempest pattern, sized at 4'6"x6'3" regularly priced at $89 are now an special offer for the low price of $59 . . . Oriental Sesion Rugs sized 7'6" are at the low price of $108 — they would usually cost you $169. The Decor Studios also have a most attractive line in Scandinavian "Tronne" rugs — 5'3"x8'3" — that they have developed in pure from $199 to $139. It's a good place to shop, and a colorful rug can really add character to a room. Some of these rugs are good in size that they can easily double as wall hangings. Call Heak Fritjers at 968-5842. He's always willing to talk about his great love — luxurious floor coverings.

Guard Against Injury

Hundreds of thousands of eye accidents happen each year in industry, in home workshops, in kitchens and gardens. Protect your eyes from needless damage by wearing eye protection wherever there is a chance of accident. If you work in an industrial plant ask your safety director about forming a chapter of the "Wise Owl Club". It can help you and those with whom you work to cheat blindness. Free of advice brought to you each week by Quinte Optical, 34 Bridge Street East. Quinte Optical will be glad to arrange eye examinations on your behalf. Telephone 962-9211 for details.

Christmas Lights Special

I mentioned last week that there was a really great deal going at Reddy Electric, 291 Coleman Street, Tel. 962-3766 . . . a sale before Christmas of lights, circuit, Santa Claus, Christmas wreaths . . . just about anything you need to get into the holiday mood. What I didn't mention was that they are offering a substantial 25% off these Christmas lights. And that is an offer that you cannot refuse! And while you are talking to the people in Reddy, have a look 'round their store and see the marvellous lighting ideas they have to brighten these dull winter months, from sturdy Colonial lamps to elegant, crystal chandeliers in the modern Schwartz line . . . that could be a truly original gift idea that will be treasured and appreciated for years to come. And remember, December 31 is the absolute shutoff date for sales tax rebate on 1975 cars. Phone Ken Flood at 968-5267 for full details.

Time Is Running Out

Winter always seems to catch us by surprise, and perhaps it will this year even more than usual. People always seem to leave some things to the last minute . . . like the winter tune-up and fitting snow tires. That's why Yader's Car Sales, 31 College St., W., would like to remind you that all that cold weather is literally just around the corner, and their factory-trained mechanics would like to see that your car is in good shape to face the rough stuff ahead. Yader's also have an extensive line in gift ideas in their accessories department . . . roof racks, steering wheels for sporty types, seat covers and just about anything that can help to make driving more pleasurable. And remember, December 31 is the absolute shutoff date for sales tax rebate on 1975 cars. Phone Ken Flood at 968-5267 for full details.

Practical Things In Winter

Talking to Mr. Gibbs of Gibbs and Son, the Vacuum Specialists at 17 Albion Street recently, I learned that he had been appointed an agent for the prestigious line of Royal vacuum cleaners. These are Canadian made, and are strongly put together, using metal wherever possible. Some of the models weigh as little as 10 lbs., yet have 60" of vacuum hose packing 60 cubic feet of vacuum per inch. All models carry a 1-year full warranty on all parts including the hose, and there is a 3-year warranty on all motor parts. One interesting thing that Mr. Gibbs mentioned was that a colleague of his in the same business told him that in four years he had never done any warranty or repair work on this line of cleaners — and that's a good recommendation! The people at Gibbs and Son would be glad to give you full details. Call them at 962-5384.

Why Is Hard Water Harmful?

The water in your tap contains many minerals dissolved from the earth, but the largest concentrations are calcium and magnesium. These particular minerals which turn water "hard" refuse it difficult to use water as a cleansing agent because they make soap "curd", lowering its effectiveness and has forcing us to use more to achieve results. Anybody who has tried to save hard water will know what I mean! Moira Schuster Fuels, 17 Pinnacle St. South are agents for the exclusive Aquaflow Water Softners, which have particular relevance to those of us who live in and around Belleville. Once you have experienced the advantages and benefits of soft water you won't want to go back. Why not call the people at Moira Schuster for full details? The telephone number is 962-4504.

Sell Your Shovel

What do you associate with the following words? Snow, ice, shovel, scrape, slip, slide, slush, wet, cones to mind above muscles, injuries, late for work lost wages. ServiceMaster, 178 Pinnacle St. (at rear), 962-1572 say that it could happen. They have in stock a marvellous product called X-73 ice remover. Easy, fast effective way to melt snow and thaw ice. This fantastic product makes rock salt obsolete. As an example a 160 lb. drum of X-7 equals the melting power of 1,000 lbs. of rock salt at 0 F. degrees. X-73 even works at 50 F. degrees below zero and that's one claim that I am not anxious to prove. . . It's the perfect thing for driveways, porches. In fact anywhere you care to use it. Carry some in the trunk of your car in case you get stuck. It's non-toxic, noiseless to harness, animals and vegetation. Get in touch with ServiceMaster and get a free demonstration and instead of shovelling snow, make it disappear.

CP News Roundup

55 Die During Driving Week

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

At least five persons died Sunday and eight Saturday in traffic accidents across Canada, bringing to 55 the total for the seven days of National Safe-Driving Week.

A survey by The Canadian Press shows that Ontario, with a total of 22 traffic fatalities since the seven-day period started Monday, has the highest toll. Quebec has 15 fatalities, British Columbia and Nova Scotia with five each, New Brunswick with three, Newfoundland and Alberta with two each and Manitoba with one.

No traffic deaths were reported in Prince Edward Island or Saskatchewan.

At least 64 people across the country died during the seven-day period last year.

Jobs May Drop

KINGSTON (CP) — Donald C. MacDonald, NDP member of the legislature for York South, said Sunday that up to 18,000 existing and potential jobs might be affected next year because the province has asked Ontario Hydro to decrease its borrowing by $400 million in 1976.

Pays Securities

CUYAHOGA FALLS, Ohio (AP) — Evangelist Rex Humbard hard said Sunday his Cathedral of Tomorrow has paid off municipal bonds of dollar securities that had been questioned by government officials.

Humbard confirmed last week's report that all bonds of the bonds who have asked for their money back have been repaid.

Nobel Winners

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The American and Soviet co-winners of the Nobel literature economics discussed handicaps and advantages of East-West systems at a news conference Sunday.

Prof. Tjalling Koopmans of Yale University and Soviet economist Leonid Kantorovich will share the $145,000 prize at the awards ceremony Wednesday. Their separate works deal with the best use of available resources.

Another Candidate

REGINA (CP) — Jim Walsh, a 46-year-old Edmonton preacher, Saturday became the 14th declared candidate for the federal Conservative leadership.

Mr. Walker, who also maintains property in Hillbe, Ont., says in a brochure distributed at the annual meeting of the party that he stands for the individual and free enterprise.

Assures Jews

MONTREAL (CP) — Parti Quebecois Leader Rene Levesque assured a Jewish audience Sunday they have no reason to fear an independent Quebec governed by his party.

Briefs Japanese

TOKYO (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger met Japanese Foreign Minister Kiichi Miyazawa on Sunday and told him American relations with China are "good and will be improving gradually." A U.S. state department spokesman said the meeting was designed to brief the Japanese up to date on President Ford's visit to China, Indonesia and the Philippines. Supports Workers

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Leftist Communist auto workers barricaded in their factory for 72 days in an attempt to save their jobs, beard mass and received a moral boost Sunday from Giovanni Cardinal Colombo, archbishop of Milan. The workers are occupying the financially-troubled plant to stop the parent company, British Leyland, from dismantling it and putting 4,500 employees out of work.

Merry Marathon Winners

Loyalist College students Phil Wall (left) of the second-year business program and Leslie Hays (right), an Alberta native in first-year English, show off their prowess at cards which helped them go the distance in a 12½ hour marathon euchre tournament held this week by the Students' Association of Loyalist College during its annual toy drive. See Van Koevering (middle), sales promotion representative for Molson's Brewery (Ontario) Ltd. which sponsored the tournament, presented their trophies during association Keg and Barrel Night at Loyalist Wednesday.

Kills Teen-ager

NEW YORK (Reuter) — A gunman fired five shots from a car at Harlem's Apollo Theatre on Sunday killing a teen-ager and wounding two other spectators, police said. The dead youth was named as Darrel Scullark, 16, killed as he sat in another box watching soul singer Smokey Robinson perform. Police said the gunman escaped as the crowd of 2,500 fled from the theatre.

Ratify Contract

TORONTO (CP) — About 750 workers who repair and service equipment for Consumers' Gas Co. ratified a contract Sunday which provides a wage increase of 25 per cent over two years, a union spokesman said.

The workers, members of Local 181, International Chemical Workers Union in Toronto, Peterborough, Barrie and Brockville, voted last month to go on strike midnight Sunday night if contract negotiations were not settled.

Playwright Dies

HAMDEN, Conn (AP) — Thornton Wilder, who wrote the theatre classic Our Town and collected three Pulitzer prizes for his novels and plays, died Sunday of a heart attack at age 78.

The playwright, novelist and teacher died in his sleep at the Hamden, Conn., home he shared with his sister, Isabel, a family spokesman said.

Two Scholars

TORONTO (CP) — James Parley, secretary of the Ontario selection committee for Rhodes scholarships, announced Sunday that the two Rhodes scholars from Ontario for 1976 will be Grant Gibbs, 22, of Toronto and Christopher Rose, 23, of Sault Ste. Marie.

Fighting Paralyses Beirut for 2 Days

BEIRUT (AP) — Heavy fighting between Beirut's Moslem and Christian armies paralysed the Lebanese capital today for the second successive day.

The government warned residents to stay off the streets and closed schools and all public offices.

There were rocket and mortar duels during the night between the Christian stronghold of Ein Rummaneh and the neighboring Moslem area of Chiyah, one of the chief battlegrounds in the civil war.

There was small-arms and rocket fire all morning in several other areas, including the middle-class Quotari district and the seaside hotel area that was the centre of fighting three weeks ago.

Heavy explosions from shoulder-fired grenades boomed out there and in the downtown commercial centre near the palm-fringed Martyr's Square that was once the centre of Middle East commerce.

The outmanned, outnumbered security forces stayed out of the combat zones, and there was no accurate estimate of casualties.

For seven hours, firemen were unable to get to a fire in the fuel oil tanks of the Quitari building because the offices of The Associated Press., They worked their way by fair morning and put out the fire, but smoke still filled the building, and gunmen holding in the streets prevented movement in the area.

Madrid Cracks Down on Leftists

MADRID (AP) — Police put a heavy guard on the Madrid cemetery today to break up a Socialist march at the Spanish government pushed ahead with a crackdown on leftists demanding democratic reforms.

The Socialists scheduled a silent march to commemorate the death of the founder of the Spanish Socialist party, Pablo Iglesias. The police last year routed a similar observance.

The police also prohibited a Socialist meeting at a downtown movie house.

The crackdown began Sunday with the arrest of Communist labor leader Marcelino Camacho, 37, one of the few major political prisoners who had been freed a week ago by the limited amnesty with which King Juan Carlos began his reign.

Small bands of leftists tried to demonstrate in several parts of Madrid Sunday night, and the police made more arrests.

Priest Defies Church Order

MONTREAL (CP) — A Roman Catholic priest, barred from his church for refusing to discontinue use of the traditional Latin mass, celebrated three masses today from the vestory he has been occupying since Friday.

Rev. Yves Normandin said between 100 and 200 persons came to hear the mass at Ste. Yvette church and express their support for his cause.

"Some of the people have promised an all-night vigil outside the church until we achieve victory," he said. "I have an appointment with Archbishop Paul Gregoire (of Montreal) Monday morning at 10 to discuss the situation."

The priest said he intends to continue his occupation for at least a few more days, despite a police order to leave the church which allows no one but the priest's lawyer to enter.

Bailiffs, church wardens and police descended on the church Friday night to enforce a Quebec Superior Court injunction evict Father Normandin and his sympathizers from the church.

At the same time a new priest, Rev. Marcel Bircher arrived to take over the parish.

Father Bircher entered the church Friday night and removed the consecrated host from the tabernacle while about 40 parishioners sympathetic to Father Normandin were praying.

Father Normandin has upheld his position on the Latin mass in the face of orders from Archbishop Gregoire to follow church practice and use the vernacular.

Munro Assures Ethnic Funds

HAMILTON (CP) — John Munro, federal labor minister, said Monday that a shift in emphasis in the government's program on multiculturalism will not result in decreased assistance to established groups.

Mr. Munro said in a speech to an Italian-Canadian association that unnecessary fears surfaced among ethnic groups following the announcement of a federal proposal to place more emphasis on fighting discrimination.

The minister said the program on multiculturalism has been criticized as a government bandout to keep ethnic groups happy while policies on bilingualism and bicultralism were being established.

He said the policy change actually will make more money available to ethnic groups through multicultural programs within such organizations as the CBC, the National Film Board and the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

However, Mr. Munro suggested that less money be allotted to folklore projects within ethnic communities. He said ethnic leaders have told him that money spent on projects such as dance groups might be wasted because the communities are able to find these activities themselves.

"Resources are limited and perhaps would be better spent assisting such things as festivals where the folklore of an ethnic group can be presented to all Canadians."

Individuals Highlighted Regina PC Convention

REGINA (CP) — Ambitious organizational goals and the spotlight away from policy Sunday as about 500 Saskatchewan Conservatives ended their annual convention.

Party leader Dick Collver urged delegates to work toward the targets of erasing party debts, signing up 40,000 members and drawing 5,000 people to the next convention.

Mr. Collver said the targets were chosen to help maintain the momentum of the party, which broke into the legislature last June for the first time in eight years, winning seven of the 61 seats.

The party's membership now stands at more than 10,000, compared with more than 30,000 each for the provincial Liberals and New Democrats.

Delegates voted 402 to 61 against holding a leadership convention during the next 12 months. However, Mr. Collver said Conservatives want another election before the expected 1979 election.

Aircraft Workers Accept Contract

TORONTO (CP) — Striking workers at de Havilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd. voted in favor of a contract settlement Monday, a union spokesman said.

Frank Fairchild, administrative assistant to the Canadian director of the United Auto Workers which represents the 1,700 workers, said the men, who have been on strike since Aug. 27, will begin to return to work today and all workers should be on the job by Wednesday.

Mr. Fairchild said the offer is similar to one de Havilland made Oct. 24. That offer included a three-per-cent increase, plus 28 cents an hour catchup in the first year and about 26 cents an hour in fringe benefits.

Last Sunday, the production workers rejected a company offer because it fell short of the firm's original proposal on the basis of the federal government's selective wage and price controls.

The company had offered a wage, fringe and cost-of-living package estimated at about 39 per cent in the first year of a three-year contract, but then trimmed it to 32 per cent on the basis of what it said was an exemption from the anti-inflation review board that the original offer was too high.

Broadbent Says Anti-inflation Guides Leave Collective Bargaining Dead

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal anti-inflation program leaves collective bargaining as we knew it virtually dead" Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader said Saturday. Speaking on the CTV show Question Period, Mr. Broadbent said the income limits set by the program, coupled with a seeming indifference to settlement parity, has killed collective bargaining.

He said the government, by ignoring the 31-year parity system between Toronto high school and elementary teachers, has closed "an exit, if you like, to maintain some form of collective bargaining. If you could show that you had a relationship in terms of wages and salaries with some other group."

The NDP leader said the anti-inflation program is putting freezes on the wrong things, and instead of controlling wages should begin to control housing, energy and food prices which, he said, take up 45 per cent of the average family's budget.

"We say that a lot of families, as much as three per cent in the last two years, in our economy could have been stopped if we had had a price freeze on our own oil," he said.

"I think that what we need is the fact if we're going to have the kind of wages that we do have, is effective control prices and that's precisely what's not in the legislation," he said.

Mr. Broadbent said the present anti-inflation program will hit hardest at those weakest and will aim "heighten the tension of grievances that certain groups in society in our country feel against others."

Some of these grievances will be fair, he said, because professional workers are not adequately controlled and he advocated "a 10 per cent surtax on their incomes as a certain level."

Women Pay More For Hairdos

TORONTO (CP) — A survey by a group of University of Toronto students shows that women consistently pay more than men for haircut at unisex hair-styling salons.

Of 16 Toronto salons surveyed recently as part of a class project on social injustices, only five charged the same price for a shampoo, cut and blow-dry on men's and women's shoulder length hair. The others asked an extra $1 to $3 for doing women's hair.

The salons charged from $5 to $36.

A Sweep for Bay of Quinte

Bay of Quinte teams made a clean sweep of girls Central Ontario Secondary School Athletic Association AA basketball championships at Napanee, Saturday. Quinte Secondary School captured the junior title with a resounding Centennial 28-12 in the final and Bayside earned the senior crown edging Northumberland, 31-28. Bayside, 41-40.

The first COSSAA championship in nearly 10 years for the girls. They downed Peterborough Collegiate 25-21 in the semi-final before beating CSS in the championship. Mary Ellen Graham topped a balanced Quinte attack with seven points in the semi-final game and Anne Sullivan and Trish Tuttle scored six apiece in the final to lead the Zippers to the title.

Other members of the junior champion team are: Beth Baker, Brenda Fisk, Joan Meagher, Susan Peoples, Lynn Martin, Janice Moore, Joan Thrasher and Pat Hunt. Coaching chores are handled by Rick Locke.

Centennial beat Cordice in the semi's to earn their berth in the championship game.

For Bayside, it was the first Central Ontario basketball championship ever. The Red Devils routed Peterborough's Crestwood High 46-30 in the clashing with Brighton in the final.

Joanne Peltier and Lynn Phoenix were top scorers on the day's action for Bayside squad. Other members of the team are: Mia Filpsen, Lynn Richards, Carrie Richards, Anne Lavigne, Melanie Hopkins, Deb Sashner, Pat Llewellyn and Cathy Harvie. Terry Boyd and Sue Bowman direct the team.

Jim Graham of the Centennial Junior Chargers basketball squad goes up for his only two points of the semi-final round action at the first Centennial Junior Charger invitational tournament held at Centennial on Saturday. Mike Boers and Paul Martin of the Brighton Trojans are powerless to stop Graham on this attempt, but the Trojans were able to hang on for a 43-36 win over the host teams. Nicholson Catholic College defeated the Brighton club in the final game to clinch the championship.

'A' Title to Nicholson

By TOM GAVEY
Sports Staff

The Nicholson Catholic College Senior girls basketball team swept to their third consecutive Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association "A" championship on Saturday. The tournament, held at North Addington Educational Centre, Cloyne, saw the Belleville squad handle its fifth consecutive COSSA Crown, counting junior victories.

The Bay of Quinte champions defeated Dennis O'Connor High school from Whitby by a whopping 81-42 score in the first game, Saturday. Captain Joanne Garvin had a field day, going for 28 points in the contest. Cathy Moorhead had 17 points, while Jennifer Barrett hit for 16.

"They (O'Connor) were inexperienced and we had plenty of good opportunities" said NCC coach Carol Casey.

In the final, Nicholson had tougher competition, as Bancroft took it down to the wire in a tense game. The score was 37-30, with Garvin carrying much of the NCC offence, scoring 16 points. Next was Morrison, with a seven-point total.

"Bancroft was a big team and they used muscle, but the girls came through" observed coach Casey.

For team captain Joanne Garvin, it was her fourth consecutive year on a COSSA winning team, while teammate Rose Coughlin was enjoying her third COSSA celebration.

"I think it was overall play and experience that won it for us" stated Casey.

The Nicks final 1975 record was 39-5, counting both regular season play and the two tournaments the Belleville team participated in.

"I'm thinking about us going Double A, we have a fine midget team at our school (13-21) and we should shoot for better things" Casey added.

One of the benefits the Nicholson squad had was excellent ball handlers in guards Jane Leterski and Jennifer Barrett. Leterski was recovering from an ankle injury, but played extremely well. In the Nicks regular lineup were Diana Polacsek, all of whom played on a regular basis.

The fact that Nicholson had so junior girls entry in Bay of Quinte play may have been an asset, as it gave the three players added experience.

Members of the championship team are, Joanne Garvin, Cathy Moorhead, Jennifer Barrett, Jane Leterski, Frances Fraser, Rose Coughlin, Liz Skerl, Kim Dustin, Cathy Collins, Sherri McElgrey and Maureen Garvin.

"All of the girls contributed to the win," stated coach Casey after the final.

Bantam Squads Bow Out

Belleville teams, although giving a good showing, were unable to get by second round action in the Peterborough Major and Minor Bantam Tournament on Saturday. The Hanmer Hawks Bantams won their opening game over Thorchill by a 4-2 score but dropped the second game to Peterborough by the same score.

Bill Rowe, Kevin Meagher, Clarence Stevens and Mark Crawford each scored a goal to help the Belleville club to the victory in the first game of the day. Crawford netted both Belleville goals in the loss to the Peterborough club. Larry Floyd fired a pair for the winners with assists going to Gary Lewis and Steve Larmer.

The Mcilroy-Maines minor bantams did not fare quite as well as their major counterparts, dropping both of their starts to Thornhill and Peterborough.

In the first game against the Thornhill club, Belleville was unable to score in opposition in the second period as the winners scored all four of their goals.

Robert Soule was the lone Belleville marksman, scoring with only 36 seconds left to play. David Gee came up with a strong performance in goal for the Mcilroy-Maines club. Paul Hewson fired two goals for the winners while assisting going to Steve Mallet and Kurt Pearson.

Belleville lost a heartbreaker to Peterborough by a 5-4 margin, Mcilroy-Maines, after tying the score with less than two minutes remaining in the game, lost out in the sudden death overtime.

Joe Cudmore, Steve Slaughter, Jamie Robertson and John Hickey accounted for the Belleville scoring in the game.

With 2:22 left in the first five minute sudden death overtime period, Peterborough scored his second goal of the game to give Peterborough the win.

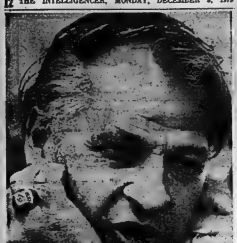
Gordie Elbows His Way to First Suspension



Gordie Howe

TORONTO (CP) — The elbow, and you shouldn't do that to an official."

However, he added, "The guy was making awful calls."

Asseltine left the ice for 15 minutes after an angry Houston crowd booed his ejection of Howe and only completed the game after meeting with Aeros coach Bill Dineen and coach Bobby Kromm of Winnipeg Jets. After the game, the referee said he was quoting.

"I'm finished," he said. "When the man who's supposed to be the craftiest who has ever played the game drives me in the guts, it's obvious I'm not the man for the job."

Hatskin said in a radio interview Sunday night in Winnipeg he would make his ruling on the two suspensions today after reviewing the referee's report and checking a videotape of the incidents.

"One thing I didn't like was Asseltine left the ice and wouldn't return," he said. "He either has to be thrown out of there or he's no good to us."

Gerhamn was the first to be ejected, drawing a game misconduct when he stormed after Asseltine with his stick raised as he protested a first-period tripping call.

Dineen explained later that Gerhamn thought he had been interfered with on the goal. Although it was fast, a teammate with whom he collided.

Grahame had to be wrestled off Howe by Friday and Ted Taylor when he made a second attempt to get at Asseltine.

Howe was protesting a second-period high-sticking call when he blew his top. He first argued the penalty, then bumped Asseltine into the boards.

He said he told Asseltine at one point: "All these people came down just to see you put on a good show."

Later, he added: "Why don't you step out and see yourself on the television? Is replay across at Houston's Summit Arena? It was at that point he elbowed Asseltine.

Regardless of his stature as one of hockey's genuine superstars and one of his league's top box-office attractions, there will be no special treatment for Howe, Hatskin said Sunday night.

"Gordie Howe is a great game, but he blew his line, and we'll have to set him down the same size," said Hatskin. "He'll get his fine and suspension like anybody else."

Hungry Flyers Snap Back

LoPresti Should Have Known It Would Come

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Goalie Pete LoPresti of Minnesota North Stars of Pittsburgh was lucky just to be alive.

"My father told me there'd be nights like this, but I wouldn't believe him," LoPresti said after facing 48 shots in a 4-1 loss to Philadelphia Flyers in their National Hockey League game.

"I'm still alive," said LoPresti, sounding surprised at that. "They seem to have three or four guys around the net all the time."

The elder LoPresti, Sam, could have told his son about surviving under fire. Playing for Chicago Black Hawks, he played in shots in a 3-2 loss to Boston Bruins in a 1941 game.

Reggie Leach scored twice for the Flyers, who were rebounding from Saturday night's 10-goal Chicago Black Hawks' splurge. Gary Dornhoefer, Joe Watson, Bill Barber and Don Saleski had the other Philadelphia goals.

In Sunday's other games, Pittsburgh Penguins dropped Toronto Maple Leafs 6-3, New York Rangers trimmed Washington Capitals 5-2, New York Islanders blanked Buffalo Sabres 3-0, Atlanta Flames stopped Chicago Black Hawks 3-2 and Montreal Canadiens tied Boston Bruins 3-3.

In other games Saturday, Buffalo topped the Islanders 4-3, Boston defeated Toronto 4-3, Montreal crushed Washington 9-1, Minnesota blanked Kansas City Scouts 4-0 and Los Angeles Kings shaded Detroit Red Wings 3-2.

The Flyers scored three times in the first 11 minutes to run their unbeaten home streak to nine games and extend Minnesota's losing streak at the Spectrum to 12 games.

Pittsburgh centre Pierre Larouche scored two goals on breakaways and assisted on two others as the Penguins built a 4-0 lead against the Leafs by the halfway mark in the game. Jean Pronovost also had a pair of goals for Pittsburgh.

"Our defence was just letting them walk in," said Toronto coach Red Kelly. "We couldn't stop them, I thought they were trying to see how many breakaways we could give them."

Washington coach Milt Schmidt blamed referee Ron Wicks for the Capitals' loss at New York, criticizing a holding call against centre Tom Williams.

"I might get fined for this," said Schmidt. "But in my estimation, we were going along fine in the third period until a lousy call against Williams decided the whole thing."

About a minute after Williams' penalty, the Capitals Bill Clement drew a hooking penalty. Before Washington could turned to full strength, goals by Jerry Holland and Gilles Marotte had broken a 2-2 tie.

Clark Gillies scored two goals for the Islanders against the slumping Sabres. Goalie Glenn Resch registered his third shutout, stopping 22 shots, but wouldn't take any of the credit.

"This was like a pitcher getting a no-hitter without striking anybody out," he said. "The other guys did all the work."

Goals by Yvon Lyniak and Curt Bennett and the shutout goaltending of Gerry Desjardins enabled the Flames to hand the Hawks their second loss in a row after six successive ties.

Guy Lafleur's 50-foot slap shot in the third period gave Montreal the tie after goalie Ken Dryden kept the Canadiens in the game by making 34 saves.

Laxton Spoils Americans' Bid

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rochester Americans missed their big chance Sunday night.

After following hot on the heels of Nova Scotia Voyageurs all season the Americans received a victory over Hershey Bears to take over the lead of the American Hockey League's Northern Division standings.

But they ran into Hershey goalie Wayne Laxton who fended off 47 shots to lead the Bears to a 5-3 victory.

The stage for the takeover was set when Nova Scotia dropped a 4-3 decision to Binghamton Reds in an afternoon game at Halifax and a Rochester victory would have moved the Americans into first place, percentage wise, over the Voyageurs.

In other games, Baltimore Clippers downed New Haven Night Hawks 8-2 and Richmond Robins defeated Springfield Indians 3-1.

In Saturday's only scheduled game, the Bears beat the Indians 6-3.

At Rochester, Laxton was super heavy pressure in the third period, stopping a game-tying penalized time and again but he flawlessly handled 15 drives.

Steve Cardwell le the Bears' attack with a pair of goals.

The Americans remain at 1 points, one point behind leaguleading Nova Scotia.

Two quick goals in the third period and strong goal-tending by Ed Staniowski throughout the game led Providence Reds to a 3-2 win over the Voyageurs.

Centre Gene Palazzari scored in the second period and right winger Bill Lesuk in the third.

Ed Johnstone added third-period goal for the Reds.

Pierre Mondou and Sean Shanahan replied for the Voyageurs.

Mike Lampman and Fred Speck scored two goals each as the visiting Clippers rolled over New Haven 8-2.

Ed Westfall and Jack Egers, who also added three assists, scored in the first period to give the Clippers a 3-0 lead. Lampman followed with his two goals before the second period was five minutes old to put the game out of reach.

Rick McCann and Dick Sarrazin scored the Night Hawks' goals.

At Richmond, red-hot goaltender Michel Belhumeur continued to perform his defensive heroics as the Robbins downed the Indians.

Points Finger At Campbell

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Sunday he blames "people like (National Hockey League president) Clarence Campbell and the big-league officials" for violence in hockey.

He made his remarks when questioned about an incident in Vancouver last Wednesday involving Phil Roberto of Detroit Red Wings and Don Lever of Vancouver Canucks.

Roberto was assessed a match penalty for attempting to injure Lever late in the game when the Vancouver player was hit in the throat by a stick.

Campbell suspended Roberto indefinitely the next day and the attorney-general said his department is looking into the affair.

Macdonald said he hopes taxpayers do not have to pay the cost of having policemen at wrestling matches at hockey games, but if such incidents are repeated, "we're going to insist upon that."

Macdonald said club owners have been unwilling to control violence on the ice.

He said league officials are "too interested in protecting the backs of the franchise owners to have proper internal self-discipline."

REJEAN HOULE

SUNDAY

Quebec Nordiques (tightened the race for top spot in the Canadian Division of the World Hockey Association by beating the first-place Jets 3-2 Sunday night right in Winnipeg.

Second-period goals by Rejean Houle, Jean Baxter and Chris Evanchuk enabled the Nordiques to move to within a point of their Manitoba rivals. The two Canadian teams have the best record in the league.

Nordiques Crowd Jets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A pair of big savers by Winnipeg goalie Joe Daley in the first period on Marc Tardif and Real Cloutier had gotten the Jets off on the right foot and a goal by Bill Lesuk gave them a 1-0 lead.

Houle tied the score on the third of three centring passes by Bordeleau. After Quebec goalie Richard Brodeur stopped the Jets Bobby Hull on a breakaway, a shot by Bernier went in off a Winnipeg defenceman to give the Nordiques the lead.

In Sunday's other WHA games, Cincinnati Stingers downed Cleveland Crusaders 3-2, Denver Spurs whipped New England Whalers 5-2.

On Saturday, Cincinnati edged Denver 3-2, Indianapolis shaded Cleveland 3-2, Phoenix Roadrunners beat Houston Aeros 6-5 in overtime and San Diego Mariners topped New England 4-1.

Goals by Dennis Sobchuk, Claude Larose and Bryan Campbell gave the Rangers a 3-0 lead before Gary Jarrett spoiled John Kisely's shutout bid in the third period.

An easy goal by Larry Israelson started the Cowboys on a three-goal first period. Dave Dryden caught Israelson's long slap shot from centre ice in the third minute, then dropped it into his own net.

The win gave the 11th-place Cowboys a five-point edge over fellow Alberta rivals, who occupy fourth place in the Canadian Division.

Don Tannabill added two goals and Ron Chipperfield and Chris Evans once each for Calgary. Bill Laing, John Rogers, Bob McAneelay and Pete Morris scored for Edmonton.

The financially-troubled Spurs had one of their better crowds of the season, 8,500, to see Don Bergeson score two goals himself and assist on a third by Ralph Backstrom.

Francois Rochon and Darryl Maggs were the other Denver scorers. Ron Climie deprived Denver goalie Bob Peters of a shutout with a second-period goal.

WINE MARATHON

FUKUOKA, Japan (AP) — Jerome Drayton, 30, of Toronto, Canada, set a world record for International Marathon on Sunday, finishing with a time of 2:10:8.4. Drayton, who won the event in 1973, broke up a three-man field with Australia's David Chettle in the last 1,500 meters but was the nearly 30 meters over the 26-mile, 385-yard race.

Wolves Extend Streak By Topping Generals

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sudbury Wolves ran their unbeaten streak to 10 games Sunday with a 4-2 victory over the Generals in a fight-filled Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A game before 2,300 spectators at Oshawa.

In other action, Hamilton Fincups defeated Kitchener Rangers 6-4, London Knights downed Ottawa 67's 3-1, Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds dumped St. Catharines Black Hawks 6-4, Windsor Spitfires upset Kingston Canadians 9-8 and Peterborough Petes edged Toronto Marlboros 5-4.

On Saturday, Sudbury and Toronto battled to a 3-3 tie.

At Oshawa Sunday, the Wolves took a 1-0 first-period lead but the Generals came back to tie the game 1-1 entering the third period.

Wes Jarvis fired two goals for Sudbury, John Walker and Rod Schutt added single scores.

Glenn Goldup and Bob Crowder replied for the Generals, outshot 33-26.

Referee Don Goodridge called eight major penalties during the game, five for each team. He also gave Mike Palazzo of Sudbury and Oshawa's Bill Lesmaa game misconducts during the third period. Sudbury's Alex McKendry received a game misconduct penalty.

League games scheduled Tuesday with Oshawa at Peterborough, Toronto at Hamilton and Kitchener at London.

Fincups 6 Rangers 4

Hamilton outscored the Rangers 3-1 in the second period of the game played before 1,197 spectators.

The score was tied 1-1 after the first period and Hamilton led 4-3 after the second.

Rick Selling, Mike Keating, Dale McCourt, Joe Kowal, Archie King and Ted Long scored for the Fincups, fonders in the Emms Division, with an 18-9-5 record.

Red Laurence got two goals for the third-place Rangers. Ray Irwin and Dwight Foster also scored for the visitors.

Hamilton, outshot 40-38, received 16 of 19 penalties. Each team had three fighting majors.

Knights 3 67's 1

Larry Rizzuto scored twice for London but his brother Pat, the team's goaltender, stole most of the glory.

With the Knights leading 3-1 early in the third period, 16-year-old Pat outblocked an 18-shot Ottawa barrage while his club played two men short for more than three minutes.

Steve Stockman scored the other London goal, the only one of the first period. Larry Skinner scored for the '67s in the second period.

In all, Rizzio handled 37 Ottawa shots while Jim Fraser was tested 28 times in the Oshawa net.

The game was played before 1,986 spectators at the Ottawa Civic Centre.

Greyhounds 6 Hawks 2

Centre Mike Kaszycki scored his 36th and 37th goals at the expense of the lead the Sault. Doug Patey, Tim Coulis, Tom Lysiak and Vince Fryia added one each.

Kaszycki also had two assists for 39 points. Lysiak assisted on four of the Greyhound goals.

Mike Christie's scores were Wayne Driscoll and Kevin Osmars.

The game was marred by a second-period fight between Sault defenceman Jeff Hervieux and Hawk forward Tim Stortini. Hervieux and Stortini fought for the penalty box. Stortini received 10-minute sticking after the battle, finally broken up by linesmen and police.

Referee Jim Lever assessed both players majors and misconduct but permitted them to play in the third period.

Spitfires 9 Canadians 8

Guy Lusier's second goal of the period, scored with just 40 seconds to play, gave Windsor the upset victory.

Centre Charlie Skjodt had two goals and four assists for the Spitfires and Ted Bonham also scored twice. Scott Miller, Mike Dwyer and John Goodish added one goal apiece.

The Canadians, who held a 37-32 edge in shots, got two goals from rookie Mike Gillis, Mike Crombeen, Tony McKegney, Ken Linseman, Brad Rhiness, Mike Simonds and Mark Sunar each scored once.

Windsor led 3-2 at the end of the first period and the clubs were tied 6-6 entering the final 20 minutes.

The crowd of 2,961 was the smallest of the season, for a Kingston home game.

Petes 5 Marlboros 4

Bob Schmaur scored with less than a minute remaining in the third period to lift the Petes to their 5-4 win.

Toronto took period leads of 1-0 and 3-2 before Peterborough's third-period rally at three goals.

The other Petes goals went to Ron Massey, Heath Acton and Gary McMonagle.

John Anderson, John Smrke, Gord Farell and Steve Tsujiura scored for the Marlboros.

A crowd of 3,440 watched Toronto outshoot Peterborough 38-32 and take six of the 11 penalties.

Wolves 3 Machamen 3

On Saturday, Sudbury scored two third-period goals at the Gardens to earn a come-from-behind tie with the Dukes.

Wes Jarvis went ahead on goals by Mike McEwan and Rod Murphy, Brian McDavid stole the puck and scored a short-handed goal for the Wolves.

Dave Parrish tied the game and then McEwan scored again at 16:48 of the final period.

Marlie Marcia scored the tying goal for the Marlboros just over a minute earlier.

The Wolves outshot Toronto 39-28.

Sport Brief

WILL JOIN NFC

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Orilia Silver Bombers will join the Northern Football Conference (NFC) and start playing next season, a league meeting decided Saturday. The league dropped to three teams when Bramalea Satellites pulled out of the 1974 season. The other NFC members are Sudbury Spartans, Thunder Bay Tiger Cats Sault Ste. Marie Steelers, of the 1975 league champions. The NFC is expected to expand its two-month schedule to 10 games from eight and again start its play in early July.

U.S. Takes Two Titles

BANGKOK (AP) — Next who has arranged all of the cup year's World Cup golf tourna- tournaments, said three states ment appears headed for the in the U.S. are bidding for the United States, the country tournament. He did not name which headed home today with them.

both the team and individual titles from the 30-nation event.

That will nicely coincide with the 200th anniversary celebrations," tournament director Fred A. Corcoran said after Johnny Miller rallied in the final round Sunday to win the individual title and teamed with Lou Graham for the team championship.

Corcoran, a former caddy

The United States finished at 25-under-par 559 for four rounds over the 6,906-yard, par-72 Mimitame golf course, to strokes ahead of Taiwan. Japan was third at 565, followed by Australia, 566, and Argentina, 567.

Miller shot a final-round 68 for a 13-under-par 275. That gave him a one-stroke victory over Bob Shearer of Australia and co-third-round leaders Ben Arda of the Philippines and Hsieh Min-nan of Taiwan. Shearer finished with a 69 while Arda and Hsieh each shot 72s.

Graham, the U.S. Open winner, finished with a 70 for a 278 total and fifth place.

English Soccer

First Division Race Tightens

LONDON (CP) — The battle for first place in English soccer's First Division became even tighter Saturday with six teams within a point of the top spot and two others close behind.

Queen's Park Rangers took over the lead on goal average by virtue of a scoreless draw at Manchester City while Derby County dropped back after losing 3-1 to Birmingham.

All six of the leading teams were away from home, with at Leeds United emerging unscathed after edging Arsenal 2-1.

Rangers and Derby have 27 points from 18 matches.

Leeds United moved into third place, two points behind Manchester United, which has played one game less.

Close behind are Manchester City with 24 points and Sheffield United with 23.

Derby played without winger Charlie George, for whom they paid £300,000 (about $600,000), only 20 minutes as a substitute. A goal by Charlie George gave Derby the lead after 25 minutes but Kenny Burns and Malcolm Page replied for Birmingham after the interval.

Leeds United moved up on the newly-regained scoring form of Duncan Mackenzie, who struggled through most of the season after being purchased from Nottingham Forest. McKenzie scored both goals against Arsenal.

Manchester United had the benefit in play, but a scoreless draw at Middlesbrough is always a good result.

Liverpool might have done better at Burnley, where the score was also 0-0, but poor finishing let them down against a team struggling to avoid relegation and with five regulars out of action.

West Ham slipped by losing 1- at Norwich, whose only goal came from former West Ham player Ted MacDougall in the 28th minute.

Elsewhere in the First Division, Newcastle maintained its position as the division's highest-scoring team, winning 4-0 at Coventry to bring its total to 37 goals in 20 games.

At Everton's Goodison Park, Everton gave up leads of 1-0 and 3-1 and settled for a 3-3 tie.

Trailing Bolton 2-0 at two goals from John Duncan, giving him five in four days, Tottenham's Alan Gilzean scored a third goal and Martin Peters added the winner in the four-goal thriller.

Leicester ended its third-game win of the year, beating Wolverhampton 2-0. Stoke and Aston Villa tied 1-1.

In the Second Division, first-place Sunderland came unstuck at Sunderland, losing 4-0. Sunderland still holds second-place Bolton by two points.

Celtic and Motherwell remained tied atop the standings in Scotland's Premier League, although Celtic had a better goal average after a 1-0 win over Hearts. Motherwell edged last-place St. Johnstone 3-1.

Gloucester Hangs On

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rockland Nationals are threatening to run away with the Central Junior Hockey League, but Gloucester Rangers won't let them get away

The Nationals now have lost only four of their 32 games and lead others by 34 points in the six-team league. But Gloucester, at 13-10 in 22 games, is riots at staying within shouting distance of the leaders while the other four teams mill around beneath them in the standings.

So it was Sunday when the Nationals scored seven times in the third period to decimate Smiths Falls Bears 12-3. Three of the Rockland goals came in a 71-second span in the third period outburst.

But Gloucester, at the same time, was battering the once-powerful Pembroke Lumber Kings 13-4 with Hugh Rhamn driving in five goals and assisting on three others.

Bench Warmer Dolphins' Ace

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

For a third-string quarterback playing his first National Football League game, Don Strock was a pillar of strength.

"It's not my nature to be nervous," Strock said after passing for two touchdowns and running for one to lead Miami Dolphins to a 31-21 victory Sunday over Buffalo Bills.

"I wasn't scared," said Strock, "I slept like a log last night, but I probably won't sleep tonight."

In Sunday's other games, Baltimore Colts beat New York Giants 21-0, St. Louis Cardinals downed Atlanta Cowboys 30-17, Washington Redskins defeated Atlanta Falcons 20-7, Pittsburgh Steelers topped Cleveland Browns 22-17 Cincinnati Bengals shut out Philadelphia Eagles 31-0, San Diego Chargers upset Kansas City Chiefs 30-20, Minnesota Vikings downed Green Bay Packers 24-3, Los Angeles Rams beat New Orleans Saints 14-7, Houston Oilers defeated San Francisco 49ers 27-13, New York Jets edged New England Patriots 26-25 and Chicago Bears defeated Detroit Lions 25-21.

Tonight, Denver plays at Oakland.

Strock, a six-foot-five, 200-pounder who had warmed Miami's bench since coming out of Virginia Tech as the collegiate passing champion in the United States in 1972, went from No. 3 to No. 1 in a hurry when Bob Griese and Earl Morrall were hobbled by injuries in successive weeks.

Strock hit on 10 consecutive passes and helped the Dolphins to a 31-0 halftime lead on his TD run of five yards and scoring strikes of eight yards and one yard to Howard Twilley.

The Bills charged back in the second half as Joe Ferguson scored twice on a 16-yard run and a 43-yard pass from Joe Theismann, who had hit Bob Chandler with a 3-yard TD pass.

Lydell Mitchell rushed for 128 yards to give himself 1,008 for the season and become the first Baltimore running back ever to hit four figures.

Mitchell scored the only touchdown the Colts needed to make the Giants their seventh consecutive victim with a nine-yard run.

Jim Hart threw three touchdown passes in the St. Louis victory over Dallas that restored the Cardinals to a tie for second in first place in the National Conference East.

Washington seemed headed for overtime when Atlanta's Nick Mike-Mayer kicked a 44-yard field goal with 41 seconds to play, tying the game at 17-17.

But Billy Kilmer, who had thrown three touchdown passes earlier, connected Washington up the field and Mark Moseley booted a 30-yard field goal with five seconds to play.

Pittsburgh, strong by two Cleveland touchdowns within 14 seconds in the first half, rallied behind two Terry Bradshaw touchdown passes — Lynn Swann and two Franco Harris scoring runs.

Ken Anderson returned from a week on the bench with an injury and completed 20 of 35 passes for 23 yards, including two touchdown pass to Isa Williams, in Cincinnati's rout of the Eagles.

The Chargers won their first game of the year behind rookie Richard Young's 134 yards and two touchdowns rushing.

Minnesota's Fran Tarkenton threw two touchdown passes to John Gilliam and another to Chuck Foreman to beat the Packers and move with one TD pass of Johnny Unitas' NFL career record of 290.

Defensive end Jack Youngblood tackled New Orleans quarterback Archie Manning in the end zone for a safety and linebacker Jim Laslavic ran 67 yards for a touchdown with a fumble recovery to lead Los Angeles' victory.

Houston's defense limited San Francisco to five first downs and 91 total yards.

Rushing and Billy Johnson returning a punt 70 yards in the game to seal the 49ers' victory over the Oilers.

Joe Namath picked apart New England's defense, hitting 20 of 32 passes for 268 yards and John Riggins ran for 134 yards and two touchdowns as the Jets snapped an eight-game losing streak.

Roland Harper belted 97 yards for a touchdown with 4:15 to lift the Bears past Detroit.

Vasili Alexeyev

Effort Good for Record

MONTREAL (CP) — Vasili Alexeyev of the Soviet Union made his last lift a memorable one Sunday night at the International competitions 1975 event, regaining a world record taken from him only last year by an East German.

Alexeyev hoisted 367.5 kilos (545.6 pounds) in his second lift in the jerk, bettering the mark of 365.5 kilos (542.6) for super-heavyweight set by 25-year-old Christoph Zosk in an East German competition.

Two of Alexeyev's countrymen also won gold medals at the Montreal event Sunday.

Canadian First In Downhill Race

VAL D'ISARE, France (CP) — Canada is suddenly looking forward with some confidence to an Olympic ski medal after Dave Read's surprising victory Sunday in the World Cup downhill race.

Read, a 30-year-old from Calgary, became the first Canadian ever to win a World Cup event when he mastered a tricky course that took its toll on some of the international favorites while Canada had four men among its top 10.

"Our chances in the downhill for the Olympics now look very good" said Canadian coach Scott Henderson, looking ahead to the 1976 Winter Olympics at Innsbruck, Austria.

He competed at Innsbruck last year and it's a course that is well suited to our racers.

Henderson admitted he was surprised by his team's sudden surge. "All of them kind of surprised me, mainly because I didn't expect we would do this well so early."

It was only the second race of the 1975-76 World Cup season following Friday's opening giant slalom.

Read, 30, a native of Ann Arbor, Mich., in only his second season with the Canadian World Cup team, went off first and got the best of a quarter-preserved 10,900-foot run and finished first with a time of two minutes 4.97 seconds.

Dave Irwin of Thunder Bay, Ont., in his second year, and Jim Hunter of Calgary was sixth in 2:07.11 and Steve Podborski of Toronto placed 10th in 2:07.26. David Murray of Alexandria, B.C., placed 14th in 2:07.86.

Rounding out the top 10 were Herbert Plank of Italy, second in 2:06.89; Bernhard Russi of Switzerland, third in 2:06.92; Werner Grissmann of Austria, fifth 2:06.97; Phillipe Roux of Switzerland, sixth in 2:06.97; Michael Veith of West Germany, seventh in 2:06.84, and Karl Cordes of Austria, eighth in 2:07.05.

"I had a super run," said Read, "I had a hairy moment about 30 seconds from the end. I lost pression on one ski but I was always in control."

The compromise he referred to was a tricky point where the course leaped off a hill into a difficult left-hand bend through some woods. Italian Erwin Stricker was among those who fell on the tricky turn.

Read last year never finished better than eighth in a World Cup downhill.

Gus Makes His Mark

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gus Williams hasn't taken long to make his mark on pro basketball.

The slender rookie, passed over on the first round of the National Basketball Association draft before being grabbed by Golden State in the second round, has given the Warriors a big lift with his speed, hustle and scoring punch.

Williams came up with one of his best efforts Sunday against Seattle SuperSonics, scoring 30 points in the Warriors' come-back 115-108 victory. It was the second win in less than 24 hours over the Sonics.

Williams scored 13 of his points in the second half, including 10 in a seven-minute span in which the Warriors turned an eight-point deficit into an eight-point lead.

Rick Barry topped the Warriors with 32 points, while Fred Brown and Slick Watts had 23 each for Seattle.

In other NBA games Sunday night, Phoenix Suns whipped Chicago Bulls 114-97 and Los Angeles Lakers trimmed Washington Bullets 118-106.

On Saturday, New York Knicks stopped Buffalo Braves 108-98, Boston Celtics defeated Atlanta Hawks 121-104, Houston Rockets downed Detroit Pistons 106-94, Portland Trail Blazers beat Chicago 90-77, Philadelphia 76ers whipped New Orleans City Kings 98-84 and Golden State stopped Seattle 104-96.

In Sunday's American Basketball Association games, Denver Nuggets beat New York Nets 125-119 and Kentucky Colonels defeated Virginia Squires 115-96.

On Saturday, Denver downed Indiana Pacers 126-118 and the Spirits of St. Louis overcame San Antonio Spurs 118-104.

Stracey New Champion

Napoles Loses Title

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Napoles, 35, in the sixth round of a scheduled 15-round fight. The Cuban-born Mexican had held the title for all but six months of the last six years.

Stracey's manager, Terry Lawless, said after the fight at the Plaza Mexico boilering that his contract contained had a guarantee of a return bout for Napoles.

"(If) Napoles wants one he's going to have to earn it and negotiate it just like Stracey did. The fight, the first title defence, will be in London. The boot is on the other foot now."

If Stracey doesn't give Napoles a return bout, another logical challenger would be Clyde Gray of Toronto, the Commonwealth champion in the same weight class.

Stracey's victory Saturday was an easy one, considering he was fighting one of the world's toughest and wiliest champions.

The Briton opened a cut about Napoles' right eye in the second round, worked on it with fast jabs and then finished Napoles off with a series of lefts and rights, leaving him helpless against the ropes with 30 seconds to go in the sixth round.

Stracey was knocked down in the first round and took heavy punishment in the second round.

In another title fight on the card, Alfonso Zamora of Mexico knocked out Socrates Batoto of the Philippines in the second round to retain the World Boxing Association bantamweight championship.

Winner Rates Ashe at Top

STOCKHOLM (AP) - Arthur Ashe of the United States, who failed to win the Masters tournament in Stockholm, is still ranked by most observers as the top tennis star of 1975.

Ilie Nastase of Rumania, who won the Masters on Sunday after a remarkable up-and-down week, said he rates Ashe the year's No 1.

So did Bjorn Borg of Sweden, who disappointed his home fans by losing to Nastase in the final.

"You have to consider results first," Nastase said. "I think Ashe must be No. 1, and I would rate Borg No. 2, and then perhaps Jimmy Connors. I would put myself No 5 or 6."

This is how the year's major titles have been split up:

Ashe: Won Wimbledon and the World Championship Tennis title at Dallas.

Borg: Won the French open in Paris and was runner-up at the WCT event and the Masters.

Connors: Won the Australian title and was runner-up at Wimbledon and Forest Hills.

Nastase himself had not won a major event all the year until the Masters. On the first day of the tournament he was disqualified from a match against Ashe for his behavior on the court. On the final day he really looked like a master reigning among masters.

Nastase joined with Borg and won 6-2, 6-3, 6-1. As in the semi-final against Guillermo Vilas of Argentina the previous day, he

Mirror Says Queen May Soon Abdicate

LONDON (AP) — The newspaper Sunday Mirror says Queen Elizabeth may end her reign at some future time by abdicating in favor of Prince Charles.

Audrey Whiting writes in a two-page article on the Queen that the abdication might come "not this year, not next year, but it is possible that she will consider giving up the throne within the next 10 or 15 years."

"This is the present thinking of those nearest to the Queen — who know the way her mind works," The Sunday Mirror says.

The newspaper says Queen Elizabeth, who succeeded to the throne Feb. 6, 1952, began grooming 27-year-old Prince Charles for the monarchy when he was a boy. It points out she will be 59 on April 21 and that this "is an age when many people, however active they are in their work, begin to turn their thoughts towards retirement and what it entails."

House of Commons Prepares for Coverage

OTTAWA (CP) — The glare of television lights was reflected off the polished wood desks in the House of Commons Saturday afternoon as technicians checked camera positions in what may be a prelude to full-scale TV coverage of day-to-day parliamentary proceedings.

The experiment involving eight lightweight German cameras in positions around the chamber, said Mr. Anderson, a TV producer hired by the government to study the feasibility of televised debates.

Alistair Fraser, clerk of the Commons, emphasized Saturday's experiment was just that and no final decision has been taken.

The government presented a notice last June asking Commons approval in principle of radio and television coverage, but debate on the motion is not expected until early next year.

Currently, cameras are only allowed to film the opening of Parliament in the Senate, although there are occasional televising of Senate committee proceedings has taken place.

Mr. Anderson, under contract to the office of Privy Council President Michael Sharp, said the current plan will allay the concerns of MPs who are worried about the effects of daily television coverage on Commons debate.

The eight cameras, weighing less than 19 pounds each, would be positioned at seven places on the floor of the chamber and at one perch above the visitors' gallery, at the far end of the Commons.

"There's no intrusion into the chamber at all nor would there be any cables seen," Mr. Anderson said.

The camera would tilt, pan and zoom by remote control from a room outside the Commons. The cameras themselves would be located in the corners of the chamber and only the lenses would be visible.

Mr. Anderson said the possibilities are almost limitless for use of film from the Commons and it could not be simply for the use of television networks for the news.

The House of Commons would own and operate the cameras and simply provide a "feed" to the television networks, he said. The videotapes could become an electronic Hansard and be used to assist in the transcription of debates and for archival purposes.

Television monitors could be set up in the press gallery and in MPs' offices, Mr. Anderson said.

"And the educational possibilities are enormous." The Ontario Educational Communications Authority has indicated an interest in using film on short feeds to schools.

Tom Van Dusen, an aide to Mr. Sharp, says the CBC last year estimated total cost for installation of the equipment at about $1 million.

This the same as the annual printing costs for transcription of Commons and committee proceedings. Annual operating costs would be about $700,000, he said.

Even if the Commons approves the government motion, which would establish an all-party committee on the subject, actual start of the broadcasts "could take another 18 months," said Mr. Van Dusen, a former journalist.

Estey Inquiry Made Public

OTTAWA (CP) — The report of the Estey inquiry, which helped prompt Yves Pratte's recent resignation as Air Canada chairman, will be made public today.

Transport Minister Otto Lang is scheduled to table the report in the Commons this afternoon.

The inquiry, headed by Chief Justice Willard Estey of the Supreme Court of Ontario, looked into the airline's financial procedures including an unusual $700,000 payment to Montreal travel agent B. V. McGregor, allegedly for promoting Air Canada to foreign governments.

Mr. Pratte said in his resignation letter last week that the inquiry was unable to dig up anything that was not already known to management and in most cases to government. Corrective action had already been taken on these problems.

There has been speculation the Estey report says there is incompetence but not dishonesty in top Air Canada management.

Mr. Pratte said in his letter that the appointment of the Estey commission "was a clear indication that the government had lost confidence in my stewardship of the airline."

Herrema Gets Hero Welcome in Limerick

LIMERICK, Ireland AP) — Tiede Herrema's adopted hometown gave him a hero's welcome Sunday to make up, in part, for his five weeks as a hostage of Irish guerrillas.

Thousands of persons along a three-mile motorcade cheered as the Dutch businessman was driven to a civic reception in his honor.

Herrema, who returned Saturday after a Bahamas vacation following his release Nov. 7, said he regarded himself during the ordeal as "the victim of unfortunate circumstances."

"My resolution to survive and to keep my hopes high was greatly strengthened by the knowledge that the actions and attitudes of my kidnappers in no way reflecting the feelings of the vast majority of the Irish people," he added.

Rumsfeld Says NATO Can Improve Without Increasing Expenditures

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — U.S. Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said Sunday the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) must improve its defence capability without new expenditures.

"There is no question but that the alliance and the member nations individually should improve their defence capability without new expenses," Rumsfeld said on his arrival here for a two-day NATO defence ministers meeting beginning Tuesday.

Weapons standardization is one way of doing this, but it is a most difficult thing to achieve," he said.

Rumsfeld, replying to reporters' questions, said he did not expect the meeting to take further steps toward East-West detente.

"I (detente) is a broader subject than that being discussed here," he said.

MPs Step Up Work To Break Early

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs started this week whistling away at a heavy load of legislative business in hopes they can leave for Christmas vacation Dec. 19.

They have nine working days to pass four bills the government says are a must before Christmas — including Time-Reader's Digest legislation.

The 19th day remaining is an opposition day Tuesday. Social Credit will choose the subject of that debate.

Also, on Tuesday the Commons will approve $2.8 billion in supplementary estimates pro-

Drapeau Thanks Quebec For Olympic Support

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau repeated Sunday that he was grateful for the provincial government takeover of responsibility for construction of some Olympic facilities.

Speaking on radio station CFCF, Mr. Drapeau said Quebec should "be thanked for the dynamic decisions they took" in deciding to step into construction of the 1976 Summer Games facilities.

"The situation had reached a stage where a body more powerful than the city had to take over. Without that government decision, the Games would have been a failure."

The city has provincial taxes, municipal taxes, school taxes, federal taxes, and has been unable to raise enough money to meet the deficit, he said.

Garneau Urges Quebec Teachers to Talk

MONTREAL (CP) — Education Minister Raymond Garneau and the Quebec Federation of Catholic School Boards said Sunday the province's teachers' union should end their work-to-rule campaign and make a counter-proposal to the government's contract offer.

In a joint statement following a meeting, the minister and the federation's administrative council condemned the teachers' harassment and slow-down campaigns.

However a teacher spokesman said Sunday the government has not yet made public its complete offer and the unions will continue their campaign until it does.

Dog Lovers Protest U. of T. Research

TORONTO (CP) — Sixty-three dogs, named Saucy, had a demonstrators, accompanied by a mongrel dog, paraded near the medical sciences building at the University of Toronto Saturday to protest the use of animals in research.

The dog, named Saucy, had a sign that said "Am I next?" strapped to its back as it walked near the building where 88,731 animals were said to have been used in research last year.

DUVALL — Dale and Bonnie (nee King), R.R. 4, Bancroft, are happy to announce the safe arrival of their daughter, Tracy Lynn, on Wednesday, November 27, 1974 at Belleville General Hospital, weighing 7 lbs. 8 ozs. Another granddaughter for Mrs. Myrtle King, Bancroft. Thanks to Dr. Beattie and special thanks to Dr. Beattie and staff on the 11th level.

In Memoriam

SCOTT — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather who passed away December 8, 1971.
The dearest mother, the kindest friend,
One of the best whom God could lend,
A heart so true, a smile so dear,
Always waiting, always near.
—Love lived by daughter Judy, and son-in-law Gordon.

RIDLEY — In loving memory of a dear father, Harold Ridley who passed away Dec. 8, 1973.
Today recalls your memory,
Of a loved one gone to rest,
Your smile, your face, your voice today,
Remain within our breast.
The flowers we lay upon his grave,
Will soon fade away,
But the love for him who his memory leaves behind,
Will never decay.
—Lovingly remembered by his wife Anna and Thelma, Charles and Marion, Jack and Shirley, Edith and Earl and grandchildren.

STAPLEY — Fond memories of our grandmother, Jessie Stapley who passed away December 11, 1974.
We left an empty chair,
We left a silent room,
But left in our hearts,
We are proud to own.
In Treasure Trove of memories,
Is Your garden at rest,
Where we can visit,
The rose we all love best.
—Sadly missed by grandsons, Mark, David and Jeff.

STAPLEY — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather who passed away one year ago, December 9, 1973.
You gave us a world of memories,
This memory will never grow old,
No tombstone tells of all you were,
No mantled his heart of pure gold.
Jesus needed a rose for heaven's bouquet
So He chose that dear husband of mine,
Jesus took the rose to bloom above,
But left behind memories to remember and love.
—Sadly missed by wife Mary and children.

STAPLEY, Jessie — Treasured memories of a dear mother who passed away December 11, 1974.
Memories are golden, memories are rare,
Keep your heart filled with memories,
We have so many memories,
Of you, Dad, we have left with us,
His memory is our treasure,
And we will keep it safe and sure,
God has his memories of you,
We have him in our hearts,
—Inserted by daughter, son-in-law Jim and wife Myrtle.

GREENFIELD — In memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Grace (Jane) Greenfield who passed away Dec. 9, 1970 at Bancroft Hospital.
Sadly missed and remembered Hon.
—Ever remembered by husband and daughter-in-law Ruby and family, Robert and Dorothy and Robert of Belleville, son Lee and daughter-in-law Ruth and family of Bancroft, brother and sister-in-law Ernest and Ethel, Sr. Terry, Carley and Vickey of Oshawa.
No words can express our sorrow.

SCOTT — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother Effie who passed away Dec. 8, 1971.
The depths of sorrow we cannot tell,
The pain we hide, you know it well,
And when we smile to hide a tear,
Your memory we shall always keep.
—Lovingly remembered by Roy and family.
